"And the ladies, sir! There are three of them, all from New York city, and they keep on saying they are completely overjoyed, sir. Your great sideboard in the dining room is to go to Mrs. Riley-Werkheimer, and the hall seat that the first baron used to throw his armor on when he came in from"—

"Great snakes!" I roared. "They haven't moved it, have they? It will fall to pieces!"

"No, sir. They are piling sconces and candelabra and andirons on it, regardless of what Mr. Poopendyke says. You'd better hurry, sir. Here is your collar and necktie"—

"I don't want 'em. Where the dickens are my trousers?"

His face fell. "Being pressed, sir. God forgive me!"

"Get out another pair, confound you, Britton! What are we coming too?"

He began rummaging in the huge clothespress, all the while regaling me with news from the regions below.

"Mr. Poopendyke has gone up to his room, sir, with his typewriter. The young lady insisted on having it. She squealed with joy at seeing an antique typewriter, and he—he had to run away with it, 'pon my soul he did, sir."

I couldn't help laughing.

"And your golf clubs, Mr. Smart. The young gentleman of the party is perfectly carried away with them. He says they're the real thing, the genuine sixteenth century article. They are a bit rusted, you'll remember. I left him out in the courtyard trying your brassie and midiron, sir, endeavoring to loft potatoes over the south wall. I succeeded in hiding the balls, sir. Just as I started upstairs I heard one of the new window panes in the banquet hall smash, sir, so I take it he must have sliced his drive a bit."

"Who let these people in?" I demanded in smothered tones from the depths of a sweater I was getting into in order to gain time by omitting a collar.

"They came in with the plumbers, sir, at half past 8. Old man Schmick tried to keep him out, but they said they didn't understand German and walked right by, leaving their donkeys in the roadway outside."

"Couldn't Rudolph and Max stop them?" I cried as my head emerged.

"They were still in bed, sir. I think they're at breakfast now."

"Good Lord!" I groaned, looking at my watch. "Nine thirty! What sort of a rest cure am I conducting here?"

We hurried downstairs so fast that I lost one of my bedroom slippers. It went clattering on ahead of us, making a shameful racket on the bare stones, but Britton caught it up in time to save it from the clutches of the curio vandals.

Two gentlemen wearing fedoras were standing in the middle of the great hall discussing the merits of a dingy old spinet that had been carried out of the music room by two lusty porters from the hotel.

As I came up I heard one of the strangers say to the other:

"Well, if you don't want it I'll take it. My wife says it can be made into a writing desk with a little"—

"I beg your pardon, gentlemen," said I, confronting them. "Will you be good enough to explain this intrusion?"

They stared at me as if I were a servant asking for higher wages. The speaker, a man with a bristly mustache and a red necktie, drew himself up haughtily.

"Who are you?" he demanded, fixing me with a glare.

THE APRIL WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION.

In its April issue the Woman's Home Companion continues its movement for better motion picture films throughout the United States. Lists of films which the editors are personally examining, and which they recommend, are published, and practical suggestions are given to women readers which will enable them to co-operate and raise the standard of moving pictures in their respective communities.

In the same number Anna Steese Richardson begins a new series entitled, "Mrs. Larry's Adventures in Thrift," in which practical demonstration is given of the advantage to housekeepers of the Housewives' League, which gives women practical help on buying for their households.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Alma Gluck, the famous soprano in the Metropolitan Opera Company, of New York city, writes on "Sincerity in Singing." Anne Morgan, daughter of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, contributes a "Talk to American Girls" entitled, "The Girl and Her Future." Charles E. Jefferson, pastor of the Broadway Tabernacle, in New York city, writes an Easter sermon. Albert Lee begins a new series entitled, "Made-in-America Vacations." These articles are to describe for readers appropriate trips to take in the United States, the idea being that, with conditions in Europe as they are, American travel will be greatly increased this summer.

Fiction is contributed by Alice Brown, Mary Heaton Vorse, Sophie Kerr Underwood, Mabel Dill and Mary Hastings Bradley.

The regular Fashion, Cooking, Young People's and Housekeeping departments are lively with practical suggestions and entertaining features.

PINK POPLIN.

There is an abundance of pretty styles for children this spring and one of the most attractive is the model shown above which may be seen in many variations. In this instance the frock is developed in pink poplin and trimmed with white crochet buttons. It is made with a little coatee worn over a pleated skirt. The pockets of the coat which are the extensions on the sides are trimmed with pendant crochet balls. A narrow belt emerges from beneath the side pockets at front and back and is closed with a buckle covered with the material.

CONSUL FACES TRIAL.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"It was a jolly evening, wasn't it?"

"It certainly was. We are in a mighty pleasant group of people," assented Dick, as they were returning home from a card party at Dr. Ellson's through the dark streets.

"Wait a minute, Dick; I've lost my rubber." Dick was preceding her over the muddy crossing. He came back and used his pocket flashlight to locate the missing article.

"Why in the world don't they put in lights? It's barbarous to go about in the dark this way," grumbled Nell.

"I believe the council voted lights at the last meeting; we'll get them in a year or so," laughed Dick. "There's some speed here."

"How do you like Mrs. Ellson?" he asked as they prepared for bed.

"Not as well as the doctor; he is a treasure in a place like this."

"Yes," answered Dick, "he was the life of the crowd. I tried to talk to Mrs. Ellson, but soon gave it up. A person has to work his passage if he knows her. I wondered if she was more friendly with the women."

"No, she is not popular with them. They say she is very jealous of the doctor." Nell was watching the effect of her remarks on Dick, as she looked in the glass.

"Now, Nell, none of that. You are qualifying as a member of village society early. For goodness sake don't gossip. I can stand anything but gossip and nagging. I was brought up on nagging. That gets on my nerves. I wasn't brought up on gossip, so I can't stand that."

"How logical you are," laughed Nell. "How is one to get along with you if you can't endure what you are used to or what is new in your experience. Kindly give me your definition of gossip; it may serve as a lamp to my feet. Is any news about our neighbors gossip?"

"Well, I'd hardly go so far as to say that," he demurred, "but any catty remarks like the one you were guilty of come under that head. Anything that would promote a friendly interest and cordial relations is not gossip."

"So anything disagreeable is not to be repeated to you even if its true?" asked Nell, with an arch look. "I see my conversation is to be cut down by this censorship. For instance, I suppose it would be out of order to remark that Miss Rudolph's dress was cut too low for an informal gathering."

"I am glad your own good judgment tells you that that remark could not pass the friendly test. You haven't liked her from the first, have you? It's too bad; you are missing a lot, for she's a pleasant girl."

Nell did not reply; she was rapidly rolling her hair into curlers.

"I wish you'd invite her here to supper and to get acquainted. You know what it is to be a stranger in the place and you have had your home; she has had only a boarding house room."

"When would you like her to come?" asked Nell, still watching him in the glass.

"Any time it's convenient. I want you to be friendly. She feels that you don't like her."

"Did she say so?" Nell wheeled around and faced him.

"Why, yes!" admitted Dick.

"How did you happen to be discussing me with the stenographer?" asked Nell.

"We weren't discussing you. She said she didn't believe you liked her and I told her she was mistaken. That's why I wanted you to invite her."

"Ask her tomorrow," said Nell briefly.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

Mother McGrew and Her Family.

Said Mother McGrew, one hot day in July:
"There's a circus I hear in a field right near by.
You children would all like to see it, I know.
So if you are good we perhaps may all go."

Of course they were perfectly wild with delight,
And behaved just as well as they could until night.
So right after supper the whole family went
With Mother McGrew to the big circus tent.

This was their first circus, so you'll understand
The joy that they felt when they heard the brass band;
And each animal's eyes almost popped from his head

And the trapeze performers just made them turn weak,
And everything moved very nicely along
Till the Bumble-Bee started things going all wrong.

The trouble was this: By the side of the Bee
I'm sorry to say the Bee's temper was bad,
And the sight of the squirming boy made him mad.

So he bumbled, "Don't crowd," but his voice was so small
It's no wonder the boy didn't hear him at all.
Then all of a sudden this angry young Bee
With all of his might stung the boy on the knee.

The yell of the boy was so brim full of woe
That quicker than wink it broke up the whole show.
Then Mother McGrew seized that bad Bumble-Bee.
"You'll go home this minute, and stay there," said she.

"You'll have to be punished severely, that's plain,
So you never can go to a circus again."
And from that day to this, so far as I know,

Household Hints.

USE POTATOES

Fried Cakes—One cup of sugar, two eggs, six tablespoonfuls of melted butter or shortening, one cup of milk, one and one-half cups of mashed potatoes, one-quarter teaspoon of salt, nutmeg, two and one-half teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Flour enough to roll.

Potato Dumplings—Cream butter size of an egg. Add two eggs, one cup of stale bread, two cups of cold mashed potatoes, season with salt and pepper; mold into small balls, drop in boiling water well salted and serve with meat or milk gravy.

Row Potato Pancakes—Pare and grate six large potatoes, add two well beaten eggs, two cups of milk, pepper and salt, one tablespoon of sugar, one cup of sifted flour, one teaspoon of baking powder. Drop batter on well greased griddle. Serve hot with butter. Sweet potatoes may be used.

Boiled Potato Pancakes—Boil six medium potatoes in salt water, drain and mash them, when cool add two eggs well beaten, two cups of milk, one-half cup of flour, two teaspoons of baking powder. Fry brown. Serve hot.

THE TABLE

Pineapple in Baskets—Make little baskets by sticking together five macaroons—one for the botto mand four for the sides. Boil sugar with a little water until it hardens when dropped in cold water; use this to stick macaroons together. Just before serving, fill baskets with mixture of chopped pineapple and whipped cream generously sweetened and thoroughly chilled.

Farmers' Gems—One cup white sugar, one cup sour cream, one teaspoon soda, enough flour as for cookies. Roll thin, cut and bake quickly. This is inexpensive, but dainty.

Emergency Biscuit—Two cups flour, four teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon salt, three tablespoons (level) lard, three-fourths cup milk or water. Mix and sift dry ingredients. Cut in the shortening, add liquid slowly, have thoroughly mixed, but stir as little as possible. Drop by tablespoonful on baking sheet. Bake in hot oven twelve or fifteen minutes.

Tomato Soup With Milk—One can tomatoes heated; add one teaspoon baking soda and stir well; when done foaming, immediately add one quart hot sweet milk and, as soon as it boils, add salt and pepper to taste, with a bit of butter and a few rolled crackers. If desired, slice in a small onion.

Lemon Pudding—Grate one lemon, add one egg, 1½ cups sugar, one tablespoon flour, one pint water and small lump butter. Mix all together in baking dish. Add one cup flour, one teaspoon butter or lard, one teaspoon baking powder, enough water to make soft dough; roll an inch thick and lay on top after pricking well with fork. Bake soon and eat warm.

WORTH KNOWING

Home-Made Dust Rags—Ten cents' worth of paraffin oil, one teacup gasoline; mix and saturate cheesecloth.

To put an even hem in any garment, especially if the garment is gored, when one has no dress form—use an ironing board. Just place dress or skirt on board (as though you were going to iron it) and measure with tape measure. This method prevents any unevenness in the length of skirt and proves to be a very rapid and accurate method of putting in hems.

To Houseclean Bedroom—Remove everything from bedroom. Saturate walls and ceiling with gasoline; leave windows open and it will soon evaporate. Take a bar of German mottled soap; with a knife scrape a little at a time, mix it like putty, fill any spaces between mopboard and floor, all cracks or nail holes. Now paint woodwork, cover walls at least an inch all around doors and windows, also above mopboards. Now paper. Put five cents' worth of carbolic acid in the paste (or have paperhanger do it). Paint floor (have quite a little turpentine in paint). While paint is drying, enamel bed and clean springs thoroughly with gasoline. Once a week, if the spring are well brushed with gasoline, you will never see a bedbug. Have a ten-cent paint brush and a tomato can for gasoline. To fumigate the room first, a sulphur candle may be burned. Close the room up tight while sulphur is burning.

FIND MANY MEN WHO WON'T WORK

One of the Chief Problems of the Commission for Relief of Unemployed.

TO SEEK LEGISLATION

Committee Named to Consider Means by which Men Will be Compelled to Work and Their Earnings Used for Support of Dependent Ones.

As one result of the work for the relief of unemployment this winter, looking toward permanent betterment, a committee has been formed to originate and, if possible, obtain legislation, which will do much to relieve situations of this kind in the future.

One of the chief problems which the Commission for the Relief of the Unemployed has had to solve has been the man who has been unwilling to work steadily, even though employment were offered nim. In many cases these men have dependent families, which have to be supported by the city or by private charity because of his neglect of duty.

Under present conditions, even though such a man can be confined in jail, his family is still without means of support. It is well known, however, that it is exceedingly difficult to get anyone to make a complaint in such a case.

With this in mind at the last meeting of the Commission for the Relief of the Unemployed, the following committee was asked to consider means by which such a man could be made to work and his earnings devoted to the maintenance of his family. Probably by the establishing of a county workhouse.

The committee — Richard M. Boardman, chairman; Judge William G. DeMeza, Henry L. DeForest, Joseph D. Loizeaux, William H. Lunger, Samuel T. Carter, Jr., and A. M. Harris—will meet this week at the call of the chairman and will endeavor to interest other communities in this movement, so that some proposal may be put before the next session of the State Legislature.

As the funds covering the work for March were exhausted about the 15th of the month, the Commission for the Relief of the Unemployed ceased its operations on that date instead of March 31, which was the time originally set.

Contributions not previously acknowledged were received by the Commission as follows: F. J. Hubbard, "L. V. H.," Cedarcroft Skating & Tennis Co., H. C. Munger, "A Friend," John V. Beckman, "Cash," "M. C. E.," the Monday Afternoon Club, Golden Rule Circle, King's Daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Weserman, Samuel Huntington, Miss Florence Huntington; total subscribers, 122; total amount $3,290.19.

SIGNOR NUTINI TO GIVE PLEASING LENTEN RECITAL

Violin solo, "Fantaisie Appassionata," Vieuxtemps, Signor Nutini; soprano solo, "Lieti Signor—My Noble Knights," Meyerbeer, Miss Holden; violin solo, Meditation from "Thais," Massenet; "La Campanella—the Little Bell," Paganini, Signor Nutini; piano solo, Sonata op. 27 No. 2, Moonlight, Beethoven, Signor Nutini; soprano solo "I Hear You Calling Me," Charles Marshall; "Gin a Body Meet a Body," Helen Hopekirk, Miss Holden; piano solo, Fire Music from "Die Walkurie," Wagner-Brassin; Grande Andante Finale from "Lucia," Donizetti-Thalberg, Signor Nutini.

HORSES BREAK FENCE.

Considerable excitement was caused on Somerset street yesterday about 1:30 o'clock, when a pair of horses, attached to a heavy stone wagon, ran wildly for several minutes before the driver could gain control of them. The animals dashed up on the sidewalk and smashed the fence on the lot adjoining the grocery store of George Kirch. There were a number of small school children in the street at the time, who escaped injury. The damage to the fence was slight.

Announcement.

We will make you a suit to measure—over 100 styles of cloth on hand to select from—$25 to $30; $5 down and one dollar per week will pay the balance; fit guaranteed. Adelberg's, 129 E. Front St.—Adv. 3 24 2

MRS. BREESE RETURNS TO "ANTI" LEADERSHIP

Former Plainfield Woman Resumes Presidency of State Association.

Mrs. E. Yarde Breese, who was Miss Georgiana Smith, of this city, and who was former president of the New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, has consented to resume that office until the annual election of officers in May, on account of the continued illness of the president, Mrs. Alexaner Jamieson, who will not be able to do active work for some time.

At the meeting of the executive board in Newton, yesterday, Miss Clara Vezin, of Elizabeth, was appointed campaign manager of New Jersey. Miss Anne McIlvaine, State vice-president, presided, and representatives were present from several branches of the association.

The nominating committee for the annual meeting was elected as follows: Mrs. Green, of Elizabeth, chairman; Mrs. Woodbury, of Orange; Mrs. John Constable Moore, of Plainfield; Mrs. Robert K. Bowman, of Trenton, and Mrs. H. M. D'Arcy, of Newark.

Mrs. George B. Yard and Miss McIlvaine attended a meeting of the national campaign committee to be held today at the home of the national president, Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge, of New York city.

FAVORS SUPERVISION BY EDUCATION BOARD

Another Solution to the Newsboys' License Ordinance in Plainfield.

Exponents of "Child Welfare" in this city have renewed their agitation for a "Newsboys' badge ordinance," and are making strenuous efforts to have Mayor Leighton Calkins take the matter up. In an interview with a Plainfield Daily Press reporter today, the Mayor said:

"I am not altogether opposed to this proposition and for several weeks I have been making a careful investigation of the conditions existing in other towns. I have secured copies of newsboys' license ordinance in use in Elizabeth and Newark and it is not improbable that something suitable to Plainfield's needs may be gleaned from these.

"Another more plausible plan has been brought to my attention, however, and that is the placing of the matter in the hands of the Board of Education. By this method the educational authorities assume control of the juvenile street merchants and give and refuse the proper credentials for newspaper selling as they see fit. This solution is one that will bear investigation and in my mind is the most suitable one."

Those at the helm of the movement do not propose to fix a license for the newsboys, but to merely maintain a strict supervision over those who sell papers on the city streets. Mayor Calkins is decidedly against enacting a fee in the form of a license from the street urchins. He is thoroughly in accord with the idea of organizing the newsboys, however, and checking up the ones who are allowed to sell after school hours.

One plan suggested has been to form an organization not unlike those prevailing in the Newsboys Home, of New York city. The boys in this case would select their own officers and be governed by juvenile legislation. They would be provided with membership badges which they would have to wear while engaged in selling papers. These badges would not be given out to the youthful merchant until he has received the proper credentials from the educational or municipal authorities. Each badge would bear the name of the owner and a small penalty would be inflicted for transferring the badge. The only fee levied would be one of less than twenty-five cents to cover the cost of purchasing the metal badges.

COUNTY TAX BOARDS SPARED.

State Senator White, with his vote, was the only thing that prevented the abolition of the county tax boards in the Legislature yesterday afternoon. Favorable action would have thrown forty-four Democrats out of office, and the Democratic members of the Senate voted solidly against this move.

DR. SHIPMAN TO PREACH.

Rev. Dr. Herbert Shipman will preach the sermon at the :45 p. m. service at the Church of the Holy Cross, Washington and Mercer avenues, tomorrow night, March 25. Everyone is cordially invited.

STONEYARD SITE MAY BE CHANGED

Chairman Francis J. Blatz, of Councilmanic Street Committee, Investigating.

STREET REPAIR WORK

Reconstruction of Thoroughfares After Winter Rains Started This Morning—Considerable "Filling-in" Will Be Done This Year.

Work of repairing parts of North avenue, between Park and Watchung avenues, was started by the city street department this morning, a preparation of tar and cracked stone being used to fill in the many holes along that portion of the thoroughfare. Chairman Francis J. Blatz, of the Councilmanic street committee, in an interview with a Daily Press reporter this morning, said that considerable work is under consideration at the present time, and the advent of favorable weather has led the street department to get the reconstruction work under way. A number of the city's main thoroughfares have become worn down during the winter months, and in some places large holes have been washed in the macadam.

The rough condition of the roadbed is particularly noticeable along North avenue, and for this reason the department has deemed it advisable to begin the work at this point. The automobile and wagon traffic to and from the westbound Central Railroad Station along this street is heavy during the winter months, and the thoroughfare at the present time is in a deplorable condition. By nightfall, however, the street department expects to have the holes filled in, and, after a little wearing down, it will probably be even better than before the winter rains and heavy traffic spoiled it.

Queried concerning the progress being made on the investigation inspired by the petition of property owners living in the vicinity of West Third street and Plainfield avenue regarding the existence of a stone storage yard in that section, Chairman Blatz said that his committee was looking for another storage site at the present time.

"It is absolutely necessary that the city have a yard of this kind for storage purposes," said Mr. Blatz; "but we do not want to keep it in a place that will be detrimental to property development if another site can be secured. At the present time the street department has loads of cracked stone and flagging delivered to the yard at Plainfield avenue and Third street to remain there until called for. Inasmuch as these materials are not purchased until they are needed, it stands to reason that no great surplus is kept in the yard, and they are moved away as soon as they are needed. We have several other yards under consideration at the present time, and it may be possible to locate the storage space in some other part of the city."

The site in question is city property, having been acquired by the municipality through the sale of a tax title a number of years ago. It has long been a source for agitation on the part of property owners in the West End, but up to this time the street department has not inquired into the merits of the protests. Mr. Blatz, however, is conducting a thorough investigation, and if any adequate solution presents itself he will bring it to the attention of the Common Council immediately.

PAID RESPECTS AT CHRISTIAN'S BIER

Pastor Broek Lauds Spiritual Life of George L. Van Emburgh.

MANY FRIENDS ATTEND

Dr. E. P. Johnson and Rev. Isaac Brokaw Assist in Impressive Obsequies—Burial at Mt. Pleasant Cemetery, Newark.

Attended by a large gathering of relatives, friends and former business associates, the funeral of George L. VanEmburgh, who died at his home on East Second street, Sunday, was held in Trinity Reformed church yesterday afternoon. Rev. John Y. Broek, the pastor, was the officiating clergyman and he was assisted by Dr. E. P. Johnson, of the Theological Seminary, New Brunswick, and Rev. Isaac Brokaw, of Somerville, who had been an intimate friend for many years. During the services Arthur L. Titsworth presided at the organ and rendered two of Mr. VanEmburgh's favorite selections, "Lead Kindly Light" and "When the Mists have Rolled Away." Another favorite hymn of Mr. VanEmburgh's, "The Christian's Good Night," was rendered as a solo by Miss Etta Raybert.

The deceased was a lover of Bible passages, but none were more dear to him that the fourteenth chapter of John, and from this Mr. Broek selected his text for the eulogy he delivered, "Let not your heart be troubled. In my Father's house are many mansios, I go to prepare a place for you." With this as his theme, the clergyman pointed out that every Christian has two homes, one on earth and the other in Heaven. In Mr. VanEmburgh's last days, he said, he constantly longed to be in his eternal home and his final words to his pastor were, "In my Father's house are many mansions."

"Our beloved friend has gone to his final home," said Mr. Broek, "but his going has brought upon the church he loved an irreparable loss. His presence at the weekly prayer meetings was always an inspiration to others, and the prayers he offered were inspired from the heart and uplifting to those privileged to hear him. Mr. VanEmburgh was one of the founders of the church, was its first elder and for thirty-five years the congregation has profited by his Christian zeal."

Mr. Broek was followed by Dr. Johnson, who had been an intimate friend and co-worker with Mr. VanEmburgh for many years. He spoke tenderly of the long friendship that had existed between them and by reason of it he knew there are sincere Christians. He also knew through his acquaintance with Mr. VanEmburgh that there are church workers devoted to their work and delighting in their labors. His works follow the church and everyone who had known the Christian was the better and nobler for that knowledge."

The magnificent array of floral tributes which came from friends and neighbors as a last token of esteem, was supplemented by set pieces from the Consistory of Trinity Reformed church, the church Bible school of which he had been teacher for many years; Unity Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and Plainfield Lodge of Elks, Mr. VanEmburgh's son, Harry L. VanEmburgh, being a member of the last named organization. At the conclusion of the service the body was taken to the VanEmburgh home on East Second street where the casket was kept open last night for the benefit of those who could not attend the funeral. Many accepted the opportunity to view the familiar features for the last time.

Burial was made this morning in Mt. Pleasant cemetery, Newark, the pall bearers being the following officials and co-workers in Trinity Reformed church: Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., Frederick E. Smith, Edgar F. Shepard, H. E. Gale, William R. Kriney and Frederick Cutter.

CONFUSION OVER SURVEY OF CITY

Many Have a Wrong Idea of Plans to Investigate City Departments.

MAYOR'S STATEMENTS

Taxpayers Should Attend Meeting in Plainfield High School Auditorium Tomorrow Night—Well Known Speakers to Outline the Work.

Officers of the Plainfield Taxpayers' Protective Association have made arrangements to take care of a capacity audience in the Plainfield High School Auditorium tomorrow night, when the proposed city survey will be discussed. An expert from the Municipal Bureau of Research; Archibald Cox, of the local Board of Education; Mayor Austin Scott, of New Brunswick; John Heney, chairman of the Councilmanic finance committee, of Montclair, and Mayor Leighton Calkins will be speakers. Montclair and New Brunswick have both been subjected to partial surveys, and the representatives from these two towns will tell something about the work done at those places. Mayor Calkins has received many inquiries concerning the nature of the survey, and in an interview with a reporter this morning he said:

"I am being asked by many people whether I approve of the survey, for which the Taxpayers' Protective Association is inviting interested citizens to contribute; and also whether this is the survey which the Council approved early in the year, or whether it is an independent undertaking and likely to conflict with my plans.

"There must not be any confusion of thought on the subject. The Taxpayers' Protective Association was organized for the express purpose of facilitating the survey which I recommended on January 1. They waited until the Council had approved the recommendation; then they wrote me and offered to undertake to finance it, so that it would not cost the city government a cent, and I thereupon sent a special message to the Council on March 8, and the Council accepted the offer of the association and unanimously voted to place all departments at the disposition of the experts to be employed.

"I cannot State too strongly that the Taxpayer's Association is working in complete harmony with Council and Mayor. They propose to make a present to the city of an expert examination into our administrative organization. These experts are not coming in here to dig up and expose anything rotten. There isn't anything rotten to expose. Probably Plainfield needs a survey less than any other city in the State, just as it probably needs a city manager less than most places. But that is no argument against a survey, if any advantage whatever my accrue from it, and if it isn't going to cost the city anything—except indirectly to the extent that individual citizens may voluntarily contribute. The sole purpose of the survey is that we may find out to what extent we are not organized for efficiency; to what extent we have been drifting along with old-fashioned methods. We shall have an analysis made of our administrative machinery, so as to set up the facts where we can look them squarely in the face, and then study them with reference to the experience of other cities. In this way we shall have presented for our use valuable suggestions based upon accepted standards of successful business, public and private."

MRS. LOIS SPERRY NINETY-FOUR TODAY

Mrs. Lois M. Sperry, who is one of the oldest and, at the same time, among the spryest of North Plainfield's residents, is today celebrating her 94th birthday anniversary at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Edmund P. Stevens, of Grandview avenue. While no formal observance is being made with the exception of a family gathering this evening, Mrs. Sperry has already been the recipient of scores of bouquets, postal cards and congratulatory messages from relatives and friends. Being in the absolute full possession of all her faculties, she is able to enjoy the remembrances, and shows keen appreciation for everyone's thoughtfulness.

At the family dinner tonight the only visiting relatives will be Mrs. Stevens' son-in-law and daughter, Rev. and Mrs. J. S. Burton, of Suffern, N. Y., together with their family. Today is also Mr. Burton's birthday, making the anniversary of double significance.

Mrs. Sperry was born at Annsville, Oneida county, N. Y., March 24, 1821. She is the only surviving member of a family of thirteen children. Her husband has been dead many years, and Mrs. Stevens is her only daughter, four other children having died in infancy. She began teaching school at Annsville, when only fifteen years old, and, after her marriage, resided in Oneida county. She has lived in North Plainfield with Mrs. Stevens for the past twenty-five years.

Mrs. Sperry is a member of Grace M. E. church, and whenever the weather is pleasant, walks to the service. She is thoroughly conversant with up-to-date topics, and a few minutes' conversation with her is a decided treat. She is known to young and old in her neighborhood, and juveniles as well as adults were among those who today wished her "many happy returns."

AIR RAID ON HOBOKEN

Submarine Station Near Antwerp Reported to Have Been Badly Damaged by British Aviators—Battle for Passes.

London, March 24—Battleships of the French and British fleet renewed their attacks on the Dardanelles forts at dawn today, according to a despatch from Mitylene, transmitted from Athens today. It stated that nine of the largest vessels of the fleet entered the straits and began pouring a rain of shells upon the repaired Turkish fortifications.

A successful air raid was made this morning on the German submarine building at Hoboken, just outside of Antwerp, according to an announcement made by the Admiralty this afternoon. Five machines of the aerial squadron with headquarters at Dunkirk, started early for the shipyards, in which the Germans have been constructing submarines since last October. Two of them reached their objective point, and dropped four bombs each, which did considerable damage, both to the works and to two submarines which were nearly completed. The building sheds were set on fire.

Five submarines were observed on the slips. One aviator was obliged to descend on account of engine trouble, but managed to reach Dutch territory, where he will be interned. All of the aviators forming the attacking air fleet were subjected to a heavy gunfire.

The Russian army which entered Przemysl when it surrendered on Monday found only 25,000 troops there, including the military laborers, according to a despatch from Budapest, which quotes the newspaper Hirlap.

"One division of the Belgian army advanced yesterday on the right bank of the Yser. Another captured a German trench on the left bank. At Hartmannsweiler Kopf, we captured, after the first line of trenches as recorded in the preceding communique, a second line on a front of three companies. Our troops are fortifying themselves beyond this second line and at a short distance from the summit of the height. We took some prisoners, among whom there were several officers."

"Western theatre—In Champagne only artillery duels took place yesterday. In the Priestwald (La Prentre Forest) northwest of a port at Mousson the enemy was repulsed while trying to win back ground gained by the Germans. New attacks by the enemy northeast of Badonviller and at Reichasker Kopf broke down under the German artillery fire. Fighting is still going on at Hartsmanmweiler Kopf.

"Eastern theatre—German troops pursuing the retreating Russians to the northward of Memel captured 500 Russians near Polanzen. They also took three guns, three machine guns, a number of cattle and other goods stolen by the Russians.

"The German army expresses its cordial thanks to the gallant garrison at Przemysl, which after four months' defense full of sacrifices, could be overpowered only by hunger."

Work on the construction of the borough's collecting sewage system was commenced at 7 o'clock this morning, when the steam ditch digger commenced operations on Dunellen avenue between Washington and Lincoln avenues.

Three-quarters of an hour after work had started 30 feet of the 70 feet of trench that had been excavated caved in burying an Italian laborer up to his neck. It took fifteen minutes to dig him out.

At the time the cavein started, Borough Engineer L. T. Churchill, Contractor H. K. Corbin, Paul Reusch and Frank Snyder happened to be standing along the bank of the 30 feet of trench affected. All of the party except Mr. Reusch stepped back in time. Before Mr. Reusch seemed to realize what was happening he slid in with the descending dirt to the bottom of the trench. He got out nearly as quickly as he had dropped in. He escaped with a couple of scratches.

RECEPTION TO BISHOP

Fifty-eighth Annual Session Opened Today With a Large Attendance of Ministers and Laymen—Anniversary Services to Be a Feature.

Local clergymen were present at the opening session of the fifty-eighth annual gathering of the Newark Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, in St. Luke's church, Newark, this morning, Bishop Theodore S. Henderson, of Chattanooga, Tenn., presiding. The convention was opened at 10 o'clock with the sacrament of the Lord's Supper and a memorial service was conducted at 11:30. The morning session closed with the presentation of the work of Freedman's Aid Society, by Rev. P. J. Maveety, corresponding secretary of the society. Those present from this city and the borough included Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, District Superintendent F. J. Hubach, Rev. C. C. Cain, Rev. Dr. D. B. Randolph and Dr. H. K. Carroll. The Newark Conference has jurisdiction over all of New Jersey north of the Raritan River, from Ferth Amboy to Lambertville, and also over adjoining parts of New York and Pennsylvania.

One of the leading questions to come before the Conference is the advisability of increasing the pensions for retired clergymen. Many of the pastors who are members of the Conference have expressed the opinion that the present pension of $7 a year for each year of service and widows' pensions of half that rate are inadequate. It is proposed to place the minimum pension at $10 a year for each year of service and $5 annually for the clergymen's widows. If the proposed increase is adopted, a clergyman who has served the Conference for twenty years will be entitled to a pension of $200 a year. It is proposed to limit the benefit for widows at $5 a year.

This afternoon's session opened at 2 o'clock and was led by Bishop Henderson. The anniversary of the Women's Home Missionary Society was celebrated at 3 o'clock, when Bishop Henderson delivered an address. Tonight the congregation of the Conference church will tender the bishop a reception. A feature of the afternoon's session was a "Conversation on the Work of God," led by Bishop Henderson.

In the Newark district there will be few changes in city appointments, but most of the changes will be in smaller towns and rural fields. Among the expected changes is the transfer of Rev. Charles C. Cain, of Grace E. church, orth Plainfield, to the Verona church. There are likely to be many changes not dependent on the expressed choices of the churches, which are necessary to maintain the efficiency of the churches of the Conference as a whole.

William B. LaRue, of Bound Brook a past State councilor, was elected treasurer of the State Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., by the board of managers at a meeting in Trenton last night. Dr. Read held the office for twelve years, and Mr. LaRue will fill the position until the next State council session in October. There were eight candidates for the office.

Mr. LaRue joined the order in 1890, being a charter member of Pioneer Council, No. 58, of Bound Brook. He has always been an active member, having served on all the important committees of the State council. His election meets with popular approval.

WILBUR SUMMER HOME IS BURGLARIZED AGAIN

Freholder and Mrs. S. F. T. Wilbur, of Westervelt avenue, received word from Lake Hopatcong by telegraph, yesterday, that their summer cottage at the resort had been broken into by burglars and ransacked from top to bottom. The information was forwarded by William S. Richards, the station agent at Nolan's Point, a friend of the Plainfielders, but he was unable to tell what had been taken. Mrs. Wilbur will go to the lake tomorrow with Mr. and Mrs. J. Haynes, of Craig place, for the purpose of making an investigation.

The Wilbur cottage, which is known as "Elkwood" and located in Castle Rock Park, has been visited by many Plainfielders as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur. Several years ago it was entered by burglars who carried off a large quantity of silverware, table linen, valuable fishing tackle and many articles of furniture. The work was done by a gang from Paterson, which was afterward caught and several members of it went to jail for long terms.

ASHAMED TO TAKE SALARY, HAS OFFICE ABOLISHED

Senator Hutchinson's bill abolishing the office of deputy supreme clerk was passed in the Assembly yesterday afternoon, the action revealing a peculiar state of affairs. Eugene Cowell, of High Bridge, the present incumbent of the office, recently requested that the office be abolished, explaining that the duties were so light he was ashamed to take the salary, which is $3,500 a year. The Assembly was assured that Mr. Cowell was in earnest in wanting the office abolished.

He was a native of Quakertown and always lived there up to a year ago when he went to live with his eldest daughter, Mrs. A. W. Stout, in Trenton. The funeral was held at Mrs. Stout's home yesterday and burial was in Quakertown.

"LADIES' NIGHT" WAS ENJOYED BY MANY

Interesting Program Held Under Auspices of Congregational Men's Ass'n.

The final meeting of the year of the Men's Association of the Congregational church was held last night in the parish house and was known as "ladies' night." The feature of the program was an illustrated lecture on "Cotton, from the Field to the finished product," given by Charles A. Rice, of West Seventh street. Mr. Rice is a cotton converter in New York and is thoroughly acquainted with his subject.

He had many interesting views flashed on the screen which he explained, showing the negroes picking cotton on the large plantations, the carting and other processes. Besides the pictures, Mr. Rice had several hundred specimens of cotton in all stages of growth which were inspected by the audience and explained by the speaker.

Miss Dorothy Spangenberg gave a recitation and James McClymont rendered a pleasing vocal solo accompanied by Miss Alice Morgan at the piano. At the conclusion of the program a social time was enjoyed and refreshments were served. C. E. Steiner and E. L. Morgan had charge of the refreshments.

TAKING LONG AUTO TRIP TO TRY OUT NEW JOINT

Clarence W. Spicer, of Central avenue, founder of the Spicer manufacturing concern, left yesterday on a long automobile trip to try out a new universal joint which he has recently perfected. He is accompanied by Mrs. Spicer, and it is possible they may go as far as Cleveland, O., the length of the run depending upon the behavior of the new joint.

Mr. Spicer's automobile carries a complete cooking and camp outfit to furnish accommodation in the event of being stalled between cities. It is probable that in the event of everything going all right, they will make 1,000 miles before concluding the run.

CREDITORS OF STEAMSHIP LINE LOSE.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 24.—General creditors and stockholders of the defunct Philadelphia and Gulf Steamship Company, and even holders of the second mortgage notes, will not receive a cent in the final wind-up of the company, according to the report of Special Master Henry C. Thompson, Jr., which will be filed today in the United States District Court.

An interesting phase of the wind-up is the fact that the steamships Evelyn and May, which were owned by the defunct line, brought only $82,000 at foreclosure, but were subsequently sold by the purchasers for a sum which realized them a profit of more than $100,000. The Evelyn was recently sunk in the North Sea, and was one of the vessels insured by the government's War Risk Insurance Bureau.

MRS. HENRY'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Mrs. Fannie Henry, whose death occurred yesterday morning, will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, at the home of her brother, William Skillman, 244 East Fourth street. Burial will be in the Methodist cemetery.

DENVER OF MALLORY LINE, SUNK AT SEA

New York, March 24.—At the office of the International Mercantile Marine Company a wireless was received this morning from Captain D. E. Metcalfe, of the White Star's Steamship Megantic, which left Liverpool for New York March 17, and is due here on Saturday. The despatch, which came via Cape Race, said that Captain Metcalfe had on board his vessel the captain and his wife and thirteen members of the crew of the steamship Denver, of the Mallory Line, which met with disaster in mid-ocean.

The message also said that the Megantic had on board Captain Smith, of the American steamer Evelyn, which was lost of Borkum Islands on February 20, following the striking of a mine. Captain Smith was a passenger on the Denver. Captain Metcalfe stated that the freighter Manhattan was bringing the rest of the Denver's crew numbering 56 men, to this port.

At the office of the Clyde and Mallory Lines H. H. Raymond, general manager, said that he had received a wireless from the captain of the Denver stating that his vessel had been abandoned in mid-ocean and that he expected to arrive in New York on Saturday.

CHRISTIANITY AND WAR.

Discussing the great war in which so many nations at least nominally Christian are now engaged, John Galsworthy, the English writer and playwright, makes the extraordinary assertion that in these days "no creed can stand against such reeling subversion of its foundation.'

Kaiser Wilhelm is much wiser than Mr. Galsworthy. He knows how wide is the appeal to religious conviction and he confidently expects the value of such an appeal to survive this war as it has survived thousands of others. The German rationalistic philosophers have long since abolished the Supreme Being, but there is not one of them who would have their Emperor weaken his hold on the imagination of a very large element in Germany by ceasing his devoted acknowledgements of supernatural aid or—as you may prefer—abandoning his seeming pose as a sort of military archbishop.

Gibbon defined history as a record of the crimes and follies of mankind. He could have added that all the greater crimes that fill the historians' tomes have been wars. Yet Mr. Galsworthy writes as if war is something so new and startling that neither humanity nor religion can adjust itself to the dreadful spectacle. The mere mention of the wars since the beginning of the Christian era would fill a volume.

It is true that war, in spirit and in method, is opposed to both religion and its offspring, civilization or the reign of law. When men go to war civilization may be said to break down temporarily, for there is a resort to primitive and savage methods of settlement. But even the most civilized and most worthy people may find war unavoidable in some instances because as yet there is no great international tribunal to which aggrieved nations can appeal with confidence in its ability to render and enforce just judgment. It can not be logically contended, however, that because of this unsupplied need, because a large portion of humanity is still innately savage, because religion and civilization have as yet accomplished only a part of their work, that Christianity has failed either as an individual influence or as a power among men.

To assume that faith is destroyed or that religious teachings are futile and valueless because the militarists are afflicted with inordinate ambition in the direction of world-sovereignty, or because rivalry for the possession of the cream of the world's trade make of the most powerful nations inevitable enemies sooner or later bound to appeal to the sword, is as ridiculous as to contend that because there is a destructive storm today there will be no benignant sunshine tomorrow.

PROPERTY WRECKERS.

Property owners living in the vicinity of the Whittier School at W. Fifth street and Madison avenue are said to have complained to the local Board of Education concerning the practice school children have adopted of playing hide and seek in a vacant house that adjoins the Madison avenue side of the building. It is high time someone took steps to curb the juvenile property destroyers and unless the school authorities take a hand in the near future several of those interested threaten to take the matter up with the police.

The interior of the vacant house has been ransacked; windows have been broken and doors jerked from their hinges. Although the limited schoolyard around this institution fails to provide the necessary space for young Americans to exercise in, there is no apparent reason why everyone in the neighborhood should be subjected to the nuisance by those responsible. Besides carrying on a general disturbance in the building mentioned above, the school pupils, before and after school and at recess, run through yards of nearby residents breaking down shrubbery and spoiling lawns. In the Whittier School there is a class of children put there for special attention, children who have been so unruly in other grades that it has been deemed necessary to group them together in order to maintain discipline. There is a man teacher in charge and it is up to him or someone else to see that the pupils are kept in proper bounds during recess hours.

When the State Board of Health issued its annual report this year, it recommended that all attendants in charge of sewage disposal plants should be required to have special training, and be licensed by the Board. It was stated that one city in the State had such a trained man, and when the Daily Press commented on this Commissioner A. J. Gavett informed us that Plainfield was the city to which reference was made. Discussing the plan, the Municipal Journal commends it, and suggests as an extension of the idea that there be two grades of licenses, one for attendants and the other for the manager; the former for those put in charge of small plants which cannot afford and do not really require a manager. In this way a number of neighboring towns could unite and employ a manager to supervise the work of the attendants, or could make individual arrangements with a competent licensed manager.

Plainfield is fortunate in securing the baby saving show, which will be exhibited here next month. We understand that the exhibition, which is now being shown in Camden, will be taken to Philadelphia after leaving this city, and there installed as a permanent institution. Those who are responsible for bringing it here are deserving of the thanks of the community, and that it will do untold good goes without saying.

Rev. C. C. Cain, who leaves Grace Methodist church to take a pulpit in Verona, will be much missed in Plainfield. He has been an untiring worker in the interest of his congregation and church, and he leaves behind a large circle of friends both within and without the church.

VOTES FOR WOMEN

Conducted by the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

Now that the campaign for woman suffrage is under way in New Jersey, we may look for all sorts of distorted and misleading statements regarding the Western suffrage States, and the conditions prevailing there, as a result of equal suffrage, or in spite of it. Many of the articles already published here, if credited, are not complimentary to the intelligence of our people, and would not be published did not the contributors count on the ignorance of the average reader as to conditions in those distant regions.

"A Wyoming Warning."

Under that caption a letter to the New York Times appeared in the Daily Press of the 20th over the signature of "An Old Wyomingite." The heading would indicate a terrible indictment of suffrage in Wyoming, but a brief analysis shows little of that character, and what there is is simply the unsupported opinion of the anonymous writer, whatever that may be worth.

His first paragraph compares Wyoming with New York, its East Side slums, etc., all to the advantage of Wyoming, and ending by saying "to expect the same results from both would be simply ridiculous were it not so dangerous." Not one word against woman suffrage so far, but Wyoming, so long abused by the antis, is held up as superior to New York city. It must be a joke, since only recently the anti column was asking us in disdain "why do women avoid Wyoming?"

He Buys Votes in Wyoming.

The second paragraph points out the difficulty of getting out the educated vote in New York, and the writer "shudders to think" of the results if the women get the vote. Writing from experience, he confesses "we bought and voted 1,250 votes for about $2,500," which classifies him adequately as the model citizen, well-fitted to judge who should have a vote! "We," he says, "paid their poll taxes," but he fails to say whether they were men or women, and the chances are they were men. So far nothing against suffrage, except it would help drive out such vote-buyers as he!

He Suspects New York Rascals.

With fine consistency this virtuous vote-buyer points out the "serious danger" arising when the ladies (whom he couldn't buy) fail to go to the polls in New York, but the "denizens of the Five Points" would keep on voting, rain or shine. A good many would take their chances with all the poor unfortunates of the slums compared with this paragon of propriety who did not "bribe," but bought votes in blocks of 1,250 when the election was close! His prediction of danger carries no evidence against suffrage in Wyoming.

A Wyomng Election.

With the self-revelation of this correspondent's character before us, I do not know what reliance to place on his remarks that "the last but one election in Wyoming was one of the worst," and that it is his belief "if one could poll the vote of every woman in Wyoming honestly (including, of course, the payment of poll taxes), woman suffrage would be voted down today." Well he is welcome to his opinion, but I doubt if even his forty years in Wyoming have added as much to his judgment as to his age. I will therefore quote a few opinions of some of the best known men in Wyoming, who as representative citizens know what conditions are, and they thoroughly dispose of the pretentions of "An Old Wyomingite:"

Testimony of Leading Citizens.

Chief Justice Charles N. Potter says:

"I speak with absolute authority in regard to my own State, and I say that the statement that woman suffrage destroys home life is absolutely false. It has always acted admirably in Wyoming, where women vote relatively in the same proportion as men. My wife and I voted side by side for thirty-six years, and she is just as womanly, just as ladylike as ever, and I am inclined to think a little more so.

"I know absolutely that women purify politics in Wyoming because I have been in political life there for thirty years, and know whereof I speak."

Governor John M. Carey says:

"After watching the operation of woman's suffrage for many years in this State, during which time woman has had equal opportunities to vote and hold office, I say, without hesitation, that she has exercised her privileges wisely and well. So satisfactory has it been to the people of Wyoming that I do not believe 1 per cent. of the male population would vote to deprive her of the political privileges she enjoys. She votes and takes an interest in public affairs.

"Our elections are quiet; we never have any difficulty at the polls. Our public meetings are as free from noise and confusion as any public lecture or theatrical entertainment. Whenever a woman appears in a public place she is treated with profound respect; when she approaches the polls the men stand back, raise their hats, and give her every opportunity to exercise her rights and duties without confusion or interference."

U. S. Senator Clarence D. Clark says:

"We have had woman suffrage for forty years. One of the very first acts of the Legislative Assembly, when Wyoming became a territory, was to pass that law. It worked with wonderfully good results while the territorial form of government lasted, and when Wyoming became a State, was put into the Constitution. So far as I am informed nobody who has the interest of the State at heart has ever desired or suggested a change."

U. S. Senator Warren says:

"Wyoming has an enviable reputation as a well-governed and progressive State. That this is so is due, in part, to woman's vote. It has always had a moral check on elections and legislation.

"Our women are intelligently active in public affairs, but, withal, womanly and devoted to home and family as their sisters in States where the privilege is not enjoyed. In fact, there is nothing in our experience in Wyoming to warrant the opinion that woman suffrage has been unwise, but, on the contrary, it has elevated public morals and has been a material factor in maintaining the good local government we enjoy.

"They fill adequately such public offices as they are fitted for, and they have never attempted to secure those for which they are not fitted. The office of State Superintendent of Public Instruction has now for four years been admirably administered by a woman. Many of the county superintendents of schools, county clerks and treasurers are women. They also hold a large number of clerkships."

In view of what I have said above, and in view of the irrefutable testimony of the first citizens of the State, is it not about time for the antis of this vicinity to drop their misrepresenting aspersions of Wyoming and its hard-working men and women, who are working out their problems in their own way? Some of us are quite familiar with those inter-mountain and Pacific States, and can always furnish the facts about them to the confusion of anti detractors.

On Sunday this week the Rev. L. A. Wilson, of Helena, Mont., a brilliant Congregational minister, spoke on religious and social conditions in some parts of that State. I asked him how it had been possible to get woman suffrage in Montana last November, in view of conditions in the large mining centers. He said the reform was carried by the votes of the farmers, and he predicted that it would be a mighty power for good, as they are mostly married men with families in the rural districts, where the vote is largely increased, while, unfortunately, the vicious life of the towns and cities is chiefly supported by the unmarried men. The latent, indirect, moral strength of the farmers' women folk will now find emphatic expression at the ballot box, and what women similarly situated in all the suffrage States have done for the benefit of their community life, may be reasonably expected in Montana.

Very truly yours,
ALEX. MILLAR.

THE FORUM

Editor Plainfield Daily Press:

May I say a word through your paper regarding a most excellent course of lectures being given in Grace Episcopal church. It has been my privilege to attend four of these lectures and I expect to attend the remaining one tonight by Dr. Francis Blodgett.

Dr. Fosbrooke certainly made Amos and Hosea living prophets for there are certain elements in the civilization of the present time that are like the elements of those early days. Then Professor Tyson, in a most entrancing and popular style, showed the relation of the Gospels to each other. Professor Blodgett will have something to do in order to follow in the footsteps of these inspiring teachers. I imagine he can do it.

CANDIDATES HUSTLING FOR VOTES TO WIN EXTRA PRIZES AND TOURS

Revised Vote Standing to Be Shown Tomorrow—Winners of Extra Prizes to Be Announced at Close of Special Contest.

First Prize.
$100.00 Diamond Solitaire Ring.

Second Prize.
Merchandise Certificate, good for $25.00 in trade at Woodhull & Martin Co., 163 East Front street, and $15.00 in gold.

Third Prize.
$35.00 Solid Gold Wrist Watch.

Tomorrow we will publish the revised vote standing of candidates which will include all votes deposited in the ballot box up to 8 o'clock last evening. There will also be another list showing the gains each candidate has made toward winning the special prizes. This list includes all subscription ballots issued and voted since the Special Prize Contest started at midnight Wednesday, March 17.

Some of the candidates have asked if the names of the winners of the extra prizes will be announced at the end of the special prize period, or at the end of the contest. The answer to this is that the close of the special prize period will be at 10 o'clock on the evening of April 3, and just as soon as the work of verifying the subscriptions as to old and new is done, and the votes are counted, the names of the winners will be announced.

A few days of the special prize period have now passed and the candidates are busier than ever securing votes. Candidates should note well that the subscriptions to count for the extra prizes can be turned in immediately and the votes issued on them can be retained by the candidates and held in reserve until the end of the special contest. The standing for the winning of the extra prizes will be determined by the number of votes which were issued on subscriptions turned in during the period commencing March 17 at midnight, and ending April 3, and not according to the number which will have been deposited in the ballot box since the contest began, February 23.

Enthusiasm Over Prizes.

The offer of the special prizes has added enthusiasm and determination among a large number of the candidates, and in every district there are many who have made up their minds to be at the head of the list when the winners are announced. They fully realize that their chances for winning one of the prizes has greatly increased.

In the event of not winning the diamond ring, there are two other prizes which are really worth while and deserve the best efforts of all the candidates.

While attempting to win one of these extra prizes candidates must bear in mind the fact that at the same time they are advancing their standing toward the winning of one of the district prizes.

Prizes on Exhibition.

The jewelry prizes are on display at the above stores, and every person is invited to look them over; they are beauties, both of them.

Not Limited to Districts.

The special prizes will be awarded as follows:

The first prize, the diamond ring, will be given to the candidate, regardless of district limitations, who turns in the greatest number of votes on paid-in-advance subscriptions between midnight, Wednesday, March 17, and 10 p. m., Saturday, April 3.

The second and third prizes will be awarded respectively to the candidates who have the second and third largest numbers of votes issued as in the case of the winner of the first prize.

The above are all extra prizes and will in no way interfere with the winning of the delightful tours across the continent; for, of course, all votes turned in for these special prizes will count also for the principal prizes—the tours.

Candidates Must Hustle.

Only votes issued on paid-in-advance subscriptions turned in between midnight, Wednesday, March 17, and 10 p. m. April 3, will count for the special prizes. No ballots cut from the Press will count for these prizes, but will be accepted and will count for the tours.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

"The Rose of the Rancho," the charming play produced by David Belasco several years ago and now done in picture form, is the attraction scheduled for the Plainfield Theatre this afternoon and tonight and also tomorrow. Plainfielders will readily recall when this drama was first presented that it introduced Miss Frances Starr as one of the brightest stars in the dramatic firmament. "The Rose of the Rancho" ran for an entire season at the Belasco Theatre, New York, and as a photo-play is duplicating its original success throughout the United States. It tells a charming story and the many beautiful scenes make it one of the prettiest pictures that has ever been produced. For the last two days of this week, Friday and Saturday, the Plainfield Theatre's offering will be the dramatic sensation, "The Bargain," also one of New York's legitimate successes. This film as well as "The Rose of the Rancho," is a Paramount feature, the Second street playhouse holding the contract for the first run of these films in Plainfield, thus assuring its patrons of securing the latest and best. Manager Shannon has arranged to give illustrated songs at his theatre on various days of the week and these will be announced in due course. Edward Harding, Jr., of this city, who sprang into instant favor with his rendition of popular ballads several weeks ago, has been engaged to act as soloist. Manager Shannon is also negotiating for several other big novelties to add to the elaborate program of the Plainfield Theatre. With the close of the highly popular serial film, "The Master Key" and "The Trey O' Hearts," the patrons of the house have insisted upon another and to this end the greatest serial ever put out, "The Black Box," has been contracted for. The first installment will be shown Friday and it will be continued for succeeding Fridays thereafter.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The policy of Proctor's Theatre in providing the pick of high-class vaudeville acts has met with general acclaim and everywhere in the city each bill receives the highest commendation. The fine offering of the first half of this week will give way tomorrow to another equally as meritorious as the following program will show: Percy Waram & Company, in the comedy sketch, "The Boscam's Mate," by Sir George W. Jacobs, calling for a cast of three people and a special elaborate scenic setting; the Two Rubes, comedy instrumental act, during which the clarinet, cornet and French horn are used; Garcinette Brothers, acrobatic, comedy tramboline; Mack & Pingree, singing and talking skit, and Edith Clifford, singing comedienne. In addition to the vaudeville, the program tomorrow will include a Paramount picture feature, "The Virginian," starring Dustin Farnum, who is recognized as the highest priced male camera artist before the public today. His weekly salary is $2,000, a statement which has been proven absolutely correct, and not a press agent's dream. Tomorrow another Paramount picture, "The Unwelcome Mrs. Hatch," with Henrietta Crosman, will be the added attraction, and on Saturday there will be two comedies, one by Charles Chaplin, the funniest man in picturedom, and the other by Jefferson de Angelis, under the title of "Health By the Year." Friday is devoted to the installments of "The Exploits of Elaine," the serial film which is being followed by thousands of Proctor patrons.

Cabinet Gas Ranges Are Best of All

There is no other fuel equal to gas for a cooking service.

There is no other range better than a Cabinet Range for cooking purposes.

It is best because it provides the cleanest and most sanitary method of cooking.

It is best because it is actually cheaper to operate than a coal range.

We have a selection of the best Cabinet Gas Ranges made. The prices are not high, and payments can be made on a monthly Service Payment Plan.

HOPE CHAPEL Y. M. A. PRIES OFF B. B. "LID"

Elect Officials and Talk Over Arrangements for the Season.

Baseball had its official opening in this city last night, when the Hope Chapel Young Men's Association came together, talked over the prospects of the season, and elected the necessary officers with which to start the team representing that organization on the field for the coming year. From present indications, Hope chapel will have to book an independent schedule this year, as up to this date nothing has been done to accomplish the re-organization of the Sunday-school League.

Efforts will be made to secure the grounds at South Second street and Clinton avenue, to the rear of the shops of the Pond Machine Tool Company, which was used last year by the Saurer team. It is understood that the latter team anticipates playing on Parker Field.

HEXATHLON NETTED 1837 POINT TOTAL

Local Y. M. C. A. Made Excellent Showing in National Competition.

A total of 1,837 points was registered by the members of the Senior class of the Y. M. C. A. in the national Hexathlon meet which has been held in associations all over the country and also in foreign lands during the past two weeks. There were six events and the marks of the highest six men were counted for the national and State trophies. There are six cups to be presented in all and a perfect score, one hundred points for six men in each event, would be 3,600, but no association will come near this mark.

Plainfield's highest score was made in the 220-yard potato race, when 392 points were chalked up. The fence vault was the lowest with 185. The results of the meet will not be known until the first week in April and the local association stands a good chance of getting at least one of the State trophies and also has a "look in" for a national honor. The results of the local competition follow:

60-yard potato race	225
220-yard potato race	392
Standing broad jump	360
12-pound shotput	323
Fence vault	185

PLAINFIELD Y. M. H. A. DEFEATED SCHWARTZ

Perth Amboy "One-Man" Aggregation Cut to Pieces in Second Half.

Predictions of Perth Amboy basketball wiseacres were smashed to smithereens last night. The Plainfield Y. M. H. A. basketball aggregation walloped the Perth Amboy Y. M. H. A. on the Columbus Club court by a score of 40 to 14. The visiting team was strengthened by the return of Harry Schwartz to the indoor pastime. He played pivot man for the visitors, outjumping his opponent throughout the game. During the first half Schwartz tallied 13 points for his team, while the Plainfield quintet numbered 11. In the second half the Plainfield team completely ran away from the Perth Amboy boys, caging 13 goals and three fouls, while Schwartz was kept to a solitary foul. SCHOOL GIRLS' TITLE CLINCHED BY N. P. H.S.

What Borough Boys Could Not Do Was Engineered by Girls.

Exhibiting an article of basketball seldom seen in interscholastic contests, the North Plainfield High School girls defeated the Plainfield High School aggregation on the Y. M. C. A. court, yesterday afternoon by a score of 27 to 13, thus winning the city interscholastic feminine championship this season.

Both quintets were in the best of condition for the rubber match and both entered into the fray with full determination to win, making it a nip and tuck affair during the first period, but in the second fifteen minutes the boroughites, by fast passing and shooting, tallied fifteen points.

During the initial period the game was tied several times and on two occasions Plainfield was in the lead but Miss Burtis' three goals in the last minute and a half of play placed the "Canadians" ahead with a score of 12 to 9. Miss Morris, of the city forces, was not in her usual fine foul shooting condition, missing five, while Miss Crane missed two.

The second half was played with but one center. During this period the boroughites completely outplayed the home team in all around work, Miss Burtis caging two beautiful field goals and Miss Spencer bagged four, while Miss Crane tallied one goal, and two from the fifteen foot line were credited to Miss Morris.

Much credit is due the North Plainfield guards in yesterday's contest, the Misses Debele and Keller seldom allowing their forwards to get the ball. Miss Rothberg played an especially good game at side center for the Ninth street maidens.

The score:

WILL REWARD CHAMPIONS WITH SET OF MEDALS

The North Plainfield High School Girls' Athletic Association is contemplating awarding medals to the girls' team, winner of the city interscholastic title. The girls have just finished one of the best seasons in many years, and the recovering of the coveted honor puts a fine finish on the season. Two years ago the girls were given medals for the winning, and the present team is equally as deserving.

The team will be honored at a dinner and dance to be given in the borough tomorrow night. The affair was planned some time ago, with the title still in doubt, but the outcome of the final match is bound to make the celebration all the merrier. Covers will be laid for about seventy.

PAT SNYDER WINS FIRST GAME OF BORO TOURNEY

Pat Snyder broke his losing streak in the borough one-man bowling tourney last night by winning one game, the first he has annexed in eighteen played so far in the tourney. Team and individual prizes were also handed out to the various teams in the senior and junior circuits last night.

The Paterson team finished second and was given a check for $40, Jersey City was awarded the Radel trophy for having the high team average. The Skeeter bowlers had a mark of 945. Newark got fourth money, $30, and Elizabeth, fifth, $25.

SUFFRAGE WORKERS HOLD BUSY SESSION

Local League to Send Delegation to Elizabeth to Attend Union Co. Conference.

An enthusiastic meeting of the Equal Suffrage League, of Plainfield and North Plainfield, was held at the headquarters, in Depot Park, yesterday afternoon. Mrs. A. B. Jones, president of the local league, presided. Important business, including the nomination of officers for the ensuing year, was transacted. The election of officers will be held at the annual meeting on April 27.

A resolution was passed expressing a sense of great loss in the death of Miss Eliza Elvira Kenyon, who was a teacher, Suffragist, progressive and high-minded woman, seeking always the development of womankind. Sympathy was extended to her family and friends. A resolution was also passed expressing sympathy for the relatives of Mrs. Harold Durar, a long time zealous Suffragist, and at one time secretary of the league. The league extended a vote of thanks to the Democratic Club, and the secretary was directed to write to the club expressing the league's appreciation of the generous opportunity offered them for presenting the subject of woman suffrage to the voters of Plainfield. A letter of thanks was sent to Mrs. Edwin Frost for her admirable paper on woman suffrage, which was read before the Plainfield College Club last week. A rummage sale was announced for Monday and Tuesday of next week at suffrage headquarters, the proceeds going into the league's expense fund. Mention was made of Mrs. Greeley's class in parliamentary law and speaking, which is held on Tuesday mornings in headquarters.

At the conclusion of the business meeting a party was arranged to attend the Union county suffrage conference, which is to be held in Elizabeth on March 26. The Elizabeth Suffrage League has been doing some notable work and is ranked first among the active leagues of the State. Members of the Plainfield League who wish to attend the conference are invited to the business session at suffrage headquarters, 290 North Broad street, Elizabeth, and to luncheon at the Carteret Arms, 16 South Broad street. The conference proper begins at 2:15 and the following well-known speakers will be in attendance: Charles T. Halliman, formerly with the Chicago Tribune, and director of the National Woman Suffrage Press Bureau, subject, "Suffrage Publicity;" Mrs. J. W. Slayback, New Jersey factory inspector, subject, "New Jersey Women in Industry;" Miss Florence Leech, of Montana, New Jersey field organizer, subject, "How We Won the Vote in Montana;" Miss Nellie Swartz, executive secretary, New York Consumers' League, subject, "Women and Wages;" and Mrs. E. F. Feickert, president New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association, subject, "New Jersey, the Next Suffrage State."

BIBLE CLASS TO GIVE UNIQUE AFFAIR

"Colonial Party" to Be An Attraction at First Baptist Church.

The Beta Alpha class of the First Baptist Bible school has had a most interesting and eventful history. It is wholly composed of public school teachers and those of like tastes and associations. It is therefore a very homogeneous class and one able to accomplish anything which it really attempts. Founded during the time Mrs. Lucie Rising was missionary of this church, though not by her, and at first conducted under her instruction, it has now for its teacher Miss Mary I. Jones, of the well-known White Bible Training School of New York. Miss Jones spent some time as missionary in China and has had large experience in religious work. The class is at present in a most flourishing condition and constantly increasing in membership.

On Friday evening it will give at the church a "Colonial Party," which is attracting considerable attention and enlisting the interest of the entire church and friends of the class outside the church. Leading people of Plainfield are contributing to the success of this entertainment in the way of costumes and loans and the gathering promises to be unique and delightful in every way. It would be difficult to explain the scope of this social event, so many features enter into it and so many attractions are being devised for it. The best way to realize its character will be to attend and a very hearty welcome is given to the public.

Perhaps it would not be amiss to say that the popular superintendent of the Bible school, Arthur M. Harris has promised to make a cake for the occasion and scores of people are planning to buy a piece of his baking which will be sold in small sections to the fortunate purchasers. If people think Mr. Harris cannot make a good cake let them come and taste for themselves. He is not a man to "fall down" on any job and he has made cakes before of more than one kind.

PERFECTS UNDER WATER EYE FOR SUBMARINE

Hudson Maxim, owner of Maxim Park, Lake Hopatcong, and who has an extensive laboratory at that place, announced yesterday that he has perfected an invention making it possible for submarines to attack an enemy without showing even their periscopes. The inventor refuses to give details, but stated that his invention will enable a submarines to cruise and to discharge its torpedoes completely submerged. Naval men declare such an invention will increase the deadliness of the submarine 1,000 per cent.

ASBURY PARK WILL MEET FLEMINGTON

The series of interscholastic debates, inaugurated by the Philoclean Literacy Society at the college, has reached its semi-final round. On Friday, March 19, Flemington and Bernardsville High Schools debated at Somerville, Flemington winning the unanimous decision. On the same date Asbury Park won from Metuchen at Asbury Park.

The final debate for the prize offered by the society will be held in the Rutgers gymnasium, on Friday evening, April 23, when Asbury Park will meet Flemington. On the following afternoon the following schools will participate in an oratorical contest: High Bridge, Clinton, Somerville, Bound Brook, Metuchen, Woodbridge, New Brunswick, Perth Amboy, Lambertville, Flemington, South Amboy, South River and Asbury Park.

During the week-end the Rutgers' students plan to entertain at least one hundred students from Middlesex, Monmouth and Somerset counties. The boys will spend the nights in the various fraternity houses and in the dormitories.

The series of debates so far held have resulted as follows:

On February 19 Clinton defeated High Bridge, Somerville defeated Bound Brook, Metuchen defeated Woodbridge, Perth Amboy defeated New Brunswick, Flemington defeated Lambertville, South Amboy defeated South River.

On March 5 Asbury Park defeated Perth Amboy, Metuchen defeated South River, Bernardsville defeated Somerville, Flemington defeated Clinton.

In each instance the subject has been "The Literacy Test."

Y. M. C. A. PLANNING FOR "FATHER AND SON" BANQUET

At a joint meeting of the boys work and social committees of the Young Men's Christian Association plans were talked over for a "Father and Son" banquet, to be served by "Mother and Daughter." The date of this affair has been set for Thursday evening, April 15.

Aside from the dinner a social program is being arranged to include addresses and gymnastic activities, the details of which will be announced later.

Y. M. C. A. WILL HOLD TWO MEETINGS FOR MEN

Two very strong meetings under the auspices of the local Y. M. C. A., for men, will be held during April. The first will be on April 11, at which time enlisted men from the United States Navy, who have seen service during the recent trouble in Mexico and South America, together with a Y. M. C. A. secretary, who was with the landing party at Vera Cruz, will give interesting accounts of their experiences as Christian men under unusual conditions.

The second meeting will be held on Sunday, April 25, when one of the Billy Sunday evangelistic teams from Scranton will tell the story of "hitting the trail." A special musical program has been arranged for both meetings.

The Board has appropriated generously for the elimination of the mosquito and the visit of the Freeholders was for the purpose of getting more detailed information as to just what is being accomplished. They were assured all the information desired would be given.

The Commission awarded contracts for the dyking of the North Elizabeth meadows and for the erection of tide gates there in co-operation with the Essex Commission. Dr. T. J. Headlee, State Entomologist, was present.

CHAPTER III.

The Real Owner.

I KNEW at once that he was the kind of an American I have come to hate with a zest that knows no moderation—the kind that makes one ashamed of the national melting pot. I glared back at him.

"I happen to be the owner of this place, and you'll oblige me by clearing out."

"What's that? Here, here, none of that sort of talk, my friend! We're here to look over your stuff, and we mean business, but you won't get anywhere by talking like"—

"There is nothing for sale here," I said shortly. "And you've got a lot of nerve to come bolting into a private house"—

"Say," said the second man, advancing with a most insulting scowl, "we'll understand each other right off the reel, my friend. All you've got to do is to answer us when we ask for prices. Now, bear that in mind, and don't try any of your high and mighty tactics on us."

"Just remember that you're a junk dealer and we'll get along splendidly," said the other in a tone meant to crush me. "What do you ask for this thing?" tapping the dusty spinet with his walking stick.

It suddenly occurred to me that the situation was humorous.

"You will have to produce your references, gentlemen, before I can discuss anything with you," I said, after swallowing very hard. (It must have been my pride.)

They stared. "Good Lord!" gasped the bristly one, blinking his eyes. "Don't you know who this gentleman is? You—you appear to be an American. You must know Mr. Riley-Werkheimer of New York."

"I regret to say that I have never heard of Mr. Rtley-Werkheimer. I did not know that Mrs. Riley-Werkheimer's husband was living. And may I ask who you are?"

"Oh, I am also a nobody!" said he, with a wink at his purple jowled companion. "I am only poor old Rocksworth, the president of the"—

"Oh, don't say anything more, Mr. Rocksworth!" I cried. "I have heard of you. This fine old spinet? Well, it has been reduced in price. Ten thousand dollars, Mr. Rocksworth."

"Ten thousand nothing! I'll take it at $75. And now let's talk about this here hall seat. My wife thinks it's a fake. What is its history, and what sort of guarantee can you"—

"A fake!" I cried in dismay. "My dear Mr. Rocksworth, that is the very hall seat that Pontius Pilate sat in when waiting for an audience with the first of the great Teutonic barons. The treaty between the Romans and the Teutons was signed on that table over there, the one you have so judiciously selected, I perceive. Of course you know that this was the Saxon seat of government. Charlemagne lived here with his court."

They tried not to look impressed, but rather overdid it.

"That's the sort of story you fellows always put up, you skinflints from Boston. I'll bet my head you are from Boston," said Mr. Rocksworth shrewdly.

"I couldn't afford to have you lose your head, Mr. Rocksworth, so I shan't take you on," said I merrily.

"Don't get fresh now," said he stiffly.

Mr. Riley-Werkheimer walked past me to take a closer look at the seat, almost treading on my toes rather than give an inch to me.

"How can you prove that it's the genuine article?" he demanded curtly.

"You have my word for it, sir," I said quietly.

"Pish tush!" said he.

Mr. Rocksworth turned in the direction of the banquet hall.

"Carrie," he shouted, "come here a minute, will you?"

"Don't shout like that, Orson," came back from the porcelain closet. "You almost made me drop this thing."

"Well, drop it and come on. This is important."

I wiped the moisture from my brow and respectfully put my clinched fists into my pockets.

A minute later three females appeared on the scene, all of them dusting their hands and curling their noses in disgust.

"I never saw such a dirty place," said the foremost, a large lady who couldn't by any circumstance of fate have been anybody's wife but Rocksworth's. "It's filthy! What do you want?"

"I've bought this thing here for seventy-five. You said I couldn't get it for a nickel under a thousand. And, say, this man tells me the hall seat here belonged to Pontius Pilate in"—

"Pardon me," I interrupted, "I merely said that he sat in it. I am not trying to deceive you, sir."

"And the treaty was signed on this table," said Mr. Riley-Werkheimer. He addressed himself to a plump young lady with a distorted bust and a twenty-two inch waist. "Maude, what do you know about the Roman-Teutonic treaty? We'll catch you now, my friend," he went on, turning to me. "My daughter is up in ancient history. She's an authority."

"I mean the second treaty, after the fall of Nuremburg," I explained.

"Oh," she said, instantly relieved. "Was it really signed here, right here in this hall? Oh, father, we must have that table!"

"You are sure there was a treaty, Maude?" demanded her parent accusingly.

"Certainly," she cried. "The Teutons ceded Alsace-Lorraine to"—

"Pardon me once more," I cried, and this time I plead guilty to a blush, "you are thinking of the other treaty—the one at Metz, Miss Riley-Werkheimer. This, as you will recall, antedates that one by—oh, several years."

"Thank you," she said, quite condescendingly. "I was confused for a moment. Of course, father, I can't say that it was signed here on this table as the young man says. I only know that there was a treaty. I do wish you'd come and see the fire screen I've found"—

"Let's get this out of our system first," said her father. "If you can show me statistics and the proper proof that this is the genuine table, young man, I'll"—

"Pray rest easy, sir," I said. "We can take it up later on. The facts are"—

"And this Pontius Pilate seat," interrupted Rocksworth, biting off the end of a fresh cigar—"what about it? Got a match?"

"Get the gentleman a match, Britton," I said, thereby giving my valet an opportunity to do his exploding in the pantry. "I can only affirm, sir, that it is common history that Pontius Pilate spent a portion of his exile here in the sixth century. It is reasonable to assume that he sat in this seat, being an old man unused to difficult stairways. He"—

"Buy it, Orson," said his wife, with authority. "We'll take a chance on it. If it isn't the right thing we can sell it to the secondhand dealers. What's the price?"

"A thousand dollars to you, madam," said I.

They were at once suspicious. While they were busily engaged in looking the seat over as the porters shifted it about at all angles I stepped over and ordered my workmen to resume operations.

"Here!" roared Mr. Rocksworth. "Stop this beastly noise! What the deuce do you mean, sir, permitting these scoundrels to raise the dead like this?"

I moved forward apologetically. "They are raising the dead. The place is fairly alive with dead rats and"—

"Good Lord!" gasped Riley-Werkheimer. "We'll get the bubonic plague here."

"Well, let's move on upstairs," said Rocksworth. Addressing the porters, he said: "You fellows get this lot of stuff together, and I'll take an option on it. I'll be over tomorrow to close the deal, Mr—Mr.— Now, where is the old Florentine mirror the count was telling us about?"

"The count?" said I, frowning.

"Yes, the real owner. You can't stuff me with your talk about being the proprietor here, my friend. You see, we happen to know the count."

They all condescended to laugh at me. I don't know what I should have said or done if Britton had not returned with a box of matches at that instant.

Almost simultaneously there appeared in the lower hall a lanky youth of eighteen.

"Say, these clubs are the real stuff, all right, all right. They're as brittle as glass. See what I did to 'em. We can have 'em spliced and rewound, and I'll hang 'em on my wall. All I want is the heads anyhow."

He held up to view a headless mid-iron and brassie and triumphantly waved a splendid cleek. My favorite clubs! I could play better from a hanging lie with that beautiful brassie than with any club I ever owned, and, as for the iron, I was deadly with it.

He lit a cigarette and threw the match into a pile of shavings. Old Conrad returned to life at that instant and stamped out the incipient blaze.

"I shouldn't consider them very good clubs, Harold, if they break off like that," said his mother.

"What do you know about clubs?" he snapped, and I at once knew what class he was in at the preparatory school.

If I was ever like one of these, said I to myself, God rest the sage soul of my Uncle Rilas!

The situation was no longer humorous. I could put up with anything but the mishandling of my devoted golf clubs.

Striding up to him, I snatched the remnants from his hands.

"You infernal cub!" I roared. Haven't you any more sense than to smash a golf club like that? For two cents I'd break this putter over your head."

"Father," he yelled indignantly, "who is this mucker?"

Mr. Rocksworth bounced toward me, his cane raised. I whirled upon him.

"How dare you?" he shouted. The ladies squealed.

If he expected me to cringe he was mightily mistaken. My blood was up. I advanced.

"Paste him, dad!" roared Harold.

But Mr. Rocksworth suddenly altered his course and put the historic treaty table between him and me. He didn't like the appearance of my rather brawny fist.

"You big 'stiff!" shouted Harold. Afterward it occurred to me that this inelegant appellation may have been meant for his father, but at the time I took it to be aimed at me.

Before Harold quite knew what was happening to him he was prancing down the long hall with my bony fingers grasping his collar. Coming to the door opening into the outer vestibule, I drew back my foot for a final aid to locomotion. Acutely recalling the fact that slippers are not designed for kicking purposes, I raised my foot, removed the slipper and laid it upon a taut section of his trousers with all of the melancholy force that I usually exert in slicing my drive off the tee. I shall never forget the exquisite spasm of pleasure his plaintive "Ouch!" gave me.

"How dare you?" he shouted.

Then Harold passed swiftly out of my life.

Mr. Rocksworth, re-enforced by four reluctant mercenaries in the shape of porters, was advancing upon me. Somehow I had a vague but unerring instinct that some one had fainted, but I didn't stop to inquire. Without much ado I wrested the cane from him and sent it scuttling after Harold.

"Now get out!" I roared.

"You shall pay for this!" he sputtered, quite black in the face. "Grab him, you infernal cowards!"

But the four porters slunk away, and Mr. Rocksworth faced me alone. Rudolph and Max, thoroughly fed and most prodigious, were bearing down upon us, accounting for the flight of the mercenaries.

"Get out!" I repeated. "I am the owner of this place, Mr. Rocksworth, and I am mad through and through! Skip!"

They skipped

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Oh, mother," wrote Nell, the day after the stenographer had dined with them, "how I wish you were here to advise me. I feel that I am making mistakes, but I do not see how to avoid them. Dick asked me to invite Miss Rudolph to dinner and of course I did. If anyone ever honestly tried to like a girl, I am that person, but I failed. She is affected and insincere and is forever striking attitudes that she knows set off her charms. She is a good listener and hangs on Dick's words as if in them lay the wisdom of the ages. I tried desperately to be gracious to her, for if any dislike is shown Dick will attribute it to jealousy and it will make me contemptible in his eyes. On the other hand, I feel like a hypocrite acting as if I liked her when I see through her thin artificiality. Tell me what to do, mother dear."

Nell knew her mother would sit down and answer the letter at once and she wanted to get it out of the office, for Dick was always interested in her mother's letters and he must not see this one. She walked down for the mail in the glorious spring sunshine, when the leaves were new and the trees were alive with robins. The letter was in the box. Holding it in her hand, she climbed a little rise of ground at one side of the town and sat down under a fine old tree to read it.

"Dear Child: You are making a great mistake in letting thoughts of suspicion and dislike fill your mind. If the girl is really as you paint her she needs your pity. Surely she has some likeable qualities; keep them uppermost in your mind. If you harbor these thoughts, they will develop suspicion and irritability; everything that will lessen your charm and your hold on your husband. You are laying a train of powder that may blow up all your happiness."

Nell dropped the letter in her lap and gazed off over the green fields. She realized that a fight was ahead of her, and she braced herself to meet it.

On the way home she stopped at Mrs. Parsons' and stayed for a cup of tea. Mrs. Parsons was very quiet. Finally she said: "Do you know Roger insists that I take the children east this summer, when the weather begins to be hot. He is afraid they will not keep well here. I shall wait and see what kind of a summer we have. Occasionally there is one cool enough to be quite comfortable."

"I shall be lost if you go," said Nell; "you are my one real friend."

"Thank you, dear; I have enjoyed you immensely. Perhaps I can persuade Roger to let me stay; really, I miss him so terribly I can't enjoy the cool weather. I would not think of going if it weren't for the children. Robert was quite ill two years ago; that is what frightened Roger.

Nell seemed very much depressed. "We will pray for cool weather," she said as she rose to go.

Household Hints

REAL CHOP SUEY

Three slices of pork shoulder (or six pork chops) cut in cubes, then fried; one large onion fried, one stalk of celery cut fine (celery can be omitted if one does not care for it, and it won't spoil the taste of the chop suey). Mix pork, onions and celery, add one egg (egg can be omitted if necessary; fry for a few minutes and add two tablespoons Chinese sauce (can be bought for fifty or seventy-five cents a jug at Chinese store and will last a long time); and the chop suey is ready. Some add a little sugar to sweeten.

For a gravy to pour over chop suey, use one tablespoon cornstarch to one-half teacup water; mix, then pour on chop suey and cook for a few seconds. This is a delicious homemade chop suey and very nourishing.

When cooking rice, use six cups of rice; wash rice, put into an iron kettle, put water on rice until water is 1½ inches over rice, cook by a fast fire; when it boils over turn down fire low and cook this way for ten minutes or so. Do not stir rice at all—just leave it alone. When cooked this way rice is delicious; must be cooked somewhat dry.

This is the way Chinese cook rice and make chop suey. See that the iron kettle used for rice has a white lining of granite, or rice does not taste well.

LENTEN SOUPS

Economy Soup—Especially delicious when served with hot buttered toast. Dice three medium-sized potatoes and one bunch celery; boil until potatoes are well done; there should be about one quart. Add half pint rich milk, two tablespoons butter, salt and pepper to taste, and, just before serving, one bunch of fresh parsley minced fine. This will serve four people.

Split Pea Soup—For each quart of soup desired, simmer a cupful of split peas very slowly in three pints of boiling water for six hours or until thoroughly dissolved. When done rub through colander, add salt and season with one-half cup thin cream. Reheat and, when boiling, stir into it two teaspoons flour rubbed smooth in a little cold water. Boil up until thickened and serve. If preferred, the cream may be omitted and the soup flavored with a little celery or onion.

Pepper Soup—Pare six potatoes and slice thin; then pare two onions and slice thin; boil until done, then thicken with one tablespoon flour and use either milk or water with flour. One pepper can be cut very fine and put in the soup; add salt and butter to taste. A little dried beef can be added. (One can also boil the beef dried, and onions and thicken with milk and flour). Last, you can add boiled potatoes which have been left over from a previous meal and so have a change from fried potatoes.

BREADS AND CAKES

Nut Bread—One egg well beaten, three-fourths cup granulated sugar, one cup sweet milk, one cup nuts and raisins (half and half) chopped fine, three cups flour, three teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt. Sift together flour, baking powder and salt, then mix in nuts and raisins and add to other ingredients. Put in ordinary breadpan and let raise in warm place to top of tin (a little over half its bulk). Bake about forty-five minutes in moderate oven.

Oatmeal Bread—Heaping cup rolled oats, lard size of an egg, one-half cup sugar, one teaspoon salt; over this pour two cups boiling water. When cool, add one cake compressed yeast which has been dissolved in one-half cup warm water, teaspoon sugar, flour enough to knead (not too stiff). Put into pan, let rise, bake forty-five minutes. Half cup English walnuts makes it very good.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

Mother McGrew and Her Family.

Said Mother McGrew one nice morning in May:
"I hear there's a Sunday school picnic today;
We'll go if you promise to be very good."
And of course all the animals promised they would.

Said Mother McGrew, "Now what shall we take?"
The Rabbit said "pie" and the Ostrich said "cake."
But the Pig said, "Oh, mercy! take all sorts of stuff;
'Twould be a sad thing if we hadn't enough."

She started to work and soon Mother McGrew,
Had cooked enough food for a family or two;
And then the [illegible]

And almost at once the Pig said, "Let's eat quick,
For that is the best thing about a picnic."
But Mother McGrew said severely, "That's rude;
You must not be all the time thinking of food.

"Run off now and play and at quarter past two We'll have a nice dinner," said Mother McGrew.
So off they all scampered, both little and big,
The only one who didn't go was the Pig.

At a quarter past two they came back out of breath,
And said, "Now let's eat, we are most starved to death."
But though they went looking and searching around,

No one would have blamed Mr. Pig, I suppose,
But Mother McGrew saw some pie on his nose.
Said she, "Now, young man, you go home double-quick.
And you never again can attend a picnic."

And so he went home just as quick as he could
From the Sunday school picnic in Robinson's wood.
And since then at picnics I don't think you'll find
A Pig, or at least not the four-footed kind.

FROM CROWN TO TOE, 1830!

From the top of her little shirred silk hat to the toe of her smooth-fitting gaiter-boot, laced at the side, this spring maid is of the early nineteenth century. Her frock is most distinctly 1830, with its close basque, ruffled peplum and skirt trimmed with velvet ribbons and rosettes. Moreover, the silk of her frock—black faille—can almost "stand alone" as silk always used to do, if it was handsome silk, worth making up at all.

DECIDES IN FAVOR OF MISS MAXSON

Court of Appeals Affirms Judgment Against Monaton Realty Company.

CLAIM WAS ASSIGNED

Company Refused to Return Purchase Price or Re-sell Stock—Complainant Will Now Recover Amount Invested With Interest.

The New York Court of Appeals has just affirmed a judgment against the Monaton Realty Investing Corporation in favor of Miss Mabel A. Maxson, of Truell Court. In July, 1911, she met at Truell Court a man of pleasing personality, named C. McKay Smock, who was selling the securities of the Monaton Realty Investing Corporation. This company had splendid offices in the Times Square building, New York city, with other offices in about ten other cities.

It claimed to be capitalized at $1,000,000 and to invest the proceeds of the sale of its stock in New York income-producing real estate.

Mr. Smock induced Miss Maxson to take seven shares of the preferred stock of this company, which, he said, paid a dividend of 10 per cent. at $1.50 a share, upon an agreement made in his own name, whereby he agreed, if her brother, Henry L. Maxson, was dissatisfied, to resell the stock and pay back the purchase price.

When Mr. Maxson ascertained what his sister had done he immediately gave notice to the company of the guarantee made by its agent, before the stock was delivered, and upon further investigation gave notice to the company to return the purchase price or to resell the stock.

The company refused, and Miss Maxson assigned her claim to A. Sidney Malcomson, who lives next door to her brother at Freeport, Long Island. Suit was started in the name of A. Sidney Malcomson, in the New York Supreme Court, and the trial was held in February, 1912, at Mineola, Long Island.

The company's president, treasurer, auditor, salesmanager and agent, Smock, were present, and gave some evidence tending to show that the company did not sell stock, and that Smock was selling stock for the Rev. Charles E. Nash, who was then the company's salesmanager, and who then lived in North Plainfield. The jury, however, found against this contention and rendered a verdict for the full amount of the claim. An appeal was taken to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, sitting in Brooklyn, and there the judgment was affirmed by the five judges on the printed appeal record.

The company, being still dissatisfied, appealed to the Court of Appeals, and the case was argued on March 9, and this court has just handed down a decision affirming the judgment. This means that the Monaton Company have been beaten at every point.

The litigation has been pending for over three and a half years, and has been vigorously pushed by Miss Maxson's brother, Henry L. Maxson, of the law firm of Maxson & Jones, of Hempstead, L. I.

Mr. Maxson formerly lived in this city, and is a son of former-Mayor William B. Maxson, who died some time ago, but for twelve years past he has resided at Freeport, Long Island, and has just been made one of the trustees of that prosperous village.

The Monaton Realty Investing Corporation became insolvent while the appeal was pending in the Court of Appeals, and had it not been for the bond which was given to secure the judgment, Miss Maxson would have lost every dollar. It is quite likely now that she will receive her money, with interest.

The company carried the case through every court of the State of New York through which it could be carried.

CHRISTIAN HANSEN.

The funeral of Christian Hansen, who died at his home on McCrea place yesterday, following a long and tedious illness, will be held at the undertaking parlors at 200 West Second street Saturday afternon, at 2 o'clock. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery. Mr. Hansen was born in Copenhagen seventy-five years ago, and had lived in Plainfield for the past ten years. He is a shoemaker by trade. He is survived by his wife, one daughter, Miss Anna Hansen, and three sons, Herman, Martin and Otto Hansen.

MANY ENJOY "THE MASQUE OF PANDORA"

Novel Entertainment Given at the Seventh-Day Baptist Church.

"The Masque of Pandora," an entertainment written by Henry W. Longfellow, was presented at the Seventh-day Baptist church, last night, with great success under the auspices of the Women's Society for Christian Work, of that church. There was a large attendance and the play, which is a most difficult one to produce indoors, pleased the audience from start to finish. The beautiful effects which are obtained on an out-of-door stage were nearly equalled by those in charge of the play and the costumes and acting were largely responsible for its success.

All of the girls who took part were adapted to their parts, and Miss Sina Greve, who took the part of "Pandora," was exceptionally good. The chorus of ten girls also scored a hit with the audience while the sleeping scene where Pandora dreams was particularly effective. Mrs. F. J. Hubbard presided at the piano. Mrs. James E. Kimball, who was the coach, deserves much credit for the manner in which the entertainment was given.

The cast of characters follows:

"Pandora," Miss Sina Greve; "Hephaestus," Miss Nellie St. John; "Euphrosyne," Miss Evalois St. John; "Hermes," Mrs. Miriam West; "Prometheus," Miss Mary Hunting; "Three Fates," Miss Anna Stillman, Miss Dorothy Hubbard, Mrs. F. J. Langworthy; "Epimetheus," Mrs. N. E. Lewis; chorus, the Misses Isabel Randolph, Margaret Kimball, Frances Mosher, Beatrice Cottrell, Evalois St. John, Frances Kinne, Stephana Shaw, Violet Johnston, Marion Worden, Elizabeth Kellogg.

LOCAL TOURISTS OFF FOR THE EXPOSITION

President W. G. Besler, of the C. R. R., and Family Leave in Private Car Today.

The private car of W. G. Besler, of West Seventh street, president of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, left the North Avenue station at 2:40 this afternoon en route to the West. Mrs. Besler and other immediate members of the family boarded the train here.

The party will go to Nashville, Tenn.; New Orleans and Los Angeles, Cal., and will return in about four weeks. Rev. F. J. Hubach Reports Successful Year for Local M. E. Churches.

NEW FINANCIAL PLAN

Samuel Bingaman Commended for His Activity—High Priced "Concert Choirs" Criticized by Bishop Henderson.

Special to Plainfield Press:

Newark, March 2—Rev. F. J. Hubach, former pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, of Plainfield, and superintendent of the Elizabeth district, made his annual reports at yesterday afternoon's meeting of the fifty-eighth Newark Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, in St. Luke's church here. In that portion of the resume devoted to Plainfield he told of the good work accomplished during the past year in the First M. E., Monroe Avenue M. E. and Grace M. E. churches.

According to his statistics the contributions for benevolences in the First M. E. church this year exceeded those of any other church in the district. In the latter congregation a new life has been injected and renewed activity has been apparent along every line. In the Grace M. E. church he said that ninety new members had been added to the roster and fifty-four were enrolled and nine on probation. He laid special emphasis on the work Samuel Bingaman, of Plainfield, has carried on during the past year in the Elizabeth district, in aiding churches to adopt a modern financial plan of which he was the founder. Mr. Hubach said that a survey of conditions in the Elizabeth district brought out the fact that marked progress had been made during the past year and all of the churches were in flourishing circumstances.

Rev. Winfield C. Snodgrass, formerly pastor of the First M. E. church in Plainfield, but now in the Market Street church, in Paterson, was one of the speakers at the meeting yesterday afternoon. He told of the religious wave sweeping over Paterson, saying that congregations are overflowing and each day persons are testifying of their confessions of faith. Mr. Snodgrass said that one person who professed a change of heart to him, when asked "Has Billy Sunday got you" replied: "Billy Sunday has not got me, but Jesus Christ has."

During his remarks at yesterday's meeting, Bishop Theodore S. Henderson, of Chattanooga, Tenn., criticised the present method of having high salaried choirs in churches which he termed as "concert choirs."

"If it was in my power no one but a Christian man or woman would be allowed to sing in a choir of a Methodist Episcopal church," said the bishop. He emphasized that he was opposed to the choir of high salaried singers and advocated the evangelistic choirs in churches.

The bishop intimated that some ministers preach because they are pastors and not because they have been called by God. "I wonder if some ministers preach only because they are pastors of churches?" said the speaker, "and it is possible that it is so."

The bishop also criticised church members of wealth who live in fine houses and argue about having the Lord's house plain. He remarked that he considered nothing too good for the Lord.

WESTFIELD AUTO VICTIM IS IN A SERIOUS CONDITION

It was reported at Muhlenberg Hospital this afternoon that Bernard Littlefield, the 14-year-old Westfield boy who was struck by Mrs. Thomas Sperry's automobile, in that place, yesterday, was still in a serious condition. The little victim remains in an unconscious condition, and it is believed his head and spine have been badly affected.

The driver of the automobile, Joseph Vail, gave himself up to the Westfield police after the accident, and was held pending the outcome. Littlefield had been riding on a wagon and jumped directly from the vehicle in front of the car. Mrs. Sperry's home is in Cranford.

RESCUE MISSION NOTE.

GODFREY WEINMAN'S HOME IS ENTERED

Sometime between the hours of 7:30 and 9:30 o'clock last night burglars entered the home of Godfrew J. Weinman, 16 Westervelt avenue, and stole articles of jewelry valued at about $200. Entrance was gained through a window in the back part of the house. The marauders "pulled" the job while the family was away from home.

As soon as the discovery was made the local police were notified, but as yet no clue to the thief has been unearthed. Sergeant Maurice Higgins is working on the case today. Although only meager details are available it is the opinion of the police that the looting was engineered by "local talent" and it is possible that the thief may still be in the city.

The articles stolen include valuable watches, stick-pins, rings and other articles of jewelry.

WILLIAM ELLIS IS PLACED ON TRIAL

As a Witness He Gave Evidence That Incriminated Himself.

Because he gave evidence that incriminated himself in the case of the State against Thomas S. Hardy, of Plainfield, tried before Police Court Judge Mahon in Elizabeth this morning, William Ellis was ordered arrested and placed on trial. The complaint, which was of a serious nature, was later dismissed by Judge Mahon, sitting as a justice of the peace.

Hardy, who was represented in court by Councilman Francis J. Blatz, of the law firm of Codington & Blatz, was accused of a serious offense by Miss Matilda Lazzi, of Marshall street, Elizabeth. He is twenty-two years old. Judge Mahon ordered Hardy to furnish a bond of $500. This amount was not forthcoming, and he was committed to the Union county jail.

AUTO ENGINE TEST FIXED FOR SATURDAY, APRIL 3

It was announced by Chief T. O. Dorne today that the official test of the new Nott fire engine would take place on Saturday afternoon, April 3. The pumping will probably be at two points, Elm place and Greenbrook, and also Madison avenue and Greenbrook. The delay in holding the test is due to the breaking of one of the pumps, an absolutely new one having been installed.

The engine will be operated during the test by William Swenk, the Nott Company's expert, who has been in the city awaiting the trial. The machine has been given several preliminary tests during the past few days, and has worked to perfection.

CARPENTERS WILL DEMAND INCREASE

Members of Local No. 155 Will Walk Out on May 1 if Raise is Denied.

MEETING LAST NIGHT

Discussion Brings Out Facts Regarding the Justice of the Trades' Request—Want Fifty Cents a Day Additional.

At a largely attended and enthusiastic meeting of Local No. 155, Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, in Trades Council Hall, last night, the members went on record as taking a determined stand in the matter of a daily increase of wages of fifty cents, beginning May 1. Notification to this effect was given the master builders on November 7 last, but so far only one reply has been received, in which it was stated that the employers did not see the consistency of the demand. The carpenters agreed last night that unless a raise was forthcoming on May 1 every member of the union would "walk out" on that date. This move would affect not only the city and borough, but all the suburban towns as well.

In last night's discussion it was pointed out that the carpenter today is the poorest paid of all the house-builders, and at the same time has to provide the most expensive kit of tools and take practically all the responsibility in frame construction work. The carpenters' pay is now $4 per day; that of the electricians, tinners, neaters and plumbers, $4.50 per day; masons, $5 and $5.20 per day, depending on the class of work. The lather, who carries only a hatchet and nails, get $4.80 a day. The request for an additional fifty cents was considered justifiable by the carpenters when these other figures were taken into comparison, and also that this branch of the trade put out an average of $100 for a working outfit and spends from $1 to $3 a month in keeping tools in shape.

President Harold Dahl was in charge of the meeting, and gave the members every opportunity in which to talk the matter over. It was brought out that the master builders had been afforded every opportunity to discuss the proposition, but did not do so; also, that the carpenters are fully aware of the present indstrial conditions, and in no wise wish to antagonize or hold back any building that might be contemplated. It was further made plain that the increase had been asked for by the entire North Jersey district, which includes Hudson, Essex and Union counties. At the meetings of each local in this district during the past week, resolutions were passed to the effect that every union carpenter would go out on May 1 unless his daily wage was made $4.50.

In speaking of the matter to a Daily Press reporter today, a member of the Carpenters' Union said:

"Every member of our union regrets that the public has gained the idea that the demands of the carpenters are arbitrary or unjust. When the notice was given the Master Builders on November 7, conditions are not as they are today, and we have been ready at all times since to talk the proposition over with the bosses. Their attitude has been anything but one that would bring the question to an amicable adjustment. We do not want to combat the Master Builders or hamper them in any way; in fact, I might say that when Mt. St. Mary College was being erected, members of the union worked for less pay than that to which they were entitled under a new ruling in order to save the contractor from financial loss. We have always been ready and willing to do our share, and all we ask is a fair deal from the bosses and public."

WANT CRIBS AND CARRIAGES.

The City Union of the King's Daughters today makes an urgent appeal for donations of cribs and baby carriages with which to carry on its work at the Day Nursery. It is believed that at this time, when many people are cleaning house, they may find cribs and carriages which they would be willing to give to the Nursery for its work.

DUNELLEN CITIZEN CALLED BY DEATH

Robert F. Borgardus Passes Away After an Illness of Four Weeks.

Following an illness of four weeks from a complication of troubles Robert F. Bogardus, one of Dunellen's best known and progressive citizens, died at his home on New Market road, that borough, at 4:15 this morning. He had been sinking gradually for several days and the end was not unexpected.

Mr. Bogardus was a native of Hudson, N. Y., where he was born in 1855. He removed to Dunellen twenty years ago and from the time he first located there took an active interest in municipal affairs. He was at one time president of the Borough Council and also served for many years on the Board of Education. Many of the up-to-date methods adopted in the schools of Dunellen were due to his efforts.

Mr. Bogardus was business manager of the Christian Intelligencer, the official publication of the Dutch Reformed church in America. He was an aggressive business man and his connection with the paper materially aided in placing it on the firm basis it has held for many years. Mr. Bogardus in his private life was an energetic church worker and the First Presbyterian congregation, of Dunellen, suffers a great loss in his demise. He was an elder of the church and a teacher in the Sabbath school, while at all times his advice and counsel were freely given to the pastor and officials.

Beside his wife, Mr. Bogardus is survived by two sons, Robert F., Jr., and J. Arthur Bogardus; also a sister, Mrs. Cora S. Hawley, of New York. Arrangements for the funeral have not been completed as yet.

EIGHT MEN PASSED THE EXAMINATIONS

This Number Out of Twelve Secured Good Percentage in Physical Tests.

Physical, medical and mental tests for twelve of the applicants for the vacancy in the local police force were conducted yesterday, the medical and physical phases taking place in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium and the mental tests in the city building last night. Physical Director Robert Meermans, of the Y. M. C. A., had charge of the physical tests. City Physician Norman W. Currie conducted the medical tests; and City Stenographer George W. Wean, the mental tests.

Eight of the twelve candidates went through the examinations in the Y. M. C. A. with a percentage that entitled them to take a chance at the mental questions last night. The men are competing for the vacancy caused by the retirement of Patrolman Nicholas Meyers. Police Chief Kiely personally supervised the work.

According to Director Meermans, several of the would-be coppers possess physical measurements that would make them valuable assets to the local force, and the police board will undoubtedly be able to select at least one man who measures up to the standard. The names of the successful competitors will be turned over to the board at the next meeting and the naming of a man will probably take place at that time.

MRS. BRANDT GIVEN A PLEASANT BIRTHDAY SURPRISE

The informal program also included solos by Mrs. Walberg and Mrs. Johnson.

A set of very fine China, cut flowers and potted plants were presented Mrs. Brandt in honor of the occasion, as she is held in very high esteem by her many friends. A very fine Swedish supper was served about 11 o'clock.

RUSSIANS DRIVE AUSTRIANS BACK

Czar's Troops Engaged in Terrible Fight Near Hungary.

ATTACK IS DESPERATE

Allied Fleet Penetrates the Dardanelles and Opens Heavy Fire—Germans Burning Public Buildings in Suwalki.

London, March 25—"On to Cracow and Hungary!" is now the Russian cry. A great battle is already in progress in the Carpathians which, it is believed, will go far toward settling the fate of Hungary.

The Russian forces investing Premysl which have been released through the surrender of the Galician fortress are being rushed to support the Russian troops in this protracted engagement.

Meanwhile the expected Russian advance on Gracow has begun as shown by the Austrian announcement of the destruction of a pontoon bridge across the lower Dunajec, forty miles from Gracow.

For months the Russians have been holding the eastern bank of this river, but with Premysl fallen they are apparently striking out on the same line that led them to the outskirts of the ancient Polish capital in their last advance.

It was on the lower Dunajec that they broke through the Austrian lines and thrust forward the army that cut off large Austrian and German forces and compelled them to retire into Premysl.

The correspondent of the "Lokalanzeiger" of Berlin, with the Austrians in the east telegraphs that a great battle is raging which will not come to a decision for several days. He adds: "The next few days will probably se the release of the Premysl investment army engaged in this struggle."

Rome, via London, March 25—A message to the Tribuna from its Athens representative, says that the allied fleet penetrated the Dardanelles at 10 o'clock yesterday morning and opened a heavy fire on the Turkish forts. The latter replied, but feebly, and several ceased firing after a short bombardment.

Rome, March 25—Bulgarian neutrality is practically ended, declares a long message received by the Messaggero from its correspondent in Sofia. Bulgaria can put 300,000 men at the disposition of the Allies at a moment's notice.

Paris, March 25—The French war office gave out the following statement this afternoon:

"In Champagne there was very lively artillery action yesterday. In the region of hill No. 196 we repulsed three attacks.

"At Eparges we repulsed three counter attacks made by the enemy. There is nothing to report on the rest of the front."

Greece has committed a great mistake in not declaring for intervention at present. It will suffer for failing to assist the Allies, declared ex-Prime Minister Jonesco, in an interview granted the Bucharest correspondent of the Petit Parisien. He stated that Bulgaria is about to profit by King Constantine's mistake.

The Germans in avenging the occupation of Memel by the Russians, have started on their policy of burning public buildings in Suwalki, says a despatch from Petrograd.

Amsterdam, March 25—Airmen of the Allies, last night, dropped bombs on a German aerodrome at the village of Gits in West Flanders near Roulers. A number of soldiers were wounded and aircraft sheds damaged.—Bombs also were dropped at Standies near Bruges. The big movement of German troops from Bruges to Eecloo continues.

Berlin, March 25 (by wireless)—The German war office gave out the folowing statement today:

"Western theatre—There were only artillery duels on the front yesterday, with the exception of unimportant engagements on the Meuse heights southeast of Verdun and at Hartmannswe.

"Eastern theatre—Russian attacks east and southeast of Augustowo near Jednorozek and northeast of Frasnyzs near the northwest were repulsed."

Washington, March 25—Acknowledgement was made at the State Department today, that the reply to the British note conveying the order in council for the blockade of all shipping to and from Germany, Austria and Turkey was nearing completion.

DUNELLEN

EDITOR DAY REVIEWS DUNELLEN'S HISTORY

Interesting Paper Presented at Borough's Twenty-ninth Anniversary Celebration.

The historical paper prepared by George W. Day, editor of the Dunellen Call, and read at the borough's twenty-ninth anniversary celebration this week, was full of interest to residents of the borough and others. A part of Mr. Day's paper follows:

"Until the laying out of Dunellen the territory in which is comprised Dunellen, Lincoln and New Market was known only as New Market and the station of the Central Railroad was at the now Grove street crossing. There it remained for sometime or until 1870, after Dunellen began to develop.

"In those days New Market was known as Quibbletown and Plainfield as Pinchgut. In 1886, John Taylor Johnson, the president of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, conceived the idea of laying out towns along the road and Dunellen was one of them. Not knowing what to name it and as he had a favorite niece named Ellen Dunn he twisted the name around and called it Dunellen.

"Originally it comprised 300 acres lying on the north of the railroad tracks. The land was purchased from the following. Elisha Coriell, 90 acres; George Smock, 80 acres; Samuel B. Merrell, 20 acres, and two or three smaller plots. After being mapped out and streets cut through the lots were offered for sale. Among the first purchasers were W. S. Stevens, Nathan Vars, William Richardson and John Runyon, and the first two houses were built in 1869. These were erected by John Runyon and William Richardson. Mr. Runyon built in 1868 a small building in which he lived and conducted an undertaking business. This building, which has since been moved, is now occupied as a dwelling opposite the Lincoln School. Mr. Runyon built his house, now occupied by John Manning, on the corner of Front street an Washington avenue in 1869 and this is probably the first house erected in Dunellen. The building on the opposite corner now occupied by Alvah Gray was erected the next year by William Richardson and is probably the second house built. During the same year Stephen Affrech built the house now occupied by George W. Churchill and then came the VanMiddlesworth house on the opposite corner. Other residences quickly followed, some of the character of those named with others less pretentions.

"Upon the laying out of Dunellen the only store was in the building occupied by the railroad as a station, which was kept by Charles Pope and previously by Lewis Boice, Richard Coriell and Charles Morgan.

"During the early years business houses were established on North avenue by Charles Pope, as a general store; Joseph Maier, as a shoe shop and saloon; Pope & Thorn, hardware; P. W. Brakley, druggist, and Isaac H. Dunn, feed store. These stores were all destroyed by fire in 1875, and were rebuilt in brick and reoccupied by former tenants.

"In 1872, the Goth building, now the Kupfenberg building, was erected. In 1873 the Hetfield building now occupied by Titsworth and Richter was put up. The Ratti building followed in 1873 and was occupied by Michael Finger as a bakery. In 1887 Mr. Finger moved into the building now occupied by George Zink. The Mesler building was also built in 1873. In 1878 the one story Kratzel building now occupied by Joseph Maier, was erected. In 1870 the Vars building was completed and occupied by Charles Boice as a grocery and general store. About this time Francis Esty erected the building now occupied by John Marien and Benjamin Onderdonk occupied it as a feed store. It was used for sometime by LeGrande Fulton as a saloon and purchased by Dr. Brakley in 1886. The J. H. L. Peters building was built by Mr. Peters in 1879. Alvah Gray and William H. Cole came here in 1882 and opened a lumber and coal yard in connection with a feed store on the site of the new Gallagher building. During these years several pretentious and commodious dwellings were erected south of the railroad notable among which were the residences of Christian Scheffin, John W. Handred, Captain Roberts, Isaac Dunn and Isaac D. Titsworth.

"A postoffice was established in 1871 with Charles Pope as postmaster; he was succeeded by Charles Boice, then James Harold, then Peter C. Staats, then Charles A. Coriell, then Dr. Brakley, then Adam Dealaman, then Henry S. Garretson and tehn you can guess the next.

"The old school house still standing was replaced by the Whittier School in 1874 and the Lincoln School followed in 1891. About this time building activities almost completely ceased and it was seldom that a transfer of real estate took place until the Central New Jersey Land Improvement Company determined to dispose of its holdings, reduced the price to such a point that its property was sold quickly and building operations became active.

"The first paper published was the Journal, a monthly issued by James Phillips in 1875. The next a trifle larger was called the Herald and published by Onderdonk Brothers in 1876. This was supplanted by the Rock in 1877, which was published by E. C. McGeahy. The paper was of a spicy nature and the editor left town on publication day for a few days to allow those referred to in its columns opportunity to cool off a little. The paper lasted about two years and had a large sale between Bound Brook and Elizabeth. The Call came next and never missed an issue on Thursday save one—which came out Friday. John Peters, Adam Dealaman, Arthur S. Giles, Walter G. Runyon and a few others were responsible for this 'miss'."

PICKING A PICKPOCKET.

Rules That Guide Chicago Detectives In Spotting Their Man.

How to tell a pickpocket when you see one—the feat is apparently not difficult, for all applicants who take the civil service examination to become Chicago detectives are required to have mastered it.

"What are the physical characteristics of pickpockets?" the would be thief catchers are asked.

And this is the answer they are expected to give:

"Pickpockets ordinarily travel in mobs and are of two distinct types—one small or medium stature, the other tall and muscular. As a general rule, the age runs from eighteen to thirty-five. Their hands are soft, show no signs of work, and the fingers of all except the 'stall' and particularly the fingers of the 'wire' are long and slender. Their eyes are shifting and furtive. Their complexion is generally sallow and without distinct color, this being due either to prison pallor in types or to the use of cocaine or other drugs. The cocaine users show drawn features and prominent cheek bones and usually have distinct rings around the eyes.

"The temperament of pickpockets is high strung because of the dangers of the 'profession' or from the use of drugs. At the same time they are polite almost to the point of obsequiousness. They seldom carry weapons and rarely resort to force. On duty they dress to suit the occasion, generally well, but not conspicuously. They avoid wearing anything that might lead to identification." — Baltimore American.

OUR FIRST ELECTION.

Methods In the Days When Washington Was Chosen President.

At the first national election at which General Washington was chosen president only eleven of the thirteen states voted, North Carolina and Rhode Island not yet having entered the Union, and in only three—Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia—were popular elections held. In the other eight states the legislatures chose the electors. New York did not choose electors because of a feud between the anti-Federalist house and the Federalist senate.

One exciting incident was caused by the fear on the part of Alexander Hamilton that John Adams, who was on the ticket for vice president with Washington, was plotting to tie the vote, and thus by throwing the election into the national house of representatives defeat the Father of His Country for president. So real was this fear in Hamilton that he dispatched messengers on horses to Virginia, Connecticut and New Jersey to stampede the legislatures of the latter two states to Washington.

So long did it take to gather news that Washington was actually inaugurated president before some of the remote counties in Virginia had sent in their returns. In this first election there was only one ticket and there was no campaigning. There were only about 3,000,000 inhabitants in the country at that time, and the whole cost of setting up the machinery of this presidental election is estimated at less than $100,000.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

The Spinster's Hint.

A maiden well advanced in years used to wait every morning for the postman, a bachelor of about her age and ask him if there were not a letter for her. Several weeks passed thus but the anxiously expected letter did not arrive. Finally one morning the postman said to her:

"Well, tomorrow you shall get your letter if I have to write it myself."

"That's right; do it," replied the old maid. "I shall be delighted to accept it."

"Well," said the postman, smiling, "what do you want me to write—a business letter or a love letter?"

"If you mean business, please write a love letter!" was her blushing reply. —London Scraps.

Ownership of the Air.

Our ancestors must have foreseen the aeroplane or they would not have embodied in the law the principle that he who owns the land owns the column of air above "usque ad coelum," or up to the skies. This can be traced back as far as the reign of Edward I., and from this time every authority to the present court of appeal has emphasized the right of every citizen not only to be king of his own castle, but of the sky above it.—London Chronicle.

Too Deep For Him.

A Britisher was announcing his views on things in general and summed up his own position by the statement, "Well, I've seen life." "But," said his American friend, "one of your own bright poets has said, 'Life's a joke.'" The Britisher is still exploring the remark.—New York Times.

Consistent.

She—This wait between the acts seems to me to be dreadfully long. He—Yes. You see, twenty years are supposed to elapse, and the management is simply trying to make the effect as realistic as possible.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

The Head Barber—Sure, Mr. Allgall. I'll lend you a dollar. Glad to help you out. Mr. Allgall—Many thanks, old man. They're having a sale of safety razors around the corner, and I didn't want to miss it.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

JOSEPH MILANI HELD IN $200 FOR GRAND JURY

Joseph Milani, an employe of the Vitelli & Arenallo liquor concern, of Greenbrook road, the borough, was arrested by Marshal Lemuel Pope yesterday, shortly after noon, on Rock avenue, charged with selling beer without a license on a public highway. Milani went out on a wagon belonging to the borough firm with a driver, and, it is said, sold a case of beer to the laborers in that section.

In the borough court yesterday afternoon, before Justice Snape, Milani pleaded guilty to the charge and was held under $200 bond for the grand jury.

MRS. MORRIS BLOCK SEEKS ABSOLUTE DECREE

Alleging that her husband, Morris Block, had committed certain marital indiscretions, Mrs. Sarah Block, of this city, the taking of testimony in her suit for divorce was begun before Special Master in Chancery Joseph T. Hague, in Elizabeth, yesterday afternoon. The petitioner names Miss Bessie Thompson as co-respondent, and claims that her husband is living with the other woman at 127 West Fifth street, this city.

Vice-Chancellor Lewis previously granted Mrs. Block temporary alimony and she is now fighting for an absolute decree. Owing to the serious illness of Mrs. Block's ten-year-old son, Union County Prosecutor Alfred A. Stein, who represents the petitioner, requested an adjournment of the hearing and it was granted.

JURY RETURNS VERDICT IN FAVOR OF THE DEFENDANT

John McIntyre, of North avenue, instituted suit before Judge Walter L. Hetfield, Sr., and a jury in the local District Court, this morning, for $19.50 against Jeremiah McDonald, a North avenue restaurant proprietor. Through his attorney, Martin Stutsman, the plaintiff alleged that McDonald owed him for a month's rental of a restaurant in which the latter was formerly located and also for water rent and some glass that he said had been broken.

Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., of the firm of Reed & Hetfield, appeared for the defendant and claimed that the owner of the building refused to allow his client certain lease privileges. The jury was out five minutes and returned a verdict in favor of Mr. Hetfield's client, of "no cause for action."

STORIES OF WAR NOT FOUND IN OFFICIAL DISPATCHES

Lively German "Sausages" Make Frenchmen Dance Until They Learn How to Dodge Them.

Trenches So Close Together Soldiers Sometimes Wander Into Enemies Without Warning.

FROM the battlefields of the great war continues to come to this country a flow of stories, some gay, some grave, but all interesting. Below are printed some of the latest.

A French infantry officer gives information of the German bomb throwers we have been mentioned frequently of late in the official bulletins:

"What we most fear are the German 'sausages,' or 'minenwerfer' (mine throwers), hurled through the air by special machines. They turn upon themselves like big sausages and fall with an enormous noise. They are even amusing, for they go slowly and give one plenty of time to run a few yards after they are seen. After the first day one learns to recognize the sound of the explosion. Every one lifts his nose, and the first to perceive the direction of the danger cries, 'Sausage to the right!' 'Sausage to the left!' 'Sausage behind!' or simply 'Ours!' when he believes himself in the direct line of the trajectory.

"This little game sometimes lasts two hours, until the artillery gets the range and silences the German 'sausage makers.'"

Walked Into Focs' Camp.

An English eyewitness of the war operations in France relates an occurrence illustrating the situation due to the nearness of the combatants and the frequently changing possession of the trenches. He says:

"Wishing to find out whether certain trenches were occupied after our troops had been fighting during the day, two officers set out at night to get in touch with our men. They came to a communication trench which appeared to run in the right direction and walked down it. The first thing they came upon was a dugout with candles burning and German equipment scattered about. Thinking it might have been captured, they continued down the trench, taking the precaution of blowing out the candles.

"Presently they came to another trench running at right angles to the one they were in. No sooner had they entered than they were challenged sharply in German. They fled, and a shower of bullets pattered after them. A race for the exit followed, the pursuers and pursued floundering in the mud and dodging around the traverses. Fortunately the night was dark, and the Englishmen escaped unhurt after several minutes spent under the fire of the enemy in trenches surrounded on all sides by Germans."

Soldier Saved by His Dog.

Split the Wind is a four legged soldier, says the Paris Figaro. He was born in Algeria of unidentified parents, a child of the street, who while still young learned to take care of himself in all circumstances.

Intelligent and affectionate, he loved the master that fate had given to him and who rewarded his devotion by good care and by caresses. Then came the war, and his master was called to the colors. Separation was impossible. Split the Wind managed to smuggle himself on board the transport taking his master to France.

He crossed the sea; he crossed France; he was in Belgium and participated in the retreat; then he was in the battle of the Marne, intrepid and joyous companion of the regiment, participating in the dangers of life in the trenches.

One evening during an assault a shell burst, tearing up the earth, covering the body of his wounded master. Split the Wind, rolled over and over by the shock, picked himself up and ran to the spot where he had seen disappear the one who was all to him. Resolutely he put himself to the task, his nose guiding him. Feverishly, indefatigably, he scratched and dug. Night had fallen; the battle line had moved onward. Still Split the Wind kept at his work. At last he reached his master.

Carefully he scratched the earth away from his master's head. Then he crawled out of the hole his tired paws had dug and, sitting on top, began to bark.

Far away the twinkling lanterns of the sanitary troops showed where they were at work on the wounded. Split the Wind's mournful howls kept up ceaselessly. At last he was heard, and the hospital corps men arrived. The wounded man, rescued by the animal's devotion from a horrible death, was dug out and carried to the field hospital. Two days afterward he was sent to the American hospital at Neuilly. Split the Wind accompanying him, for no one had the heart to separate the little animal from his master. Today, while his master, thoroughly cured, is getting ready to go back to the front, Split the Wind is the pet of the entire hospital. He is getting fat with the dainties that are showered upon him.

Monthly "Official Bath."

"Yesterday we had a novel experience," he says. "As none of us had seen soap or warm water for over five weeks, we were ordered to take an official bath. We were taken to a town in the rear of our lines and escorted to a large building, where facilities had been arranged for the purpose. In the first room we were numbered off into squads of ten men or so. In a second room we emptied our pockets and laid aside our boots, bonnets, puttees and sporrans. In a third room we threw the rest of our clothes into a heap, and then made a double quick to the showers. There were two men to each shower, and we were allowed ten minutes under the hot water with a generous supply of laundry soap.

"At the end of our ten minutes we hurried on to a drying room, where each man got a huge towel as thick and rough as a carpet. Then we rushed off to a dressing room, where an attendant gave us anything we wanted in the way of brand new underwear, shirts and socks, while on hooks at one side were our clothes, which had been thoroughly fumigated.

"After we had got back our bonnets, boots and other property we were ushered into a room where a squad of barbers awaited us. When they were through we marched, spic and span again, into a tea room for tea and cigarettes. Could anything be better arranged?"

"Don't Shoot; I'm Irish!"

"Don't shoot, I'm Irish," served as a password to safety for a young woman student fleeing from a convent near Ypres when the fighting was raging there a short time ago. An account of the incident reaches London in a soldier's letter:

"One night after we had moved toward Ypres we heard a light footfall close to our outpost.

"The man in front challenged quickly and raised his rifle to his shoulder with the intention of firing if he did not get a satisfactory answer from the person approaching.

"'Don't shoot, I'm Irish,' came the reply, and then a pretty young woman dressed as a man stepped out of darkness.

"We are always suspicious nowadays, no matter what the person looks like, and for a time we could not take this woman at her own valuation. We allowed her to approach, but covered her with rifles all the time in order to make sure.

"She soon satisfied us that she had made her way from the Irish convent at Ypres. She was sent home to England the next day."

BOY-ED SAFE FROM ARREST.

International Custom and Federal Law Protect Accused Naval Attache.

Captain Boy-Ed, naval attache of the German empire in Washington, accused of aiding in the procurement of an American passport by fraud by Richard Peter Stegler, a German reservist, is entirely immune from arrest by American officers. Federal laws provide this and prescribe penalties for punishment of any one arresting a diplomatic officer. He cannot even be sued, unless his government consents.

This is laid down clearly by sections 4,063 and 4,064 of the United States Revised Statutes. These read:

Section 4,063. Process against ministers and their domestics void.

Whenever any writ or process is sued out or prosecuted by any person in any court of the United States or of a state or by any judge or justice whereby the person of any public minister of any foreign prince or state, authorized and received as such by the president, or any domestic or domestic servant of any such minister is arrested or imprisoned or his goods or chattels are distrained, seized or attached, such writ or process shall be deemed void.

Section 4,064. Penalty for suing out or executing such process.

Whenever any writ or process is sued out in violation of the preceding section, every person by whom the same is obtained or prosecuted, whether as party or as attorney or solicitor and every officer concerned in executing it shall be deemed a violator of the laws of the nations and a disturber of the public repose and shall be imprisoned for not more than three years and fined at the discretion of the court.

These sections were made law by the act of April 30, 1790, and it is provided also that the supreme court of the United States has exclusive jurisdiction over any proceedings taken against ambassadors, public ministers and their domestics.

Captain Boy-Ed, son of a Turkish father and a German mother, who is a popular novelist in the fatherland (Ida Boy-Ed), has played a conspicuous role in the development of the kaiser's navy. He is looked upon as one of the ablest of the kaiser's naval officers. For five years previous to his assignment to the naval attacheship of the German embassy at Washington Boy-Ed served at the imperial navy department in Berlin as the chief lieutenant of Grand Admiral von Tirpitz, secretary of the navy. His official title was chief of the "news division" of the navy, and practically the entire "intelligence service" of that branch of the German war establishment was under his supervision.

MOTHER RESENTS CHARGE AGAINST SON

Edward Weisbacker Accused of Misappropriating Articles of Employer.

Motherly sympathy for a twelve-year-old boy turned Somerset street, in the section near Manning avenue, into a state of turmoil at 7 o'clock last night. Earlier in the day youthful Edward Weisbecker had gotten "in Dutch" with his employer, Samuel Rubin, proprietor of the Red Cross Drug Store, the latter having accused him of misappropriating certain articles and some money.

Mr. Rubin, rather than have the boy placed in a cell, agreed to let the father, who lives at 10 Somerset street, make up for the discrepancy. All went well until the mother took up the matter early last evening.

She went to the store in fighting temperament last night, and upon entering the door declared that she was ready to "clean-up" on anyone who dared to refer to her son as a thief. She proceeded to make her challenge impressive until she spied a brass-buttoned minion of the law lurking in the store, and then did what most women would do under similar circumstances, faint. First aid remedies were administered, and in the meantime a crowd collected in front of the store.

DENIES ASSERTION OF HOTEL CLERK

W. J. Kitchen Positive That J. W. Osborne Was Not Here October 18 Last.

Despite the fact that Frank D. Safford, formerly employed by him as a clerk in Hotel Kensington in North avenue, swore that his conversation and his opportunity of observing the couple was such that his identification of Rae Tanzer and James W. Osborne as the two that registered at the local hostelry on October 18, 1914, as man and wife, William J. Kitchen on the stand yesterday stoutly denied that the identification was correct. Mr. Kitchen, who is the proprietor of the hotel, testified under subpoena at the hearing in New York yesterday before a government inquiry in the case.

In an interview with a Daily Press reporter this morning Mr. Kitchen said:

"I think my opportunities of observing the couple were equally as good as those of Safford and I would be willing to stake my last dollar that the couple were never in my hotel on the date in question. The guests who visited the Kensington on or about that date were not by any stretch of imagination Mr. Osborne and Miss Tanzer."

ANNUAL EXHIBIT TO BE HELD HERE APRIL 6

Arrangements are being made for the annual exhibit of garments for Dr. Grenfell's mission in Labrador, to be held at the home of Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, on West Eighth street, Tuesday afternoon, April 6, to be followed by a tea. The exhibit this year promises to be much larger than last year.

Dr. James Wiltsie, of New York, who has spent considerable time with Dr. Grenfell in Labrador, will be present at the exhibit and tell of some of the latter's work. Dr. Wiltsie will soon leave for China, where he goes as a medical missionary.

GIVE A LINEN "SHOWER" TO MRS. LESLIE CRANE

Mrs. Leslie Crane was given a kitchen "shower" yesterday afternoon by the sewing circle of which she is a member. The affair was held at the home of Mrs. William Stafford, on Putnam avenue, and was a complete surprise to Mrs. Crane. The gifts were presented in a very unique way, after which refreshments werre served by the hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. Crane have been living with the former's father on Westervelt avenue since their marriage, but will go to housekeeping in Elizabeth, as Mr. Crane is employed in an Elizabeth bank.

SALE NETTED $1,000.

The sale of horses, wagons and other implements owned by Maurice Higgins, of West Front street, held yesterday afternoon, attracted a large crowd, and good prices prevailed. Five horses and four wagons were sold, together with many other articles. The sale netted about $1,000. William Schorb was the auctioneer.

A Dry Land Boat Race.

A dry land boat race took place at some sports in the north of England last year and caused much merriment. The "crews" sit astride a pole and run backward round a course, steered by a "cox," who faces in the right direction. Tumbles, needless to say, are very frequent, and when the leader happens to lose his footing he generally "shipwrecks" the whole crew, to the vast enjoyment of their rivals and the spectators.—Wide World Magazine.

How Rusty Kettles Were Cleaned.

An old fashioned recipe for cleaning the inside of a rusty kettle consisted in filling it to the brim with hay. As much water as it will hold should then be poured over the top, the kettle placed on the fire and boiled for several hours, more water being added when required.

The Razor Quartet.

"Haydn once exclaimed when shaving, 'I will give my best quartet for a razor,'" remarked Sir Alexander C. Mackenzie in an address before the Royal institution, "and a man offering him a couple secured the manuscript of what is now called the 'Razor' quartet."

Plainfield, N. J., March 25, 1915.

WE CAN'T AFFORD IT.

One reason why our Government should anxiously avoid being driven into war by every honorable means is that our taxpayers, burdened as they now are with certain heritages of previous wars, the war of 1861-65 in particular, really cannot afford another.

For example, we are taxed to pay $174,483,000 annually in military pensions, which is about twice the cost of maintaining our standing army, and about equals the cost of maintaining the combined standing armies of Italy, Austria-Hungary and Japan aggregating 958,000 men. This greatly exceeds the cost of the British standing army, and is only twenty-eight millions less than the cost of the French army with its 783,000 men. Compare our annual pension bill of $174,483,000 with the following figures for the cost of the great standing armies of foreign countries.

Nation	Men	Cost
Germany	870,000	$293,289,000
France	783,000	202,141,000
G. Britain	262,000	143,331,000
Italy	206,000	90,025,000
Aus-Hungary	435,000	47,571,000
Japan	217,000	47,037,000

Certainly the United States cannot afford another great war; for, in addition to the sacrifice of life and the loss of treasure in the usual manner, it would put upon us and upon our children and grandchildren another vast pension burden, perhaps even more enormous than the present which, instead of decreasing as it should, has steadily increased for fifty years.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT.

Just now when taxes are an all prevalent topic in Plainfield, and the Taxpayers' Association is planning to have a survey made of civic matters, it is interesting to note that in Trenton, after several years of Commission form of government it has been found that taxes have not increased, although the city has grown, scores of improvements have been made, and it is better governed than ever under the old method. Since commission government was established in the State capital, the normal increase in the tax rate has diminished, rather than increased, the average gain for the past four years being estimated at two and two-thirds cents on the dollar, which, considering the improvements which have been made there is exceptionally small.

During the four years preceding the establishment of the commission form in Trenton, the yearly increase was 17 cents on a dollar. This means that the taxpayers of Trenton have been saved more than 14 cents on a dollar during the last four years, figuring on the average increase under the old form of government.

Thanks to Senator White the burden upon the Republican party has been materially increased, and there will be a lot of explaining required when that party goes before the people in November. An honest effort on the part of ten of the eleven Republican Senators to abolish the County Tax Boards, and save to the State nearly $100,000 a year was completely frustrated on Tuesday by White, when he voted with the ten Democrats and gave a majority against the repealer of the act which originally created the County Boards.

Former Governor Stokes, in whose fertile brain the plan for the boards originally developed, has said that they should have long ago served the purpose for which they were created, and yet Mr. White has thrown down his party associates and made the promises of economy on the part of the Republicans absolutely valueless. The Boards serve no useful purpose, other than to provide jobs for some ninety-four politicians, doing work that could be as well done for a small fraction of the money spent. It is particularly hard on the party which White represents to have a situation such as this arise, for the other Senators tried sincerely and honestly to pass the repealer. The only way in which the County Boards can now be done away with is for the people to see to it that the Republican party has a large majority in the Senate next year, and it is going to be a tough job to convince the people that this will bring it about.

It's always a pleasure to hear Plainfielders commended, and those who have been fortunate enough to hear the good things said of Assemblyman William N. Runyon by the hundreds of new friends he has made at Trenton are delighted with his success. He stands head and shoulders above every other man in the House of Assembly and has earned the respect of all with whom he has come in contact. Even those interests who opposed his stand on the local option bill have not hesitated to praise him for his outspoken advocacy of the measure, and his total disregard for what may be the political effect of his action. Perhaps the respect with which he is held by those with whom he has come in contact is best summed up in a remark made by the dean of all the newspaper men who has seen literally thousands of legislators come and go in the thirty or more years that he has been there, when he said the other day "over eight hundred bills have been introduced in the House this year. The best one of the lot, bar none, is Bill Runyon.' While said in a jesting manner, it undoubtedly expressed a sincere appreciation of Plainfield's favorite son.

If you can possibly get there, attend the meeting of the Taxpayers' Association at the High School tonight. What will be said will fully warrant any inconvenience which may be encountered in getting there. The Taxpayers' Association is being directed by a group of men who have the interests of the city at heart, and is deserving of the support of all residents who want to see the best government possible for Plainfield.

One of the city fathers has written the editorial for Saturday. He will give an interesting list of "don'ts" for Plainfielders which will be well worth reading.

DAUGHTERS OF THE CROSS HOLD SUCCESSFUL SALE

A successful sale was conducted yesterday afternoon in Truell Court, under the auspices of the Daughters of the Cross of the King's Daughters' Circle. The sale was given for the purpose of raising money for pledges to the city union.

As a result of the affair a substantial sum was realized to add to the fund. Mrs. Charles H. Lyman was chairman of the useful articles' committee, while Mrs. James C. Peck and Mrs. Lewis M. Krom had charge of the cake and candy tables, respectively.

Both of these organizations have been the means of doing a vast amount of good wherever they have been formed and the Plainfield guild is particularly active in helping the needy.

SIRES AND SONS.

R. W. Waters of St. Louis has retired after forty years as a railway conductor.

Joseph H. Choate, the dean of the American bar, is now eighty-three years of age.

Field Marshal von Hindenburg has been made an honorary doctor of law by the University of Breslau

Honorable T. Chase Casgrain, Canada's new postmaster general, was born in Detroit, though since childhood he has lived in Quebec.

Dispatches tell of the spartan conduct of Colonel Lopoukhine of the Russian army, who went to the body of his son, killed in Galicia, kissed his forehead and lips, remounted his horse and continued giving orders.

General Leman, the Belgian commander and hero of Liege, who was almost suffocated by gases from chemical bombs thrown into Fort Loncin when the Belgians refused to surrender, is now reported fully recovered. He was also severely wounded, and after being taken prisoner was removed to Magdeburg, where an operation was later found necessary.

A Roumanian Custom.

A strange custom is still observed in Roumania. When a servant has displeased his or her master the offender takes his boots in his hands and places them before the bedroom door of his master. It is a sign of great submission, and the boots are either kicked away as an intimation that the fault will not be forgiven, or else the servant is told to place them on his feet, which shows that he is forgiven.

Dress Well.

It is not enough that people shall be clad, they must be dressed. "Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy," was the advice of Polonius to his son. "rich, but not gaudy, for the apparel oft proclaims the man," and the advice is just as good today as it was 300 years ago.

Some Difference.

"What's become of that rascally young son of the Blowers?"

"I understand he is to take a course of ethics in one of our modern penological institutions."

"There! And I heard he had been sent to jail."—Baltimore American.

Connection Plain.

Brown—What a rig that woman has on! Jones (looking)—By Jove, that reminds me I've got to get some castor oil for— Brown—Eh! I fail to see how that rig can remind you of castor oil. Jones—The bad taste of it, my boy.—Boston Transcript.

Native Advantage.

"That little Irish girl fairly floats when she dances."

"Well, you know she comes from Cork."—Baltimore American.

MAY ABOLISH FIRE BELL AND SUBSTITUTE POSTALS

Certain influential residents of the village of South Plainfield are today considering the advisability of petitioning the Township Committee to pass an ordinance making it compulsory for the fire chief to send out postal cards to his corps of fire fighters when there's going to be a fire. Agitation along this line was aroused late yesterday afternoon when a spark from a Lehigh Valley Railroad engine ignited the roof of William Hamilton's real estate office

Soon after the blaze was discovered a couple of brawny villagers set about tolling the fire bell and for nearly one half hour continued the clanging. It brought no response, however, and in the absence of the "regular" firemen a corps of volunteer bucket wielders had to be pressed into service. It was explained later in the evening that all of the smoke-eaters were out of town when the fire broke out.

Several dwellings, including the Norman House, were in the immediate proximity of the blaze and but for the good work of the bucket brigade would probably have gone up in smoke. The young people of the village have announced a meeting for Monday night when the Washington Hose Company will be organized

PUBLIC SPEAKING CLASS.

The public speaking class will meet, as usual, this evening, in the Stillman School. This class is meeting with much approval and has an unusually large enrollment. Miss Mattison is the instructor in voice culture, and extemporaneous speaking.

BLINDNESS NOT THE ONLY FAULT THIS EQUINE HAD

Alleging that a horse for which he paid Peter Ritter, Jr., $75 did not measure up to the agreement of the sale, Fred Cassert, of Fanwood, has instituted suit in the local District Court through his counsel, V. W. Nash, Jr., demanding $200 damages. The buyer admits that he knew the animal was blind at the time the transfer was made, but declares that he was given to understand that it was able to do ordinary work, and that the blindness was its only fault.

Cassert charges that he found the horse to be unable to pull an ordinary vehicle of traffic, being physically unsound. Judge Walter L. Hetfield, Sr., this morning announced that the case would be tried next Wednesday morning.

Odd Bits of War News

Georges Carpentier, Frenchman and champion heavyweight pugilist of Europe, has been wounded and is now a German prisoner of war.

The latest craze in millinery—Belgian soldiers' caps—attained such great popularity in Brussels that the German authorities had to confiscate the new style of headgear from hundreds of women and to forbid their further use.

The short man makes the better fighter, says Dr. M. S. Pembrey, lecturer on physiology in London. This statement he bases on a careful study of the fighting capacity of tall and short races and also of the tall men and short men of the same race.

The Saxon minister of the interior has issued a warning against writing useless letters to General von Hindenburg. The minister declares that Von Hindenburg and his staff are compelled daily to attack a mountain of letters which reaches to the ceiling.

The war is teaching a great deal about dentistry, reports from the front say, and many new devices have been invented to fit emergencies, mostly by American dentists. When one man had his lower jawbone shot away a new one was made from a piece of rib.

Parisians daily make a close study of weather conditions to anticipate Zeppelin raids, and the favorite salutation is, "Is this Zeppelin weather?" A low wind and steady barometer are favorable for airship raids, and on such a day bets are made on whether the Germans will come.

DOCTOR FINDS MEANS OF FIGHTING LOCKJAW GERM

Expected to Save Thousands of European Soldiers' Lives.

A method of decreasing the great total of losses in the European war through the treatment of tetanus victims has been discovered by Dr. S. J. Meltzer of the Rockefeller institute of New York. Twenty-five instruments for use in bestowing the treatment have been manufactured. These will be presented to the foremost surgeons of the nations at war. Patents for the instruments have been thrown open to the world.

One of the greatest scourges of the war is lockjaw, which is widely prevalent because the tetanus germs are harbored in the soil of the richly cultivated areas that are now the scene of fighting. Thousands have died a most horrible death from lockjaw.

The established means of preventing tetanus is by a prophylactic dose of anti-tetanus serum. The soldiers in the trenches have been taught to administer these doses to each other.

The number of fatalities has been very great because as the disease progresses convulsions set in and the patient is so worn out by them that he dies of asphyxiation before the anti-tetanus serum becomes effective. As a result the treatment of the disease by the anti-toxin serum has been only moderately successful.

Dr. Meltzer found that an injection of a solution of magnesium sulphate (epsom salts) into the spinal membrane will produce a complete relaxation of the body for hours. This injection relieves the convulsions and the patient is not subjected to that great strain. The injection of the magnesium sulphate involves only a single danger. The relaxation of the muscles of respiration also relapse, a cessation in breathing resulting. In order to eliminate this danger the Rockefeller institute has devised an apparatus to produce artificial respiration, an instrument which, fixed in the mouth, effects pharangeal insufflation.

ANTI-"BRAINSTORM" BILL.

Insanity No Defense—That Plea to Be Adjudged After Conviction.

The "brainstorm" plea for persons accused of murder would be made unlawful by the terms of a bill introduced in the New York legislature by Assemblyman Simpson. The measure abolishes the plea of any form of mental derangement, either permanent or temporary, as an excuse or justification for the commission of a crime. Every defendant is presumed to have been mentally sane at the time of the commission of a crime, and the presiding judge shall rule out any evidence pertaining to the mental condition of the accused.

Under the bill the only question for the trial jury to determine is whether the defendant did or did not commit the offense alleged, regardless of his mental responsibility. After conviction and before sentence the defendant would have an opportunity to show that at the time of the commission of the offense he was mentally irresponsible. The district attorney may produce counter evidence. The presiding judge shall then determine the degree of crime of which the defendant is legally guilty.

Want to Make Jail of Library.

A movement was started in Amsterdam, N. Y., to transform the Carnegie city library building into a city jail. City officials, it is said, were making tentative plans showing the possible rearrangement of the building. The city cannot afford to maintain the library, they say.

Song of the Ticker.

The idle days at last have fled,
Construction time is here instead,
Though wars destroy and nations bleed,
I pledge a better day and creed.

I buzz and whir and jerk and stop,
Then chase quotations to the top.
And men may buy and men may sell,
For I perform my mission well.

I run my happy course with zest
And glad the secrets in my breast,
Of mines and ships and wealth to be
And wide flung signs of industry.

Ta-ra, tarum, like kettle drum,
I beat quick step for joys to come.
The past is dead. Long live today!
I'm off again, hip, hip, hooray!

THIS SANTA CLAUS GIRL SPREADING HAPPINESS.

Miss Olive May Wilson of Philadelphia Doing Unique Work.

Olive May Wilson is a young Philadelphia girl who made 5,000 children happy last Christmas and who is pushing a big scheme for making many times that number glad this year. Through energy, persistence and an unusually pleasing personality Miss Wilson has enlisted in her work the cooperation of the city authorities and of people all over the country.

The country knows of Miss Wilson from the fact that she managed, in defiance of law and precedent, to get the local postoffice authorities to deliver her all the letters addressed to Santa Claus which came through the mails, which have heretofore gone direct to the dead letter office and thence to the junkmen, and from the further fact that she has tried to get from congress the franking privilege on all packages sent in response to these letters. In the latter respect she has not been successful as yet, but she has by no means given up hope, says the American Magazine. Last December she went to Washington on the matter. Knowing no one, she called on Speaker Clark, Secretary Bryan, Admiral Dewey, Oscar Underwood, who surrendered at once, and then she happened to run across the vice president, who was immediately interested and secured her an interview with the president, who is the hardest man to see who ever sat in the White House.

Unfortunately the law does not permit the president to give the franking privilege or Miss Wilson would have come home with it. No one can resist her appeals. Finding that she could not possibly get her bill through in time, Miss Wilson wasted no hours in vain effort, but started in on the Christmas work. From city missionaries she secured additional names, until there were 5,000 on her list. She sent out a circular letter to thousands of prominent men and women all over the country, not asking for money, but approval. She got both. Ninety per cent of the letters were answered, mostly with checks, and there proved to be exactly three unregenerated Ebenezer Scrooges in the whole number. With the funds she bought 5,000 odd presents and, with the assistance of her family, put them up in parcels, directed and stamped them. Then she went to Postmaster Thornton of Philadelphia to insure prompt delivery.

Miss Wilson lives in Jenkintown, a fashionable suburb just over the city line, but it is in the jurisdiction of the Philadelphia postmaster. Mr. Thornton was aghast at the request, for at that time every substation, the general postoffice and rented buildings were crowded to the roof with the sudden rush of packages during the first holiday season of the parcel post. But he rose to the occasion (probably she made him), sent out for the parcels in special motors, and all were delivered on Christmas.

URGES NEW SHELL PLANT.

Daniels Wants Government to Make Its Own Projectiles.

That congress ought to appropriate $500,000 for a federal projectile plant was the recommendation of Secretary of the Navy Daniels to the house naval committee. He expressed the belief that only by government ownership of such a plant would it be possible to avoid payment of exorbitant prices. Thus far, he explained, the government has been unable to maintain competitive bidding.

He suggested that American manufacturers are loaded up with orders for shells from foreign countries and that perhaps this has affected their attitude toward government orders. Projectiles now cost $420 apiece, whereas under competitive bidding in the past the prices were far lower. The proper figure is about $350, he said.

AID FOR CONVICTS' FAMILIES.

Prisoners to Devote Spare Time Working at Their Crafts.

Convicts in the Joliet penitentiary put into operation a plan to raise a fund for the support of families of the men serving terms in the prison.

The 1,336 inmates agreed to pass their spare time at their craft and turn their product over to an agent through whom sales will be made. All money received will go into a general fund for the support of wives and children of the prisoners. The convicts call their organization the Joliet Penitentiary Mutual Benefit association.

The plan was proposed by "English Eddie," a skillful mechanic, who is regarded as one of the most notorious safe blowers in the country.

Swimming News and Notes

The 500-yard national swimming championship will be held at the New York Athletic Club natatorium this evening, at which time Hebner and McGillivray, of the Illinois A. C., and Wheatley and Vollmer, of the New York A. C., will try to break the existing American record of 6 minutes, 20 3-5-seconds made by Perry McGillivray in 1913. A closely fought contest is looked for, as all the entrants have been doing better than this time in practice.

There will also be a 100-yard handicap race, fancy diving and soccer water polo between the New York A. C. team and that of the West Side Y. M. C. A.

Swimming has become so popular among the fair sex, that the club has decided to make this another "ladies' night."

Jim Reilly, the former American mile champion, also member of the U. S. Olympic team in 1912, paid our little swimming pool in the High School, a visit the other night. Jim is travelling faster than ever, both at short and the middle distances. He has also proved himself to be a worthy rival of any of our American swimmers at the middle distances.

It is interesting to learn that the swimmers of the Brookline High School, of Boston, whose record-breaking feats have caused so much comment, were one and all taught to swim by means of the elementary crawl, of which Matthew Mann, their instructor, is an ardent advocate. Particular significance attaches to this fact when it is considered that most of the boys did not even know how to keep afloat three seasons ago. Any method which enables school-boys to attain such astonishing development within so short a time is well worth the attention of every progressive teacher of natation.

On Saturday, February 20, in the Philadelphia Turngemeinde pool, Miss Olga Dorfner, the fast swimmer and holder of the ladies' quarter and half mile championships, beat her former record of 56 1-5 seconds for 80 yards when she covered the distance in 55 4-5. Miss Dorfner does no special training for these performances, simply swimming occasionally and working regularly in the gymnasium, at which latter form of exercise she is as proficient as in the water, being a leader in the "gym" classes. What can the girls do in Plainfield

Miss Dorfner, who has been breaking the women's swimming records almost every time she swims, covered the 100 yards in a 60 foot pool, in the Turner races in the fast time of 1 minute 14 2-5 seconds, two seconds better than her previous time. Get busy girls; here is a record for you to tackle.

With the new High School tank thrown open to the public, you have the chance of your life to become proficient and fast swimmers.

K. Lovejoy will be entered in the 200-yard breast-stroke M. A. A. championship. Heraty, last year's winner of this event, will again be in New York to covet the title. However, he will have to pull harder to beat out Lovejoy this year.

Lehman, of Pennsylvania, plunged 74 feet in the Princeton meet, and broke the Brokaw pool record, besides showing the greatest distance made this year by a college man. He has now decided to enter both the Middle Atlantic and National A. A. U. championships, and if he can repeat his recent performance he should make a strong bid for honors.

Two national indoor swimming championships will be settled this week. Yesterday, the Pittsburgh Athletic Association held the 150-yard back stroke race, while tomorrow the New York Athletic Club will father the 500-yard free style race.

Harry Hebner, of the Illinois Athletic Club of Chicago, is the logical favorite for both titles, but he will face dangerous opponents in both contests. Russell Dean, of the Brookline (Mass.) gymnasium, is said to be travelling the classic back stroke course in world's record time, and Herbert Vollmer and Joseph Wheatley, of the New York Athletic Club, may be counted on to give the speedy Westerner a hard fight in the middle distance swim if they live up to their practice performances.

Press advices from San Francisco again announce that Ludy Langer, Ernest Smith and other aquatic stars of the California University, will come East for the approaching national championships, but so many false alarms have reached here this season from the coast that skepticism is excusable. At all events, a wire sent a week ago to the team captain inquiring about the prospects is still unanswered.

The soccer water polo players of the New York Athletic Club will have a tryout tomorrow night against the strong team of the West Side Y. M. C. A., New York, and the match probably will decide whether they are to be sent to the national tournament in Chicago on April 16. Some of the fastest sprinters in the district have been practising on the Mercury Foot squad, and Joe Ruddy, the manager, believes the boys have an excellent chance to defeat the champion team of the Illinois Athletic Club.

Notices received from Boston credit Leo Handy, of the Brookline High School, the interscholastic all around swimming champion, with a quarter mile trial in 5 minutes 22 seconds. If this be true, the lad now ranks with the best middle distance swimmers in America. Only Langer, of California, has beaten the mark. He established a world's record last summer of 5 minutes 22 1-5 seconds, which, taking conditions into consideration, is about five seconds faster than Handy's, for he made only five turns while the latter had the advantage of ten. Hebner's indoor figures of 5 minutes 22 2-5 seconds, however, are quite a bit slower than those of the Boston man, as he swam in a 60 foot pool and gained about eleven seconds on the extra turns.

Members of the Cincinnati Gymnasium are urging E. Harding to enter the national plunge for distance, in Boston, on Monday. He covered 72 feet in 50 seconds a few days ago, and would have gone further had not the end of the pool stopped him. His teammates believe he can beat 75 feet in a long tank and probably win the title.

The Columbia ataletic authorities will grant a sanction to the varsity swimming team to compete in a series of two meets with Yale and Pennsylvania, to decide the intercollegiate championship. This was the unofficial announcement made at the university the other day.

The fact that Columbia had refused to permit the varsity basketball team to enter a series of games to play off with Cornell for the intercollegiate championship last winter had led many to believe that the authorities would put a ban on extra season swimming meets.

Furthermore, it was said that the rules of the intercoilegiate Swimming Association provide for a play-off of all ties in league standings, and that Columbia in belonging to the league was bound to follow the constitution, whereas the constitution of the basketball league had no provision dealing with the play-off of a tie in the league standings when the question came up a year ago.

PLAINFIELDERS ONE POINT TO THE BAD

Battin High School Girls on the Larger End of a 11 to 10 Score.

The girls' basketball team of the Plainfield High School went to Elizabeth yesterday afternoon for a return game with the Battin High School girls, whom they defeated earlier in the season by a narrow margin. The Elizabethans, however, changed the decision in yesterday's contest, defeating the Plainfielders by a score of 11 to 10. The game was a fast one throughout, both quintets displaying a fine caliber of the court game.

Plainfield had the better of the game throughout the initial period, playing in fine form. Miss Dorothy Crane, of the home forces, caged two beautiful field goals, while Miss Ruth Morris numbered a goal and two fouls, placing the Plainfield team at the conclusion of the half at the better end of a score of 8 to 6. Miss Richart, of the Battinites, scored the whole six points for her team in the first half.

Miss Ogden replaced Miss Steward for the Elizabeth team in the second period, and her entrance into the contest instilled life into the Battin team. A field goal by Miss Ogden tied the score, but Miss Morris, of the local aggregation, soon forced Plainfield ahead again by two foul shots. Miss Ogden soon followed with another goal and a foul, placing the Elizabethans at the end of the thirty minutes of play with the better end of a score of 11 to 10.

EDDIE STALLINGS OUT WITH N. P. H. S. TEAM

Eddie Stallings, the local ballplayer, was out with the North Plainfield High School squad, on Hyde Oval, yesterday afternoon. There were about twenty candidates out to practice and Coach Tommy Mullin was also present. Stallings gave a few hints on the side and will continue to do so whenever he is able to attend a practice.

The squad is now rounding into form and a tenative lineup will probably be picked within a week. The first game is booked for a week from next Saturday. The oval is in fair condition and should be as good as last season when the first game is played. Batting and fielding formed the largest part of the day's work.

LOCAL YOUNG MEN ORGANIZE A WESTON WALKING CLUB

A number of local young men have organized an Edward Payson Weston Club for the purpose of taking periodical hikes across the country. The first trip was taken yesterday, and was to New Brunswick and back. The officers in the club are the following: President, Carroll Carpenter; guide, Alden Wagner; standard-bearer, Thomas Bunn.

Those who took part in the trip yesterday were: Albert Rowe, Wesley Barrett, Alden Wagner, Thomas Bunn, Frank Harding and Carroll Carpenter. All stood the "gaff" in good shape with the exception of President Carpenter, who became quite footsore before Plainfield was reached on the return. The next trip will be to Princeton, and if the college town is reached without too much fatigue an attempt will be made to walk back home, otherwise the club will come back by train.

DANGER SIGNALS.

Red Is Used Because It Is the Most Effective Color.

Red is the color universally used as a danger signal because it can be seen farther than any other color. It is also the color that "attracts attention, excites curiosity and arouses to action," as William Churchill said in an address before the Illuminating Engineering society.

Green, the complementary of red, is seen almost as far as red, but green is the color of which nature makes lavish use, and therefore a green signal is less easily recognized than a red, because the former may easily be taken for a part of the background, while the latter always contrasts vividly with the background. So green has been used for a clear or a cautionary signal.

At night especially red is used as a danger signal, red lanterns being placed on torn up streets and obstructions, red tail lights being used for motor-cars, red lamps to indicate fire exits in theaters, factories and hotels and more recently to mark dangerous parts of machinery, high current wires and other danger spots.

In Mr. Churchill's address, as quoted by the Scientific American, he gave the effective range of the several colored lights recognized by the Railway Signal association under ordinary weather conditions, as follows: Red, three to three and one-half miles; yellow, one to one and one-half miles; green, two and one-half to three miles; blue, one-half to three-quarters of a mile; purple, one-half to three-quarters of a mile; lunar white, two to two and one-half miles.

Yellow light is visible much farther than the distance at which its color can be distinguished and is easily mistaken for a "neighborhood light"—that in a house, for instance.

Lunar white—a pale bluish white—has come into use as a "clear" indication for switches on many railroads. It can be recognized at greater distances than yellow and is not so easily mistaken for "neighborhood lights."

HYPNOTIZING ANIMALS.

Even the Deadly Cobra May Be Made Perfectly Passive.

Hypnotizing a hen is a trick known to most country boys. It is an old experiment, first described by the Jesuit father, Athanasius Kircher, who laid a hen on the table, held it firmly for a little while and drew a chalk line in front of its eyes, with the result that it remained as if in a catalepsy.

In India it is known that a cobra caught by the neck and gently pressed will soon become stiff and remain so for a considerable time either coiled up or out straight.

A frog fastened to a board and turned suddenly upside down goes into a trance. Other animals are susceptible to this treatment, some more quickly than others.

If you pick up a crab and wave it in the air it becomes immobile, a female bending her legs over her abdomen, a male sticking them out almost straight. The same is true of the fresh water crayfish, only this resists for a much longer time than a crab.

Among the insects catalepsy—commonly known as "death feigning"—is common, and, according to Professor Ernst Mangold, the learned German naturalist, is often a means of saving the life of the insect.

According to Mangold, the hypnotic condition is induced in man by suggestion or physical inhibition, in animals by mechanical inhibition, but in both cases sensory stimuli may assist. These stimuli may be optic (fixing the gaze on some object) or tactile (stroking the skin), or otherwise. Sometimes an absence of wonted stimuli may induce the state, as in the case of absolute silence.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Undiscovered Oceans of Truth.

"We may be justly proud of what has been achieved, but let us not fail to remember with Newton that 'the vast ocean of truth' still 'lies' for the most part 'undiscovered before us.' However marked may be the progress of science, her individual votaries must always feel a sense of humility at the little the best of them is able to contribute toward the general result."—Sir Edward Schaefer, in an address to the British association.

Gypsies.

The gypsies are nearer to the animals than any race known to us in Europe. They have the lawlessness, the abandonment, the natural physical grace in form and gesture of animals. Only a stealthy and wary something in their eyes makes them human.—Arthur Symons.

POSTPONED MATCH.

The postponed match between the Jerusalem and Essex teams, of the Masonic Bowling League, has been booked for Friday night. The match was originally scheduled to be played in Elizabeth, but has been changed, and will be rolled on local alleys.

FIRST BASEBALL GAME.

The first scheduled baseball game of the season is but ten days off, Saturday, April 3 being the date of the opener between North Plainfield and Clinton High Schools on Hyde Oval. Plainfield High School will open with Camp Bowser the following week.

Query—What is the regulation the police are enforcing along Front street to make drivers have their horses facing in a certain direction? G. T. H.

N. P. H. S. BASEBALL TEAM WILL LOSE BOB HEBERT

The North Plainfield High School baseball team will lose one of its most valuable players before the season begins, as Bob Hebert, one of the best all around athletes of the school and a stellar outfielder on the diamond, will say goodbye to this city the first of April when his parents will move to New York city. Bob is not only a fielder, but a good hitter, and his leaving will leave a hard position open, and break up the outfield combination which Ralph Smalley has counted on for some time work this season.

Bob did not want to leave and almost had it arranged to remain here until the close of the school year with relatives, but his parents did not think well of this plan, so he will either enter a city school or go in business.

RING DOWN THE ASBESTOS

The Canuck "Big Leaguers," the Wanderers, of Montreal, and the Quebecs rang down the curtain on their two-game series in the St. Nicholas Rink, New York, last night, with the sextet from the shadow of Mount Royal displaying the same superiority as on the previous evening, when they were victorious by a score of 12 to 6.

A MASONIC MATCH.

Ernest Luthman, leader of the Borough One Man Tourney, made an even break in two matches played last night, winning three and losing as many. M. Ferrero won two out of three, Howe annexed one game while Voorhees came out even with Luthman. The latter scored a 221 which was the largest score of the night. The results follow:

M. Ferrero	160	176	180
Luthman	177	148	169
Voorhees	161	157	209
Luthman	169	154	221
Howe	117	202	173
Voorhees	176	164	[illegible]

PARK CLUB-ELKS' MATCH.

The Park Club and Elk pinners will get together on the latter's alleys tonight for another of their friendly matches that have been going on all winter. The Washington Park five has an edge on its opponents in the third series, but the "Bills" are confident of taking at least two, if not three, games on their own lanes tonight.

MRS. STOCKTON WINS.

In the first round of a special consolation match for a medal contributed by the Women's Southern Golf Association, Mrs. H. R. Stockton, of this city, won a keenly contested match from Miss Myra B. Melmer, of Midlothian, 2 up and 1 to play. She will meet Miss Louise Elkins, of Oakmount, in the second round today.

LAMONTE DECLARES HE WILL NOT RESIGN POST

Commissioner of Banking and Insurance George M. La Monte, of Bound Brook, makes a vigorous denial to the stories that have gained circulation to the effect that he intends to resign his position as the head of the Banking and Insurance Department.

Such is not the case. Mr. La Monte states that he has never even considered resigning. The stories probably gained circulation because of Mr. La Monte's appointment as deputy reserve agent and vice-chairman of the board of directors of the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia.

Mr. La Monte's work on the board of the Federal Reserve Bank and those of the State Department of Banking and Insurance do not conflict at all.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

In addition to the attractive vaudeville bill at Proctor's Theatre today, the management will offer the big feature photoplay, "The Unwelcome Mrs. Hatch," featuring Henrietta Crosman, known to the legitimate theatregoers of two continents as a dramatic star of the first magnitude. This film is in five parts, and the dramatic sensation of a few years ago is portrayed as it was never shown before.

The succeeding episode of "The Exploits of Elaine" is scheduled for tomorrow, and on Saturday there will be two special features. One of these will be another of those screamingly funny Charles Chaplin comedies that were introduced at this theatre several weeks ago. They have gotten to be quite the local rage, and Manager Sanderson has a contract to secure the latest release for immediate presentation at the theatre.

The other Saturday feature will be the second of the World Film Corporation's new comedy series under the title of "Health by the Year." The leading role is portrayed by Jefferson de Angelis, a reigning comedy star in the musical comedy field for the past twenty years. Mr. Angelis' work is in a class by itself, and those who have seen him on the legitimate stage know that with his entrance to picturedom he is in a better position than ever to create laughs.

DRESS WARM AND KEEP FEET DRY

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Take Salts and Get Rid of Uric Acid

Rheumatism is no respecter of age, sex, color or rank. If not the most dangerous of human afflictions it is one of the most painful. Those subject to rheumatism should eat less meat, dress as warmly as possible, avoid any undue exposure, and, above all, drink lots of pure water.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid, which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid, which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray. Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.

CHAPTER IV.

I Converse With a Mystery.

LATE in the afternoon I opened my door, hoping that the banging of hammers and the buzz of industry would have ceased; but, alas, the noise was even more deafening than before. Esyping Britton in the gloomy corridor, I shouted to him, and he came at once.

"Britton," said I as he closed the door, "do you think they will carry out their threat to have the law on me? Mr. Rocksworth was very angry—and put out. He is a power, as you know."

"I think you are quite safe, sir," said he. "Shortly before 2, sir, one of the porters from the hotel came over to recover a gold purse Mrs. Riley-Werkheimer had dropped in the excitement, and he informed Mr. Poopendyke that the whole party was leaving at 4 for Dresden."

Later on, somewhat refreshed and relieved, I made my way to the little balcony, first having issued numerous orders and directions to the still stupefied Schmicks, chief among which was an inflexible command to keep the gates locked against all comers.

Suddenly as I sat there ruminating I became acutely aware of something white on the ledge of the topmost window in the eastern tower. Even as I fixed my gaze upon it something else transpired. A cloud of soft, wavy, luxurious brown hair eclipsed the narrow white strip and hung with spreading splendor over the casement ledge plainly, indubitably to dry in the sun.

My neighbor had washed her hair!

And it was really a most wonderful head of hair. I can't remember ever having seen anything like it except in the advertisements.

What a glorious, appealing, sensuous thing a crown of hair—but just then Mr. Poopendyke came to my window.

"May I interrupt you for a moment, Mr. Smart?" he inquired, as he squinted at me through his ugly bone rimmed glasses.

"Come here, Poopendyke," I commanded in low, excited tones. He hesitated. "You won't fall off," I said sharply.

Although the window is at least nine feet high, Poopendyke stooped as he came through. He always does it, no matter how tall the door. It is a lifelong habit with him. Have I mentioned that my worthy secretary is six feet four and as thin as a reed? I remember speaking of his knees. He is also a bachelor.

"It is a dreadful distance down there," he murmured, flattening himself against the wall and closing his eyes.

A pair of slim white hands at that instant indolently readjusted the thick mass of hair and quite as casually disappeared. I failed to hear Mr. Poopendyke's remark.

"I think, sir," he proceeded, "it would be a very good idea to get some of our correspondence off our hands. A great deal of it has accumulated in the past few weeks. I wish to say that I am quite ready to attend to it whenever"—

"Time enough for letters," said I, still staring.

"First of all, we must have a ladder," I went on. "Have you seen to that?"

"A ladder?" he faltered, putting one foot back through the window in a most suggestive way.

"Oh," said I, remembering, "I haven't told you, have I? Look! Up there, in that window. Do you see that?"

"What is it, sir? A rug?"

"Rug! Great Scott, man, don't you know a woman's hair when you see it?"

"I've never—er—never seen it—you might say—just like that. Is it hair?"

"It is. You do see it, don't you?"

"How did it get there?"

"Good! Now I know I'm not dreaming. Come! There's no time to be lost. We may be able to get up there before she hears us!"

I instructed old Conrad to have the tallest ladder brought to me in the courtyard at once.

"There is no such thing about the castle," he announced blandly.

"Where are your sons?" I demanded.

The old couple held up their hands in great distress.

"Herr Britton has them wearing their souls out, turning a windlass outside the gates—ach, that terrible invention of his!" groaned old Conrad. "My poor sons are faint with fatigue, mein herr. You should see them perspire and hear them pant for breath."

Happily a new idea struck me almost at once.

In a jiffy half a dozen carpenters were at work constructing a substantial ladder out of scantlings, while I stood over them in serene command of the situation.

When the ladder was completed I mounted to the top and peered through the sashless window. It was quite black and repelling beyond. Instructing Britton and the two brothers to follow me in turn, I clambered over the wide stone sill and lowered myself gingerly to the floor.

I will not take up the time or the space to relate my experiences on this first fruitless visit to the east wing of my abiding place. Suffice to say, we got as far as the top of the stairs in the vast middle corridor after stumbling through a series of dim, damp rooms, and then found our way effectually blocked by a stout door which was not only locked and bolted, but bore a most startling admonition to would be trespassers.

Pinned to one of the panels there was a dainty bit of white note paper, with these satiric words written across its surface in a bold feminine hand:

"Please keep out. This is private property."

Most property owners no doubt would have been incensed by this calm defiance on the part of a squatter, either male or female, but not I. The very impudence of the usurper appealed to me. What could be more delicious than her serene courage in dispossessing me with the stroke of a pen of at least two-thirds of my domicile and what more exciting than the thought of waging war against her in the effort to regain possession of it? Really it was quite glorious! Here was a happy, enchanting bit of feudalism that stirred my romantic soul to its very depths.

We returned to the courtyard and held a counsel of war. I put all of the Schmicks on the grill, but they stubbornly disclaimed all interest in or knowledge of the extraordinary occupant of the east wing.

"We can smoke her out, sir," said Britton.

I could scarcely believe my ears.

"Britton," said I severely, "you are a brute. I am surprised. You forget there is an innocent babe, maybe a collection of them, over there and a dog. We shan't do anything heathenish, Britton. Please bear that in mind. There is but one way—we must storm the place. I will not be defied to my very nose." I felt it to see if it was not a little out of joint. "It is a good nose."

"It is, sir," said Britton. And Poopendyke in a perfect ecstasy of loyalty shouted, "Long live your nose, sir!"

My German vassals waved their hats, perceiving that a demonstration was required without in the least knowing what it was about.

That night was very black and tragic, swift storm clouds having raced up to cover the moon and stars. With a radiant lanthorn in the window behind me, I sat down with my pad and my pipe and my pencil. The storm was not far away.

I was scribbling away in serene contempt for the physical world when there came to my ears a sound that gave me a greater shock than any streak of lightning could have produced and yet left sufficient life in me to appreciate the sensation of being electrified.

A woman's voice, speaking to me out of the darkness and from some point quite near at hand!

"I beg your pardon, but would you mind doing me a very slight favor?"

Those were the words, uttered in a clear, sweet, perfectly confident voice, as of one who never asked for favors, but exacted them.

I looked about me, blinking, utterly bewildered. No one was to be seen. She laughed. Without really meaning to do so, I also laughed—nervously, of course.

"Can't you see me?" she asked. I looked intently at the spot from which the sound seemed to come—a perfectly solid stone block less than three feet from my right shoulder. It must have been very amusing. She laughed again. I flushed resentfully.

"I can see you quite plainly, and you are very ugly when you scowl, sir. Are you scowling at me?"

"I don't know," I replied truthfully, still searching for her. "Does it seem so to you?"

"Yes."

"Then I must be looking in the right direction," I cried impolitely. "You must be— Ah!"

My straining eyes had located a small, oblong blotch in the curve of the tower not more than twenty feet from where I stood, and on a direct line with my balcony. True, I could not at first see a face, but as my eyes grew a little more accustomed to the darkness, I fancied I could distinguish a shadow that might pass for one.

"I didn't know that little window was there," I cried, puzzled.

"It isn't," she said. "It is a secret loophole, and it isn't here except in times of great duress. See, I can close it!" The oblong blotch abruptly disappeared, only to reappear an instant later. I was beginning to understand. Of course it was in the beleaguered east wing! "I hope I didn't startle you a moment ago."

I resolved to be very stiff and formal about it. "May I inquire, madam, what you are doing in my hou—my castle?"

"You may."

"Well," said I, seeing the point, "what are you doing here?"

"I am living here," she answered distinctly.

"So I perceive," said I, rather too distinctly.

"And I have come down to ask a simple, tiny little favor of you, Mr. Smart," she resumed.

"You know my name?" I cried, surprised.

"I am reading your last book— Are you going?"

"Just a moment, please," I called out, struck by a splendid idea. Reaching inside the window, I grasped the lanthorn and brought its rays to bear upon the—perfectly blank wall! I stared open mouthed and unbelieving. "Good heaven! Have I been dreaming all this?" I cried aloud.

My gaze fell upon two tiny holes in the wall, exposed to view by the bright light of my lamp. They appeared to be precisely in the center of the spot so recently marked by the elusive oblong. Even as I stared at the holes a slim object that I at once recognized as a finger protruded from one of them and wiggled at me in a merry but exceedingly irritating manner.

Sensibly I restored the lanthorn to its place inside the window and waited for the mysterious voice to resume.

"Are you so homely as all that?" I demanded when the shadowy face looked out once more. Very clever of me, I thought.

"I am considered rather good looking," she replied serenely. "Please don't do that again. It was very rude of you, Mr. Smart."

"Oh, I've seen something of you before this," I said. "You have long, beautiful brown hair—and a dog."

She was silent.

"I am sure you will pardon me if I very politely ask who you are?" I went on.

"That question takes me back to the favor. Will you be so very, very kind as to cease bothering me, Mr. Smart? It is dreadfully upsetting, don't you know, feeling that at any moment you may rush in and"—

"I like that. In my own castle too!"

"There is ample room for both of us," she said sharply. "I shan't be here for more than a month or six weeks, and I am sure we can get along very amiably under the same roof for that length of time if you'll only forget that I am here."

"I can't very well do that, madam. You see, we are making extensive repairs about the place, and you are proving to be a serious obstacle. I cannot grant your request. It will grieve me enormously if I am compelled to smoke you out, but I fear"—

"Smoke me out!"

"Perhaps with sulphur," I went on resolutely. "It is said to be very effective."

"Surely you will not do anything so horrid."

"Only as a last resort. First we shall storm the east wing. Failing in that, we shall rely on smoke. You will admit that you have no right to poach on my preserves."

"None whatever," she said rather plaintively.

I can't remember having heard a sweeter voice than hers. Of course by this time I was thoroughly convinced that she was a lady, a cultured, high bred lady, and an American.

That plaintive note in her voice served its purpose. My firmness seemed to dissolve, even as I sought to re-enforce it by an injection of harshness into my own manner of speech.

"Then you should be willing to vacate my premises—er—or"—here is where I began to show irresoluteness—"or explain yourself."

"Won't you be generous?"

I cleared my throat nervously. How well they know the cracks in a man's armor!

"I am willing to be—amenable to reason. That's all you ought to expect." A fresh idea took root. "Can't we effect a compromise—a truce, or something of the sort? All I ask is that you explain your presence here. I will promise to be as generous as possible under the circumstances."

"Will you give me three days in which to think it over?" she asked, after a long pause.

"No."

"Well, two days?

"I'll give you until tomorrow afternoon at 5, when I shall expect you to receive me in person."

"That is quite impossible."

"But I demand the right to go wherever I please in my own castle. You"—

"If you knew just how circumspect I am obliged to be at present you wouldn't impose such terms, Mr. Smart."

"Oh, circumspect! That puts a new light on the case. What have you been up to, madame?" I spoke very severely.

She very properly ignored the banality. "If I should write you a nice, agreeable letter, explaining as much as I can, won't you be satisfied?"

"I prefer to have it by word of mouth."

She seemed to be considering. "I will come to this window tomorrow night at this time and—and let you know," she said reluctantly.

"Very well," said I. "We'll let it rest till then."

"And, by the way, I have something more to ask of you. Is it quite necessary to have all this pounding and hammering going on in the castle? The noise is dreadful. I don't ask it on my own account, but for the baby. You see, she's quite ill with a fever, Mr. Smart. Perhaps you've heard her crying."

"The baby?" I muttered.

"It is nothing serious, of course. The doctor was here today and he reassured me"—

"A—a doctor here today?" I gasped.

She laughed once more. Verily, it was a gentle, high bred laugh.

"Will you please put a stop to the noise for a day or two?" she asked very prettily.

"Certainly," said I, too surprised to say anything else. "Is—is there anything else?"

"Nothing, thank you," she replied. Then: "Good night, Mr. Smart. You are very good."

"Don't forget tomorrow"—

"Keep Growing."

"What doest thou," I asked a budding flower,
"To sweeten life?" It nodded from its bower,
"I'm growing."

"And what doest thou," I asked a child who quaffed
The cup of joy, "To help the World?" He laughed,
"I'm growing."

A laden apple tree, old, gnarled and sere,
Bent down and rustled softly in my ear:
"Keep growing."

An aged man, with child upon his knee,
Echoed again the wisdom of the tree:
"Keep growing."

"What shall I do," I asked an angel bright,
"When age draws nigh?" Then smiled he, from his height,
"Keep growing."

Reach out to pastures new, where the soul feeds;
Reach out and up—God knows the spirit's needs.
"Keep growing."

Princeton.

At the spring council of the Mother's Congress of New Jersey, held on March 20, at Princeton, the opinion was strongly endorsed that the day had passed for the appointment of ignorant men to School Boards.

Plainfield High School.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted at the last meeting of the High School Parent-Teacher Association:

"Realizing that a certain amount of amusement is essential to every human being, and especially to every young person, parents should first see to it that children are given some opportunity for amusement; and second, should seriously consider the time, place, amount and character of such amusement to see whether it is wholesome and a builder of character.

"Second—Boys and girls of school age should refuse all invitations to parties, theatres, etc., during the school term, except, occasionally, on Friday or Saturday, and parties and theatregoing be eliminated during the holidays.

"Third—Parents should know their child's friends and strive to become thoroughly acquainted with them. This may be done by occasional invitations to informal dinners and suppers.

"Fourth—Parents should, as often as possible, accompany their child to different places of amusement, not so much as a chaperon, but as a companion and interested spectator.

"Fifth—This association offers its co-operation to other organizations who may be taking up matters of censorship of the public places of amusement in this city, of which our young people are patrons. This applies especially to our motion picture and vaudeville theatres."

During the evening Miss Audrey Eaton entertained with two delightful piano selections.

Trenton.

The New Jersey State Department of Education will combine with the New Jersey Congress of Mothers for the annual meeting to be held at Trenton next November. The programme committee consists of Mrs. S. H. Reeves, of Moorestown, chairman; Dr. Calvin N. Kendall, New Jersey Commissioner of Education, and Mrs. William M. Sandford, of Plainfield.

Montclair.

Realizing that cooking in microscopic quantities for the sake of economy of material in no way duplicated home conditions in their domestic science department, the Montclair schools have formed an alliance with the homes of the community, and by selling the product of the class at cost are able to allow each student to handle the same amount of material as she would be expected to in a home. One hundred and twenty dozen cookies have been turned out in a single day, and the housewives gladly avail themselves of the opportunity. Practical canning has also been given considerable attention.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

SILK POPLIN.

Putty colored poplin has been developed into this newest of models which has adopted, as its own, some very old features and some less than ten years old. The box pleted skirt is of recent memory while the jet trimming dates back to the younger days of a past generation. Very effective it is, however, and many a woman who, during the reign of the hobble skirt, has been obsessed with a dread of mad-dogs or run-a-ways will sigh with relief at the promise of hoops which these fuller skirts convey. An applied design of jet trims bodice and little basque and skirt. The vest is of white mousseline closed with old-fashioned buttons in black and gilt.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

It was a dark, gloomy afternoon and when the dinner work was done, instead of changing her dress, as was her custom, Nell decided to clean the bookcase. "For," she reasoned, "no one will think of calling this disagreeable day." She sat down on the floor and began dusting and arranging the books. It was about 2 o'clock when she heard a knock at the door. Her lap was full of books, her hands were soiled and her house none too clean. She scrambled to her feet, took off her apron, wiping her hands on it as she rolled it up and tucked it behind the bookcase.

"I hope it is someone I know," she thought. "My friends know I do not often look like this."

She opened the door to Mrs. Ellson.

"I know I am a little early," apologized the lady, "but I rode as far as your gate with the doctor."

"I usually am dressed for the afternoon by this time, but I decided to finish cleaning the bookcase before changing my dress," said Nell, a trifle stiffly as she seated her guest.

Mrs. Ellson took in the entire room with a comprehensive sweep of her cold eyes. Nell followed her gaze till it rested on the apron string protruding from behind the bookcase. She flushed and rose to remove the offending garment, trying to laugh over the incident, but there was no amusement in the caller's uncompromising attitude.

"I have tried to get over here to as you are the only new members of our circle, but the weather has been so fine I have been going with the doctor to make his calls quite frequently. He enjoys having me go so much I really feel that I should do it."

"Naturally," murmured Nell.

"I suppose you see a great deal of Miss Rudolph. Mr. Morton is such an admirer of hers they are always together on the street, and seem to enjoy each other so much," continued Mrs. Ellson.

"Yes," said Nell, flushing and paling by turns, "Miss Rudolph boards just below here, and as they have the same dinner hour naturally walk together. She is acquainted with some intimate friends of ours," she finished bravely, fighting a desire to run away and bang the door behind her.

"That makes it very nice for her," Mrs. Ellson said with emphasis on "her"; "not every stenographer has so handsome a man to walk with every day."

"It makes it nice for all of us," said Nell, knowing by the slight smile on the other's lips that her frantic lying was useless and that the woman knew her dart had gone home.

Nell did not know what she said after that, except that they talked banalities, and it was with intense relief that she closed the door on her caller and sank into a chair and buried her face in her hands.

"It isn't my imagination, then," she thought; "people are noticing their being so much together. Oh, this tiny village with its idle women with nothing to do but watch the affairs of others. In a city I could at least drink my bitter cup in secret. I suppose that woman in her round of calls this afternoon will tell of her pity for me and how hard I take my husband's slights."

Nell ground her teeth, rose, jumbled the books back into the bookcase, clean and unclean together, and threw herself across the bed in

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

Mother McGrew and Her Family.

Said Mother McGrew to her family one day:
"They've opened a picture show over the way,
And if you are as good as can possibly be,
I'll take you to see it this evening," said she.

The animals said, "We will surely be good."
And they scampered around just as fast as they could.
The Cat said: "This minute I'll dust the whole house."
"And I'll do the dishes at once," said the Mouse.

The Dog said, "I'll go and clean up the back yard."
In fact, all the animals worked very hard.
You see they all felt that a treat was in store,
For they never had been to the movies before.

That evening old Mother McGrew said, "We'll go,
They said, "We will be good as gold, we declare."
So they set out at once and were very soon there.

And hadn't been there but a minute or so
When the pictures began and there came on the screen

His look was so cross that at very first sight
You knew that young Bull-Dog was aching to fight;
And most of the family of Mother McGrew
Were scared half to death; I don't blame them, do you?

But the Dog of the family got up in a rage
Before they could stop him and jumped on the stage.
Said he to the Bull-Dog, "Now, what do you mean?"
And then he stopped short; he'd run into the screen!

Old Mother McGrew took him home there and then.
Said she, "You'll not come to the movies again."
And from that day to this, so far as I know,
Dogs are not allowed at a cinema show.

PLAINFIELDERS OUGHT TO CONSIDER PLAINFIELD FIRST

A city must progress, it must be guided by its optimists, and must approve of enterprises; it must value constructive men more than destructive ones, must have a clear idea of the demands of the future city growth and live up to its ideals.

One of the most essential elements of progress is enterprise. The enterprise of the business men of Plainfield is dependent upon the support of the residents of the city. In the same measure that they co-operate in the support of Plainfield's stores they will share in the prosperity that will be the result of this co-operative effort.

The duty of Plainfield's people to themselves and their obligation to their city, calls upon them to PATRONIZE PLAINFIELD MERCHANTS, CRAFTSMEN and MECHANICS.

They are not asked to make any sacrifice, either of money or quality in order to do this. Rather are they presented with the opportunity of making financial saving and gaining at advantage in quality of the goods purchased.

The old fallacy that it is now necessary to go to the stores of other cities in order to get the best goods at the lowest prices has long been dissipated.

The merchants of Plainfield have proved conclusively that the stores of Plainfield are not surpassed in any respect by mail order houses of the stores of larger cities and that the question of buying outside the city is attended by loss to the purchaser in more ways than one.

The man who has home pride enough to PATRONIZE PLAINFIELD MERCHANTS, CRAFTSMEN and MECHANICS, gets the most for his money. It is easy to be convinced of this fact by visiting local stores. The advertising columns of the local papers will direct you to the most advantageous buying. PATRONIZE PLAINFIELD MERCHANTS, CRAFTSMEN and MECHANICS.

SUBSCRIPTION RACE FOR SPECIAL PRIZES TO END APRIL THIRD

Help Your Favorite Candidate by Sending Subscription Direct to Press Office—Make Good That Promise and see "Your Girl" Win.

First Prize.
$100.00 Diamond Solitaire Ring.
Second Prize.
Merchandise Certificate, good for $25.00 in trade at Woodhull & Martin Co., 163 East Front street, and $15.00 in gold.
Third Prize.
$35.00 Solid Gold Wrist Watch.

Look over the vote standing of candidates today and see where your favorite stands, glance at the vote showing the gains made for the Special Prizes and see where "She" stands in the race for the three extra prizes. If you are not entirely satisfied that your candidate is sure to come out at the head of the list when the votes are counted up, better send in your subscription for the limit at once and add that many votes to her score.

There are only nine days left of the Special Prize Contest, and each day means a great deal to every candidate and every one is on the hustle collecting every paid-in-advance subscription possible. Time will not permit the candidates to get to everyone who has promised a subscription and make the collection, so we are offering a timely suggestion. Suppose you send your paid-in-advance subscription direct to the Press office with instructions to credit the votes you are entitled to, to a certain candidate. This will save her a trip to see you and will add just so much time for her to look up new people. Each candidate will need every available vote and the public is assured that a subscription sent direct to this office will be doubly appreciated by the candidate for whom the votes are to be issued.

Promises Outstanding.

Just figure out how many people a candidate would be obliged to call on personally if they like yourself, said when first asked: "I will give you my subscription later if you need it." Suppose everyone said that; can you figure how many calls it would mean? Candidates report almost daily that if they could only realize on their promises they would feel almost sure of winning. Are you one of these promises? Make good your promise and now that the time is so short, send it direct to this office and the credit will be given to the candidate just the same as though she had to hunt you out and get it herself. She will also receive a receipt showing the full transaction—the number of votes and from whom they came. Do this for the candidate's sake—Do it Now.

See the Prizes.

Just Work.

Exhilarated by the intense excitement, interested in the extreme, the contestants work arduously, eagerly and expectantly.

The stories that have emanated from some unknown sources are more or less exaggerated, and the contestants are urged to place no credence in them whatever. If a certain one has several thousand votes in reserve she is not going to tell it. So be on your guard at all times. Say nothing—listen to nothing—just work. Another favorite rumor, which is invariably exaggerated or absolutely false, is that some candidate has thirty to forty people working for her. The winners of the contests are the ones who depend upon themselves and not their friends. The old saying, "If you want a thing done, do it yourself," applies here.

There are some who are not doing much in the voting game that have assured others that they will be there when the vote is cast, and we surmise from reports issued from their headquarters, that the assertions are all right. Look out for the silent candidates. They are dangerous. "Still water runs deep."

Only Nine Days More.

But nine days remain before the special contest will be won or lost. Let the candidates and all their friends now rally anew to the fray, as all Plainfield and surrounding territory is watching the progress of the race, and is waiting to applaud the winners for their popularity and enterprise.

Word of Caution.

Don't stop to think—just work. This is a special contest within a contest, as it were—in which you can win a prize. You can rest after it is all over—rest and feel better for having WON.

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

Washington, March 25.—Nine of the foremost foreign embassies and legations in the national capital are presided over by women of American birth. American women have before this day occupied places of prominence in the diplomatic corps, but so large a number of Yankee wives to foreign ambassadors and ministers has never before been grouped here.

First among these diplomatic women is Mme. Jules Jusserand, wife of the French Ambassador, and dean of the diplomatic corps, who was Miss Elsie Richards, daughter of an American banker, before her marriage. Countess von Bernstorff, wife of the German Ambassador, was Miss Jeanne Luckemeyer, a New York girl of German descent. Mme. Bakhmeteff, wife of the Russian Ambassador, is a member of the Beale family, and met her husband in Vienna when her father was ambassador to Austria and M. Bakhmeteff was an attache of the Russian Legation there. Mme. Riano, wife of the Spanish Ambassador, was Miss Alice Ward, of Washington, and a chum of Alice Roosevelt Longworth in her girlhood days. Another Washington girl was Mme. Havenith, wife of the Belgian Minister, who was Miss Helen Foulke before her marriage. The wife of W. A. F. Ekengren, the Swedish Minister, was also a Washington girl, Miss Laura Wolcott Jackson.

The Brazilian Ambassador, Senor Domicio de Gama, was married to an American woman, Mrs. Arthur H. Hearn, of New York, the year following his appointment to Washington. The newest member of the diplomatic corps, Stephan Panaretoff, minister from Bulgaria, took an American wife long before he thought of coming to America as a diplomat. She was Miss Lydia Gile, of North Andover, Mass., whom he met in Constantinople.

Perhaps the most interesting of these diplomaticunions, however, is that of the imperial representative of the Shah of Persia, Ali Kuli Khan, and his New England wife, who was Miss Florence Breed, of Boston. Mme. Ali Kuli Khan recently visited Persia with her husband for the Shah's coronation, and was presented to the potentate, an honor accorded very few women and a departure from Oriental tradition, which was intended as a special compliment to a "woman from America," land of feminism triumphant.

Boston—Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, and Mrs. Antoinette Funk, of the Chicago bar, and author of the Shaffroth amendment to be placed before Congress, providing for a national suffrage referendum, will speak at the same meeting here on Thursday in behalf of votes for women.

Cincinnati—Mrs. D. T. Vail, of this city, is the proud possessor of a mahogany desk which belonged to Robert Browning, in which are preserved the bottles, pens, keys, etc., used by the great English poet in London.

New York—Mrs. Claude Grahame-White, wife of the famous English aviator, and formerly Miss Dorothy Taylor, of this city, will sail for England on the Lusitania this week after a visit to her parents. While her husband has been directing the air raids on German strongholds on land and sea, Mrs. Grahame-White has been spending her time here assisting in relief work for war sufferers. She is enthusiastic over the splendid work done by American women for war-torn Europe.

Atlanta, Ga.—Miss Genevieve Lehne, a stenographer, estimates at $50,000 the wrong done her by a kiss deposited "forcibly and against her will" upon her left hand. Miss Lehne is now suing her employer, J. D. Paterson, superintendent of the Atlanta Joint Terminals, for that amount as balm for the above described injury to her dignity.

Philadelphia—Since the beginning of the movement of the Allied fleet upon Constantinople much alarm has been felt in this city regarding the safety of two well-known Philadelphia young women, now residents of the Turkish capital. They are Miss Eleanor R. Burns, daughter of Rev. Charles E. Burns, and Miss Ellen E. Ellis, a graduate of Bryn Mawr, both teachers in the American College for Girls, in Constantinople.

MASONS TO BANQUET.

Eastern Star Lodge, No. 105, F. and A. M., of Bound Brook, will give a banquet tomorrow night at the Middlebrook Country Club. A. K. Smith is chairman of the committee, and a number of prominent speakers have been secured.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

Edward Harding, Jr., of this city, who recently made a big hit at the Plainfield Theatre singing popular songs, again pleased two big audiences last night when he rendered an illustrated solo entitled, "When the Roses Have Faded Away." The ballad has a catchy air, and with the beautiful views flashed on the screen in connection with it, proved an enjoyable treat. Mr. Harding has been engaged by Manager Shanon to sing at the Plainfield Theatre at regular intervals as an added attraction to the feature photoplays. His next appearance will be tomorrow night (Friday), when he will render the popular song, "The Little House Upon the Hill," and on Saturday afternoon and Saturday night he will repeat "When the Roses Have Faded Away."

"The Rose of the Rancho" was the feature photoplay at the theatre yesterday, and verified the advance reports that it was one of the most elaborate camera productions yet produced. It will be repeated this afternoon and tonight, and for Friday and Saturday the management will offer the dramatic sensation "The Bargain," featuring William S. Hart. "The Bargain" is full of thrills, the kind that make you want to come back to be thrilled again.

The Plainfield Theatre's new serial detective story, "The Black Box," will be commenced next Tuesday instead of tomorrow, as previously announced. The succeeding installments will be shown each Tuesday thereafter except on the days when legitimate production hold the boards.

PRZEMYSL'S FALL A TURNING POINT

RESUME OF CONFLICT

If Austria Becomes Disorganized Russia Will Have No Trouble in Bringing Germany to Her Own Terms, Declares the Speaker.

"In the fall of Przemysl and the surrender of 120,000 Austrians, the strategists unite in saying that this is the turning point in the present war," said Miss Janet Richards in her "Current Events" talk yesterday afternoon before a large audience of women in the Hartridge Auditorium. In part the speaker said:

"There is a great deal of speculation among writers who give us forecasts of what will probably be the outcome of this triumph of the Russians in their sweep through Austria. In this war there are two divisions, the Western and the Eastern campaign. Germany occupies the middle of the campaign and she is trying to divert the Russians into her territory and keep them out of Austria. Of the ten powers engaged in combat, two, Austria and Germany, are the principles fighting against England, France and Russia. Italy is bound by an allegiance to help Germany and Austria, but thus far she has kept neutral. The racial difference and Latin antagonism of the Italians toward the Germans and Austrians has also kept her from the war. Turkey is enlisted with Germany but being such a distance away, very little is accomplished. Japan in the Orient, Servia and Montenegro are fighting on the defensive to save themselves."

Miss Richards expressed great interest in the Eastern campaign inasmuch as that territory is so unfamiliar to the majority of the people. "The plight of the Poles is far worse than that of the Belgians," she continued, "the former being in the thick of the warfare with no place to flee to while the Belgians had Holland, France and Switzerland to take refuge in. There is a ruthless and deliberate devastation of the Italians in the southwestern part of Austria. The beautiful forests are cut down and demolished and the terror stricken people imbued with a spirit of destruction to burn seem to have let loose all the barbaric instinct in their natures.

"The strategists predict that this smashing blow by the Russians to the Austrians and their onslaught on the frontier of Germany may be the beginning of the end. If Austria, Germany's ally, is disorganized, then the Russians will have no difficulty in following up their plan and bringing Germany to her knees and dictate terms to the rest of the belligerants.

"The Italian situation is still a neutral one. Why should Italy come to war? Her ambition is a territorial ambition. If you will look back you will see that all international disputes and causes of war were primarily questions of geography. There is a latent desire to acquire country that does not belong to them. That no Slav should dictate to a Latin and no Latin should dictate to a Slav, is amply demonstrated in this instant, and when one nation goes to chipping off a little of her neighbor's territory how can you expect peace. Austria acquired a large portion of Italy along the Adriatic Sea and now because of the hatred of these two peoples, Italy demands that Austria give her back these lands and ports if she wished her to keep out of the war. German strategists urged Austria to accede but the latter is obdurate as yet. The utter fallacy of one nation trying to coerce the children of another country is demonstrated in the Austrian-Italian case as well as of the Poles by Russia and Germany."

—There's nothing finer offered in the poultry line than the capons, roasting chickens and guinea hens which Smalley Brothers have on sale at their North avenue market just now. Always enjoying an enviable reputation because of the poultry standard maintained in their merchandise, they are just now excelling anything before offered. They will continue to make their internationally famous sausage for some weeks yet, and as usual have plenty of their own rendering of lard. Choice cuts of meat of all kinds, the best the market affords, are of course found here.—Adv. ***

ANNUAL FAIR AT HARTRIDGE SCHOOL

One of the events of the year which is a pleasure to those who love young people and who are interested in seeing them develop a spirit of helpfulness towards other children is the fair for the children's ward of Muhlenberg Hospital. This was held for the first time six years ago by the pupils of the Hartridge School, whose purpose then was to establish a fund for the building of the ward. For two years they gave their earnings to the hospital as a nucleus for this purpose. The money for the building of the ward was then raised by the Hospital Campaign and the pupils gave their next contribution for the support of two beds. Last fall they donated $500 (the proceeds of their fourth fair) for the equipment of the ward and when that was an established fact they sent an additional $400 for the support of two cribs for this first year.

Their object now is to raise yearly $400 for these cribs, and as much more as is possible for the maintenance of the equipment or for gifts to the ward. The fair for this purpose will be given tomorrow in the auditorium from 3 to 6 p. m. and all who are interested in their work are asked to come and help make it a great success. The former pupils who have contributed from year to year return to the fairs whenever possible as an integral part of the school. The two posters placed down-town were painted by Miss Robinson of the Art Department and Miss Tennant of the second grade. They typify the sick children of the ward in their little beds and the happy, healthy children who are working for them.

It is characteristic of the fair that the pupils conduct it on business principles. Prices are sensible, all change is returned, and the girls feel at the end of the day that whatever sum they have made has been fairly earned.

Every department has been busy for some days for the fair and there are none, from teachers to janitors, who are not giving their best. Among the specialties are bird-sticks, prettier than any seen at the Flower Show in New York. These were drawn by the children in their studio work, cut out by a carpenter, then painted by the pupils, covered with water-proof varnish, and mounted on strong sticks. They are to be used in flower beds, as props for plants.

The fourth and fifth grades academic are planning a candy and flower table, while the third grade will serve refreshments of a varied nature in the studio. The second grade has home-made cakes, breads and jellies, etc., in mind, and the first grade is planning a fancy-work booth. A novelty in the way of a wardrobe table is promised by the girls of the fifth, sixth and seventh grades elementary, and the younge. children will sell toys, Easter favors, baskets, etc. As always the little second elementary will have a most ornamental booth, where very desirable articles will be for sale. This year it will be in the nature of a Japanese and Chinese table.

BELGIUM MEETING ROUSES INTEREST

Capacity Audience Will Undoubtedly Greet Two Authoritative Speakers.

Widespread interest has been occasioned, not only in the city and borough, but in all the suburban towns as well, by the announcement by the Monday Afternoon Club that it would conduct a Belgium Relief meeting in the Plainfield High School Auditorium next Wednesday night, March 31. Captain J. F. Lucey, who has just returned after being in charge of the American Relief distribution in Belgium, and Dean Howard McClenahan, of Princeton University, who studied conditions in Belgium during the winter, will be the principal speakers. Both men have been through all the harrowing scenes of the war-ridden country, and are in a position to tell of what is needed better than anyone else in this country. Captain Lucey gave an interview to New York Times reporter, which was printed as a special feature in last Sunday's edition, and the details he related created a sensation throughout the East. It is probable that the auditorium will be crowded on the night of the meeting, but the club is anxious that all interested be certain of attendance. No admission will be charged, but a silver offering will be received during the evening.

ALLEN E. BEALS TALKS ON "COMMERCIAL CHRISTIANITY"

"Plainfield's shopmen are more valuable to the community than the so-called 'commuter element' of our city," said Allen E. Beals in an address at the meeting of the Men's Club of the Heavenly Rest last night. The products manufactured in our factories have gained universal recognition for their high calibre. Mr. Beals spoke on the subject of "Commercial Christianity," dealing with the injection of Christian principles in everyday business life and commercial enterprises.

He told of his dealings with various commercial corporations throughout the country and the words of commendation he has received from them for products made in Plainfield shops. The meeting was followed by a social hour, during which refreshments were served.

Brown, treasurer; William Spaulding, financial secretary; trustees John Donovan, William Braidwood and C. Stillman.

The installation of officers will take place on April 8 and the annual invitation dance will be held in the Knights of Pythias Hall, on April 9. The final match of the billiard tournament will be held Saturday night between James McCrea and William Carmichael. McCrea has lost no games to date and only needs this match to get the cup and gold medal.

Henry J. Brick, aged fifty-seven years, died suddenly yesterday afternoon at his home on South avenue. He was a carpenter by trade, and had resided in the Netherwood section for many years. He is survived by a wife and eleven children. Mr. Brick was well known in both the city and borough.

CITY PLANNING IDEA DISCUSSED

Officials Explain Its Benefits at Meeting in High School Auditorium.

SCOPE AND PURPOSE

Mayor Austin Scott, of New Brunswick, Major Leighton Calkins, Archibald Cox Among the Speakers—C. W. McCutcheon Presides.

An audience of about 150 citizens, including a number of women, attended the meeting held in the Plainfield High School Auditorium last night, under the auspices of the Plainfield Taxpayers' Protective Association, the purpose being to explain more fully the object and scope of the proposed administrative survey which the association plans to have made at its own expense. Charles McCutchen, of North Plainfield, presided at the meeting, and the speakers included Mayor Leighton Calkins, of this city; Mayor Austin Scott, of New Brunswick; Archibald Cox, president of the Board of Education; Franklin Zeiger, auditor of Montclair, and L. E. Snyder, representing the Municipal Bureau of Research, of New York, which will probably be engaged to make the local survey.

In many respects the meeting was a disappointment to a majority of those present, for with the exception of one or two speakers, the audience gained little or no knowledge concerning the details of the survey which is proposed here. Mr. McCutchen, who has just returned from a vacation trip in the South, called the attention of the audience to the city's rapidly increasing tax rate, and pointed out that this year valuations had been increased about $2,000,000, with a tax rate of $191. He also singled out individual cases to show the increase in valuations, adding that the association had decided to co-operate in a friendly manner in having an administrative survey made. Mayor Calkins then gave his idea of what is expected from the survey. He said, in part:

"It is not an uncommon thing for enthusiasts who think it all right to tax for anything and everything, especially their own hobbies, to disapprove of officials who believe in holding back the tax rate and being economical with expenditures. But I believe the people have a right to be concerned about their taxes, just as much as about the price they pay for rent or groceries. Their taxes are the price they pay for benefits as community members. We may not fairly be criticized for looking into the high cost of community living any

FREEDOM COMMANDERY INSTITUTED HERE

New Military Organization Formed and Officers Are Elected.

The new military organization of Freedom Castle, No. 42, K. of G. E., known as Freedom Commandery, No. 5, K. of G. E., was formally instituted last evening at 109 Park avenue. The commandery will hereafter meet the second and fourth Thursdays in each month in Company K Armory.

The officers elected last evening are: Captain, Earl Pearson; first lieutenant, Dr. Pratt; second lieutenant, W. H. Olmstead; secretary-treasurer, George Church, and trustees, John Dixson, Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan and Percy Banghart. The non-commissioned officers will be appointed later.

The instituting ceremony was attended by several State K. of G. E. Comandery officers. There are over thirty members in the newly organized commandery at the present time.

CLAIMS COMPLETE ALIBI.

An affidavit that purports to establish a complete alibi for James W. Osborne in Rae Tanzer's $50,000 breach of promise suit against him in the New York courts, has been made by Mathew J. Smith, formerly district attorney of Queens county. The date named in the document is the one on which Miss Tanzer asserts she was betrayed by the prominent New York lawyer in the Kensington Hotel, this city. Mr. Smith swears that on October 18, the afternoon that Osborne was alleged to have registered with Miss Tanzer at the local hostelry, he was in consultation with him in the rooms of the Bar Association in New York city.

COMMON COUNCIL MAKES A PROTEST

Takes Stand on Senate Bill No. 232 and Communicates With Assemblymen.

Acting on a resolution passed by the Common Council at a conference meeting March 18, Mayor Leighton Calkins has sent a communication to Trenton urging the Union county legislators to oppose Senate Bill No. 232 when it is brought up. This bill gives the State additional power in legislation affecting public safety, public health, honest elections, a free public school system, etc.

The stand of the local Council was taken on the ground of at least two serious objections: First, that generally speaking it violates the home rule principle, and second, because cities of the first-class are excepted. In other words, a different rule would apply to a city which just fails to qualify as one of the first class and another city barely within that class.

It is the concensus of opinion among the city fathers that while the State may properly legislate on matters of State concern within a municipality, the same municipality should be secure against legislative interference with their purely internal affairs.

Mayor Calkins says:

"A community as a business and social center ought to be free to manage a public utility which it owns in the same way that it is free to manage its streets and other departments. The home rule principle is not inconsistent with the right and power of the State to legislate for its own welfare as a whole."

MISSIONARY CIRCLE HOLDS ITS ANNIVERSARY MEETING

The anniversary meeting of the Missionary Circle, comprising all the women's mission societies of the First Baptist church, was held yesterday afternoon, and was largely attended. Mrs. B. J. Shreve, first vice-president, presided in the absence of Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, president. The societies combined in April, 1914, and since then have accomplished much work. All the reports showed progress. They were presented by Mrs. G. H. Robins and Mrs. DeWitt Brokaw. During the meeting there were recitations by Miss Mabel Douglas, Miss Evelyn Tenyson, Miss Grace Bunker and Miss Mattie Douglas.

A feature was an interesting talk by Mrs. F. G. Mead describing her trip to China last year. Tea was served afterward under the direction of Mrs. Walter C. Dobbins, chairman of the social committee, and the Hasbur Group and Judson Juniors conducted a candy sale.

BORO PARENT-TEACHERS HOLD INTERESTING MEETING

Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews addressed the North Plainfield Parent-Teacher Association at the Somerset Street School yeserday afternoon on the subject of "The Adolescent Boy and Girl." Mrs. Frank Rowley reported that a cooking contest will be held soon, open to all members of the High School, seventh and eighth grades.

Mrs. E. D. Hutchinson, chairman of the entertainment committee, turned over the receipts from the "Hall of Fame" entertainment given last week. Mrs. Champlain L. Riley reported favorably on the work of securing a school nurse, and Mrs. W. O. Taylor, secretary, read Mrs. M. H. Ewart's report on the Mothers' Congress at Princeton last week. A social time followed, refreshments being served by Miss Armstrong's cooking class.

LOCAL SOCIETY WILL BE PRESENT AT GATHERING

Members of the St. Mary's church Holy Name Society will attend the meeting of the Union County Federation of Holy Name Societies to be held in the Knights of Columbus Club in Westfield next Sunday afternoon. Daniel J. Couraine, who is a member of the local society and president of the Federation, will preside.

One of the features of the meeting will be an address delivered by Alfred Young, of New York city, on the subject of "Catholic Theatres."

MARTIN HANSEN'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Martin Hansen, which was announced to be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at 200 West Second street, will be held instead at 1450 East Second street at the same hour. The burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

GREAT "WHITE WAY" PLANNED FOR BORO

Prospects are bright for the transformation of Somerset street into an up-to-date "white way" within the next couple of months, indications at the present time pointing to a favorable consideration of the petition of merchants along that thoroughfare at the April meeting of the Council. Chairman Frank Mobus, of the lighting committee of the Council; Alexander Milne, his co-worker on that committee, and Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., have made a careful investigation of the matter, and it is understood that all three are in favor of the improvement.

In an interview with a Daily Press reporter today Councilman Mobus said: "I have made a careful investigation of the requests made in the petition, and am personally in favor of making the improvement. The additional cost to the borough, which is small in comparison to the benefits that will be derived, would be fully warranted, and I think the other members of the Council will take the same stand. It is an improvement that is needed. Somerset street is the borough's business section, and it should be equipped with the proper lighting facilities."

Mayor Clark and the lighting committee have held conferences on the subject at which the petition has been discussed at length. An informal survey indicates that the consensus of opinion in the Council is in favor of the passage of the ordinance making the change.

The Public Service has agreed to substitute globes giving illumination of 2,450 candle-power for those now in use giving 450 candle-power, at an increased cost to the borough of approximately $20.20 a month. The part of the thoroughfare to be relighted includes that between the bridge and Manning avenue.

It is the opinion of many that the development of North Plainfield has been retarded to a large extent, by the meagre lighting facilities along Somerset street. This is the thoroughfare through which farmers of the Watchung Mountain region pass in coming to Plainfield, and if the proper illumination had been provided, it is not unlikely that much of the trade that has previously been brought to this side of the brook would have gone to North Plainfield. The farmers stop and make their purchases when they come to the white lights, and under present circumstances a large majority of them come straight through to Front street.

The present lights are inadequate, not only to the merchants' needs, but to the pedestrian and vehicle driver. At one point in the portion of the street mentioned in the petition there are four lights within a radius of one hundred and fifty feet, and yet it is impossible to read a newspaper under that glow.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS HOLD UNION SOCIABLE

The Christian Endeavor Local Union held an enjoyable social in the parlors of the First Baptist church last night. Theodore Day, of Dunellen, president of the local union, presided. During the evening the Trinity Church Bible School orchestra gave musical selections. After the address of welcome by the president, everyone engaged in the "Spiral Shake Down," in which every member shook hands.

The members then formed two circles, marching around, and when the music stopped faced each other and indulged in a discussion of a topic written on a piece of paper. Several charades were given. Refreshments were served in a unique manner to the guests, each member being given a slip of paper which contained a letter and a number, and these were used later in forming groups, each group's slips spelling out the word "Endeavor." Miss Anna Bach, chairman of the social committee, had charge of the affair, and the success of the evening is largely due to her efforts.

DODD'S WILL PROBATED.

The will of the late Warden Charles Dodd, of the Union county jail, at Elizabeth, who died suddenly on a Central Railroad train en route to Plainfield two weeks ago, was filed for probate in Elizabeth this morning. Mrs. Fanny Dodd, his wife, is named as executrix, and it is understood that he leaves the bulk of the estate to her. It includes real estate in this city, Elizabeth and Dunellen.

Between the Meuse and the Moselle some attempted attacks by the enemy were easily and immediately repulsed. London, March 26.—The British steamer "Delmira," a vessel of 2,211 tons was torpoedoed and sunk in the English Channel yesterday afternoon by a German submarine. The crew were saved.

The Hague, March 26.—Within 12 hours after news reached here that the Dutch steamer "Meda" had been torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine in the English Channel, a protest was drawn up by the Government of Holland and transmitted to Berlin.

Berlin, March 26, (by wireless).—The following statement was given out by the German headquarters today. "Western Theatre—On the Meuse Heights, southeast of Verdun and near Combres, the French attempted again yesterday to take the German positions by a strong attack but were repulsed after a hard struggle. The engagement at Hartmannsweiler Kopf still continues. Eastern Theatre—Russian attacks on the lake narrows east of Augustowo were repulsed."

DEATH COMES TO MRS. MOYNIHAN

Native Plainfielder Dies at Her Home in Dunellen After Short Illness.

Mrs. John W. Moynihan died at her home here last night after a five-weeks' illness due to a cerebral hemorrhage. Mrs. Moynihan was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Roan, of Plainfield, and was born there March 27th, 1852.

She was married to John W. Moynihan, of Hampton, at St. Mary's church, February 14, 1874. She is survived by her husband, John W. Moynihan; three daughters, Mary, Margaret and Kathryn; one son, Michael T., and one sister, Mrs. Kathryn Flanagan, of West Sixth street, Plainfield.

Mrs. Moynihan since her marriage has resided in Dunellen and is one of the pioneer members of St. John's Roman Catholic church. She was a devout Christian and was noted for her charitable work in the community in which she lived, and her death is a wide-felt loss.

A high mass of requiem will be celebrated at St. John's church for the repose of her soul tomorrow morning at 9:30 o'clock. Interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery, Plainfield.

The musicale and literary entertainment, given in the First Presbyterian church last night under the direction of Robert Humpston, drew a large audience that thoroughly enjoyed the excellent program. The participants included the following: Opening piano selection, Miss Margaret Fuller; quartette numbers, Mrs. Frank Fuller, Mrs. Erwin Leland, Erwin Leland and William G. Smith; duets, Miss Beatrice Cameron and Bertram J. Tallamy; readings and recitations, Mrs. Robert Ingram; closing sextet, Miss Dorothy Cameron, Miss Beatrice Cameron, Miss Margaret Fuller, William G. Smith, Bertram Tallamy and Erwin Leland. The affair was arranged by the Ladies' Aid Society and the proceeds will be added to its fund.

The funeral of Robert S. Bogardus, who died at his home early yesterday morning, will be held at the late residence on New Market road tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. The service will be in charge of Rev. E. R. Brown and burial will be made in Hillside cemetery, Plainfield, at the convenience of the family.

Rev. Ernest R. Brown has been conducting revival services at his former pastorate at the Carteret Presbyterian church. The meetings were held during the past three nights.

'Plains & Fanwood.

Many people attended the social held in the Methodist church last night under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society and Epworth League and spent a very pleasant evening enjoying the excellent program arranged by those who had the affair in charge. Those who helped make the affair a success were divided into five groups with Miss Florence Wade, Miss Harriet Reeder, Miss Matilda Keuhn, Mrs. John Culbertson and Clarence Slocum as leaders.

The usual program of games and music, followed by refreshments, will be enjoyed at the young people's social in the lecture room of the Baptist church tonight.

Dr. H. K. Carroll, pastor of the Methodist church, is attending the Newark Conference at Newark this week. Dr. Carroll will not remain at the local church another year and a successor will be named at the conference.

The Fanwood Township Board of Education met in School No. 1 at Scotch Plains last night to receive bids for the erection of School No. 3 in the Graceland section of the township. All but two of the bidders were men residing in this section of the State and the bids submitted were: Johnston Heating Co., for the installation of the heating and ventilating system, $1,484; Anthony Albert, for erection of building complete, $12,070; American Heating & Ventilating Co., for heating and ventilating including mason work to be done in connection with it, $1,500 and $250 less if mason work is omitted; William H. Dennick, for the erection of the building, $11,785; Gunzelman & Kramer, for erection of entire building, 12,998; John H. Dahl, for building of entire structure, $12,984. The building committee asked for a few days to go over the bids with architect Polcanis and the motion was seconded to meet on Tuesday night when the name of the successful bidder will be made known. The board is making every effort to have actual work on the structure begun as soon as possible so as to have it completed by the opening of the next school term in September.

TINY HAMMERS IN STEAM.

Billions of Flying Molecules Give the Gas Its Power.

There is an old Scotch proverb that "Mony a mickle maks a muckle," which means that many little things put together make much. The power of steam is a case of this, for it can drive great boats through the water and it can tear up the greatest rocks. Yet all its power is due to the coming together of little units of power.

When we speak of steam we mean water vapor—water in the form of gas. This gas is formed under pressure and has power to expand. It is this expansive power that does the work. Afterward the gas becomes cool and condensed, so that we can see it, and that is what we call steam.

The power of the gas is due to the tiny molecules of water of which it is made. These are flying about in all directions trying to get loose and so striking against the sides of whatever hems them in. The force in one of these molecules is very tiny, for the amount of stuff in the molecules is so small. If you had a hammer smaller than you could see you could not drive a nail with it. But as there are billions of these little hammers flying about in the gas they are able to do all the work that steam does.—From "The Child's Book of Knowledge."

DIGGING A POST HOLE.

He Worked Faithfully and Cheerily, but Lacked One Essential.

He was a vigorous worker, and he was digging a post hole in the bed of a river. A post was to be placed in it as part of the extension of a wharf.

He worked hard and got rapidly deeper and deeper.

He struck stones, but he reached down and pried them up.

He got thoroughly soaked, but he grinned cheerfully.

He sang at his task and was an inspiration to all the other workmen.

Five o'clock came, but he faithfully finished his post hole, though it took him ten minutes longer. He was no time server.

Then he climbed, dripping, out on the bank and walked home, happy in the consciousness of good work accomplished.

But he did not put a post into the post hole, and when he came back the next morning he found the hole filled again with mud and completely obliterated.

However, he cheerfully went to work again, singing as he labored, and dug the hole once more.

And the company paid the bill.

SECRET OF SUCCESS.

Be Efficient and Do Things That Other People Do Not Do.

A man has a weary time awaiting to rise in the world by force of sympathy, by getting somebody else to pull him along. You see such people standing around expecting compassion and a lift from some who have succeeded.

But this is not the way success is attained. That comes by working for it, by being worthy of it, by doing one's best, if it comes at all. The world is full of failures because a man hangs back and depends upon others.

Efficiency is the greatest word in the language. There is no real progress without it. And what does efficiency consist of? Of sobriety, honesty, diligence, patience, happiness, unselfishness, good habits and putting in full time.

Of course a man can get rich by not caring for these. He can gamble, steal, defraud, pad payrolls and expense bills, borrow money and never pay. But such riches don't last. They drop a man pretty hard finally.

The only way is to start out in the world and do one's best without waiting to see what others do. As Steinmetz, the master electrician, said, "To earn $100,000 a year do things other people don't do."—Ohio State Journal.

Volcanoes and Disease.

Many strange and exaggerated accounts have been given of terrible diseases in human beings, lower animals and plants as a result of volcanic activity. In a prize essay by Dr. H. J. Johnston-Lavis it is shown that there is no direct connection with disease, but that volcanic outbursts may indirectly cause or increase epidemic disease in several ways. The poisonous fumes may have irritating and depressing effects on the eyes and throat. The disturbance of water courses may bring about the infection of wells and surface supplies with sewage, and interference with ventilation of houses may result from the accumulation of ejected materials. The moral depression from fear, with hunger from the cutting off of food supplies, may have the effect by lessening the resistance of the organization to infection.—Exchange.

Keeping His Secret.

When Lord Wellington was commander of an army in India a certain rich man offered him $500,000 for some secret information on a very important question. Wellington looked thoughtful a few moments, as if he were weighing the temptation. At length he said:

"It appears that you can keep a secret, sir."

"Certainly," said the man, feeling sure that he had gained his point.

"So can I," said Wellington. Good morning, sir." And the man went away with a crestfallen air.

Foresight Defined.

The children had read the word foresight in the reader, and the teacher was endeavoring to make it plain.

"Foresight," she said, "is looking ahead. Now, Freddie, you give me an example of foresight if you can."

"Well, foresight would be not to eat too much breakfast when you knew you were going out into the country to your grandmother's for dinner," explained the boy.—Indianapolis News.

Cheerfulness.

Wondrous is the strength of cheerfulness and altogether past calculation its powers of endurance. Efforts to be permanently useful must be uniformly joyous—a spirit of all sunshine—graceful from very gladness—beautiful because bright.—Carlyle.

Can It Be Done Again? Can Plainfield Equal It?

"Thirty evangelistic teams, composed of twelve members each, from the Bible classes, left their business, social obligations, their home life, that they might work for the Master. One Saturday night in May, a chartered Pullman car carried twenty-five Baracas and other classmen one hundred and thirty miles from Wichita to Alva, Oklahoma, where meetings were held in six churches the next day, Sunday, resulting in twenty-eight conversions. Among the converts was a man who had for many years spent all his spare time and much of his hard-earned money in the saloon. And this man has since been the direct means of leading nearly one hundred souls to the Saviour."

DISCUSS CITY IDEA

more than into the high cost of private living.

"I think Plainfield has a far better government than most cities of its size and make-up. But in some respects we are doing business by old-fashioned methods which are entirely out of date, because nobody has had the time to become a municipal expert, and to check us up, from top to bottom, with the best modern practice. It follows that we need expert advice, for the simple reason that municipal management has become a science. Specialists have studied the subject; they know the accepted standards of success, of economy, of the elimination of waste. They can point out immediately our defects, and set up the remedies, because they are familiar with the experience of other cities all over the world.

"I have been just long enough in the city's service to begin to see some of our defects. We need to make sure that we are up to date in our accounting. All business problems require decisions, and correct information is indispensable to the exercise of judgment. The function of accounting is to make all such information available immediately, at any moment. It won't do to have to dig it out.

"So also our budget-making is lacking in standard estimate forms, or the means to compare requirements functionally. We have no auditing system for checking and proving items, continuously, as to quantity, quality and prices. We need a centralized purchasing system; it is an accepted requirement of successful business in the cutting out of waste. We need training school systems in police and fire departments, and efficiency records kept of every man on each force. Good work ought to be rewarded as much as delinquency punished.

"These are some of the things requiring study. There no doubt are other defects which only an expert comparison of our methods with the most approved standards will reveal. The point I want to make is simply that this survey is not an outside investigation in the usual sense, for the purpose of holding us up to ridicule. We have able department heads. They know their business. They are not all out of date, by any means.

"In a word, the plan is constructive, not destructive. I would be against this thing if I thought the purpose were to have people to come here just to criticize. But it is getting help from efficiency experts. It pays, like advertising. In private enterprises. So, also, it ought to pay in the public service.

"The first step in an efficiency and economy program is to have an efficient organization."

While the remarks of Mayor Austin Scott, of New Brunswick, the next speaker, were interesting, they failed to show exactly what had been accomplished by a survey in that town, except that it ultimatly resulted in a commission form of government. Mr. Scott did explain that before the survey it was found that New Brunswick had been governed under out-of-date methods, and that before he went into office the town had suffered from the disease of too much politics. The speaker further explained that while he did not think commission government the best plan, he did believe it to be of great advantage over the old style of government.

It was the opinion of Mr. Scott that many cities have been misgoverned, and that there has been great waste, which, to a large extent, could be prevented by having a survey made by competent experts, and then have a city follow the new methods. In conclusion, Mr. Scott emphasized the importance of conducting a municipality on the highest possible plan of efficency.

Archibald Cox, president of the Board of Education, said that the Board welcomed the survey, especially in school matters, for it would help to solve many problems and acquaint both the Board and the taxpayers with the solution. He favored a competent survey, and that the fullest publicity be given to the work.

Mr. Zeiger, of Montclair, who is auditor of that place, explained the work of the survey in that town, and went into details as to the new system of accounting, which, in some respects, is not unlike the one in this city.

Mr. Snyder, the representative of the Municipal Bureau of Research, was the last speaker, and he very briefly explained what this bureau does, its work being based on the accumulated experiences of other cities, the bureau bearing the same relation to a municipality as a physician does to a patient. During the evening opportunity was given those present to subscribe to the fund of the association to have the survey made.

ARMY CAMP WATER.

How the Supply Is Conserved and Used in the German Army.

Suitable drinking water is of vital importance to an army, and this is only one of a multitude of problems that must be studied carefully by those who conduct a successful campaign. The water supply of a camp is a matter of great importance. Only running water is used.

In the German army the upstream water is used for drinking purposes and the downstream water for watering horses and for bathing. Suitable signs notify the men which water is safe to drink and which may be used only for bathing. In shallow or narrow streams basins are dug or small dams built so as to form a reservoir of ample dimensions.

Stepping stones are provided to keep the water clean, as well as board protection to prevent the banks from crumbling. Basins are dug for watering horses; troughs are provided only in case of necessity and are then propped on posts and filled by means of pumps. Pipes may be driven if water lies at a reasonable depth—in other words, not more than twenty feet. Depending upon their size, these pipes will deliver from four to twenty-two gallons of water per minute.

If water lies very near the surface a hole is dug and a cask, the bottom of which has been knocked out, is placed in the hole to form a basin. If the water lies at a greater depth the basin may be formed of box sections driven in one on top of the other.—Scientific American.

FISHES WITH ITS WINGS.

The Cassowary Has a Way of Its Own For Capturing Its Prey.

Habits of the cormorant and of our native fish hawk are generally known. Their methods of taking fish are very much like those of birds of prey. But the cassowary fishes according to a method of its own. A well known naturalist witnessed its operations on a river in the island of New Britain.

He saw a cassowary [illegible] the w[illegible] for some minutes apparently watching the water carefully. It then stepped into the river where it was about three feet deep and, partially squatting down, spread its wings out, submerging them, the feathers being spread and ruffled.

The bird remained motionless and kept its eyes closed as if in sleep. It remained in this position for a quarter of an hour when, suddenly closing its wings and straightening its feathers, it stepped out on the bank. Here it shook itself several times, whereupon a quantity of small fishes fell out of its wings and from amid its feathers. These the bird immediately picked up and swallowed.

The fishes had evidently mistaken the feathers for a kind of weed that grows in the water along the banks of the river in this island and which much resemble the feathers of the cassowary. The smaller fishes hide in these weeds to avoid the larger ones that prey on them.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Camels in Warfare.

Camels are a feature of warfare in the far east. Basar was in the year 656 the scene of a fight known as the battle of the camel, in which Ayeshah, the wife of Mahomet, headed the charge mounted upon one of these beasts. And down through the centuries Arab hosts have been led by a girl riding on a blackened camel, singing songs of encouragement to her own side and insult to the other. According to the strict rules of the game her capture or death meant the flight of her tribe, while in the event of victory she led the triumphal march.—London Chronicle.

Human Life.

Human life is the same everywhere. If we could but get at the truth we should find that all the tragedy and comedy of Shakespeare have been reproduced in this little village. God has made all of one blood. What is true of one man is in some sort true of another. Manifestations may differ, but the essential elements and springs of action are the same.—Whittier.

Sleep in the Dark.

The most undisturbed sleep is always enjoyed in a thoroughly darkened room. Light acts upon the brain, and those who keep their blinds up will find that in the summer time, when so few hours are really dark their sleep is restless and disturbed. This is often attributed to the heat, but more often than not it is the light which causes wakefulness.

Where the Danger Was.

"I'd cross the world for you, dear," said the infatuated young man on the parlor sofa.

"Oh, that's all right," said the sweet young thing alongside of him, "but don't cross father."—Yonkers Statesman.

Herat's Hard Luck.

The city which has been most often destroyed is Herat, in Afghanistan. Fifty-six times have its walls been laid in ruins, and fifty-seven times have they been built.

The Proper Thing.

"Here's a story of a man who hanged himself, and space is short. What shall I do?"

"Cut him down."—Baltimore American.

The man makes the circumstances and is spiritually as well as economically the artificer of his own fortune.—Carlyle.

GIRL CHAMPS ARE DINED BY ADMIRERS

North Plainfield High School Teams Puts Finale on Season.

The members of the North Plainfield High School girls' basketball team, interscholastic champions, were given a dinner and dance in the borough kindergarten by mothers, teachers and schoolmates last night. There were just seventy present, including Supervising Principal D. Fred Aungst, Principal Albert Early, W. L. Smalley, Warren Townley and Frank Rowley, who were the guests of honor. Those who were directly responsible for the celebration, and who served the dinner are: Mrs. Warren Townley, Mrs. W. O. Taylor, Mrs. Frank Rowley, Mrs. W. L. Smalley and three teachers, the Misses Edna French, Ethel Barnard and Mary Robley.

The repast was in the form of a picnic lunch. Ice cream and cake topped the menu off, and then came the surprise of the evening, the presenting of the Ritz trophy to the girls' team. Principal Albert Earley, of the High School, acted as toastmaster. Those who spoke were: Mrs. W. O. Taylor, Mrs. Warren Townley, Mrs. W. L. Smalley, Miss Ethel Barnard, coach of the girls' team; Miss Mary Robley, one of the most enthusiastic of North Plainfield "rooters;" Miss Marjorie Burtis, the successful team's captain; D. Fred Aungst, Warren Townley, Frank Rowley, W. L. Smalley, Ralph Smalley, captain of the baseball team, and Hyman Abrams.

This part of the program was followed by an informal social time, and dancing was enjoyed for a couple of hours. Miss Adelaide Ricketts played the piano. The affair was one of the most successful celebrations that has ever been given in the borough High School.

A NEW PHASE OF THE WAR.

When the great war in Europe began last August there were many predictions that it would be over in in a few weeks, but now, after nearly eight months, there is no sign of yielding in any quarter. There are indications, however, that at an early date the great drama will begin to move more swiftly.

One new phase was inaugurated when the allied fleet began the attack on the Dardanelles, following the reported agreement of Great Britain and France to allow Russia free passage through the Straits after the fortifications had been reduced and Turkey brought to terms.

The conquest of the Dardanelles and Constantinople is a very serious undertaking, but it is proceeding steadily in spite of the great difficulties. Its completion would seem to promise a more rapid progress of the war in general, for it would open the way to a possible advance from the southeast against Austria and Germany, such an advance encountering fewer difficulties in the matter of fortified defenses than now confront the Allies at other points. A possible movement of this sort would, of course, be more rapid and fruitful in results should the Balkan States decide to join in the war against the Teutonic alliance.

Still another phase of the war likely to bring more immediate results, and one that at least can hardly fail greatly to forward the march of events, is promised by the coming operations of Kitchener's army. It is reported that five million fresh allied troops, under training for many months, will soon advance against the whole German western line of 300 miles, with England's greatest strategist, Lord Kitchener, in supreme command. Months ago Kitchener was reported as saying that he did not know when the war would end but that he knew it would "begin" in the spring.

If the French and a small British army could check the advance of the Germans and frustrate all their plans of rapid conquest, the vast new levies can not fail to accomplish much more. For where will Germany and Austria find five million new men of the trained and otherwise desirable type to take the field in opposition? All the critical observers agree that Germany alone was prepared for war and that she put her best foot forward first, while England required months to get ready so far as land operations were concerned. Unquestionably this promised new phase of the war brings the ultimate issue much nearer.

Councilman Charles C. Grayes will be the contributing editor for tomorrow's Daily Press. His subject will be "Just a Little More for Plainfield."

NOTHING DONE.

When the Legislature adjourned yesterday it was thought that two more weeks will be all that will be necessary to finish up the work for the year. The sessions have been in progress now for eleven weeks, and it may honestly be said that nothing has been done. A few minor bills have been passed, but not one of the campaign pledges has been made into law, and not a single economy and efficiency measure, recommended by a commission after two years careful study has been sent to the Governor for his approval. The leaders in the Senate believe that all necessary legislation can be enacted by the close of next week, but the House is far behind them, and will take at least two weeks to finish their work.

It is practically settled that a recess will be taken in order to give the appropriations committee time to finish its work, and as the Trenton Times says, that will be a decent, orderly plan to adopt. For several years, after adjournment, it has been found that no provision was made for carrying on important work that had been laid out, while provisional appropriations were made in case certain bills became laws.

That is a careless, unbusinesslike procedure that can be prevented by a recess; which will also serve to let the Legislature itself do the law-making instead of permitting the Governor to use his discretion as to the fate of scores of bills left in his hands ,some of which are so imperfectly drawn as to render approval impossible. The return of the Legislature after a brief vacation will be a decided improvement over the custom of the last twenty years.

NO SUNDAY SCHOOL LEAGUE THIS YEAR

Baseball teams are being organized at the present time all over in this vicinity, and among them are several Sunday school teams that formed the Sunday School Baseball League last season, of which J. Henry Crane was president. Although the teams are organizing there has been no talk of another league this season, as the teams probably do not wish to be held down by strict rules that govern such an organization. Hope Chapel won the title last year, and was awarded the Slonim trophy, but on the whole the league was a failure.

The Park Avenue Baptist, First Baptist, Monroe Avenue and Hope Chapel Sunday school teams are planning to have representative nines on the field, and the Saurer Baseball Club will undoubtedly reorganize. The T. A. B. Society will also be represented, and a city league could be formed. Plainfield will undoubtedly get enough of the national pastime this season, as the High Schools will keep the fans busy until the middle of June, when the other teams are just about in their best condition to continue until September.

ANTIQUITY OF KILTS.

They Were Worn, It Is Said, by Soldiers of Ancient Assyria.

The kilt is a style of dress that is immensely old. The soldiers of Assyrian kings are said to have worn a sort of kilt, while, as we all know, the mountaineers of the Balkans regard it as indispensable.

It seems to have been worn in Scotland from prehistoric times, and, according to some authorities, was at one time only the plaid worn across the shoulders. In cold weather it was twisted around the waist, or perhaps it would be more correct to say that part of it was.

Kilted regiments are comparatively modern, as the first Highland troops, the Black Watch, were recruited in 1725 and were called by their now historic name owing to the somber color of their tartans—black, blue and green.

When they were originally raised each company wore the tartan of its commanding officer, and when banded together in one regiment a special one was designed to prevent jealousy. The Seaforths wear the Mackenzie tartan, the Argyll and Sutherland the Campbell and the Gordons and Camerons the same as their name.—London Saturday Review.

Russia Would Ban All Teutonic Words.

Following the change by imperial edict of the name of St. Petersburg to Petrograd, other Russian cities with Teutonic names are asking that their names be changed to the Slavonic form. Such cities in Russia with German names as Schlusselburg, etc., have asked that their appellations be Russianized. It has been suggested also to discontinue the use of German words, such as "Kammerherr," in court communications and substitute the Russian equivalent.

NEWSPAPERMEN ROAST LEADERS

Annual Dinner of Legislature Correspondents' Club Opportunity for Many Jests.

HITS AT MANY HOBBIES

"The Evening Meal" Appears at Funfest, Containing Scores of Humorous References to Matters in Present Legislature.

Trenton, March 26.—From Cape May sands to Sussex hills New Jersey's super-glad, the whole blame State has got the thrills like a man who's a brand new dad. From Delaware bank to ocean brink there's happiness galore. While bitter grief begins to sink much lower than before. Hilarious joy now holds full sway and sobs grow less and less, from town to town there fades away all feeling of distress. The people's laugh rings like a lyre, each heart's like hunks of foam, and gladsomeness is piling higher than the gilded State House dome.

Political stunts have been sidetracked, the law mill's gone to pot, while for the once State jobs are "jacked"—affairs of State forgot. The G. O. P. is shadowed over, the Bull Moose folks are glum; the Democrats are off the floor, which sure is going some.

'Tis not because the suffragettes have put their bill across, nor yet because the Assembly frets the local option loss. Oh, no! the reason Jersey's wild with overwhelming bliss—come closer while we whisper, child—is simply, only this:

The Club of Legislative Scribes have served another feast; had guests from tribes both great and small, likewise from west to east.

Those lawmen each let out a screech of joy that might be termed a peach, when the other day there came there way a letter that went on to say: "Come to our feed, you men we need to make the pleasure rare indeed, so don't refuse, or else you'll lose a chance to help us all amuse."

So on they came, each one was game," though scribes planned well to "roast" each name.

To get down to facts, the New Jersey Legislative Correspondents' Club served its annual banquet last evening at the Hotel Sterling in this city, and as usual it was easily the "biggest event" of the Legislative session. About 175 guests were present, including distinguished men from all sections of the State.

Owing to illness, Governor Fielder was unable to be present. President Wilson sent Joseph P. Tumulty, his secretary, to represent him. Among the other guests of honor were Senate President Ege, of Atlantic; Speaker Carlton Godfrey, of the Assembly, also of Atlantic; Senator Read, of Camden, Republican leader in the Senate; Assemblyman Thomas F. Martin, of Hudson, the minority leader in the Assembly.

The "Evening Meal," the official organ of the club, which is published annually on the occasion of this dinner, was distributed to the guests as souvenirs. It was the silver anniversary number and was notable for its political quips, its pungent hits at the leading politicians of the State and members of the Legislature, and its witty treatment of the various features which have marked the legislative session.

One of the leading articles was headed "Dalrymple Praises Rev. Billy Sunday, Hopes Jim Nugent will Profit by Visit and that Local Option will Pass." This was a hit at Alfred N. Dalrymple, the Republican boss of Essex county, and as the entire Essex Assembly delegation voted against the local option bill it made a hit.

As the result of Rev. Billy Sunday's visit to the Legislature and his "Sundaygrams" which the Philadelphia papers have made famous, the "Meal" presented a column of "Billy Sundygrams," the first one of which was:

"Brighten the Corner where you are,
"But nix on a corner near a bar."

The officers and members of the club, led by the famed "Billy" Devereux, the champion funmaker, took their usual delight in bantering the politicians present who have aspirations for further political preferment. Ex-Governor E. C. Stokes was handed numerous hard knocks as a candidate for United States Senator. For example, this from the Evening Meal:

What matters it if E. Casper, he
Would wear the toga at D. C.
At him in skirts, we'd look askance
So Neddy dear, stick to your pants.

Another feature of the dinner was a series of witty songs composed for the occasion, hitting at political questions of the State and parodying some of the popular songs of the day. A parody on Billy Sunday's "Brighten the Corner where you are," composed by Mr. Devereux, made a big hit.

Charles J. Allen, of Newark, was toastmaster, as president of the club. The other officers are: Vice-president, Peter J. O'Toole, of Newark, secretary-treasurer, John J. McDonough, of Trenton; trustees, Frank D. Schroth, of Trenton; Michael W. Higgins, of Newark; Frank Thompson, of Trenton, and Leslie R. Fort, of Plainfield.

There were many other amusing references to well-known Jerseymen in the Evening Meal, including several on United States Senator James E. Martine and Assembly Leader William N. Runyon, of Plainfield, both of whom were unable to be present. These included a parody on "Michigan," regarding Mr. Martine in which he was quoted as saying that he wanted to go back to the farm.

If I have said anything I am sorry for I am glad of it.—Governor Fielder.

Blessed are the peacemakers for heirs ought to be the United States Senate.—Edward Casper Stokes.

Senator Martine's chair needs a fresh coat of varnish. I am in the business.—Franklin Murphy.

I am opposed to petty politics but I am open to conviction.—Senator White.

There is no man for whom I have greater admiration than Senator Martine.—State Treasurer Grosscup.

Whatever has been well said by anyone is my property.
—Edward Casper Stokes.

Free trade is not a principle, it is an expedient.
—Woodrow Wilson.

Some of the timely verses were:

Charles O'Connor Hennessy
Keeps as busy as a bee——
When his reports have given out,
When he no more aloud can shout
'Twill be for him time of distress
But what relief for the tired Press.

Said Hutchinson "Let's have home rule."
Said the G. O. P. "You are a fool—
Such things in platforms are all right
But here we keep them out of sight."

Shout the triumph of Jim Martine
Victor he in a struggle keen.
Showed the President he wasn't so much
Taught Ed Grosscup he was in Dutch.
Lifted George Hampton out of his shoes
Handed a wallop to Billy Hughes.
Busted wide open the State machine
Shout the triumph of Jim Martine.

How oft the oldtime critic
With his twanging, bloomin' lyre.
Has roasted all us moderns
With the ardor of his fire.

He's harping at our solons
To be bards just—like his sires,
Poor simp, he doesn't know it
That he's up 'gainst finer lyres.

If you want to have a measure introduced,
See Godfrey;
If you'd like to give a funny scheme a boost,
See Godfrey;
If you wish the thing debated—and it happens so you may,
All its meaning expurgated—in an expeditious way,
Or the whole durned thing cremated—this is all there is to say—
See Martin.
If you want its virtues told in fancy phrase
See Runyon;
And expounded in a way to quite amaze,
See Runyon;
BUT, if you want to send it humpin'—if you'd like to see it through,
O'er all difficulties bumpin'—as we gather that you do,
Then you better go a jumpin'—we are whisperin' to you,
SEE NUGENT, OR DAL.

Among the Plainfielders at the dinner were R. F. R. Huntsman, William R. Townsend, Dr. Frederick Hughes and Leslie R. Fort.

MAKES REAL SACRIFICE TO HELP THE ALBANIANS

One of the appeals for "a dollar for little Albanian girls," sent out by William Willard Howard, secretary of the Albanian Relief Fund, brought the following reply from a Plainfield mother:

"Yours of the 10th received, and beg to state I could not afford $1, as my husband has been out of work all winter, and have five small children myself; but, as you said, I put one of mine in the place of that child, and my heart went right out to them. My little boy stood by and he said: 'Mother, just think if that was our baby—what would you do?' So I said I would send all I could, and if everyone would do that I think you could do a great deal. Enclosed find money order for fifty cents."

IN THE SPORTING SPOTLIGHT

LICENSE CLERK HUNG THE INDIAN SIGN ON BOB FITZ AND HIS BLUSHING FIANCEE

Bob Fitsimmons—a blushing young woman clinging to his muscular right—entered the Brooklyn Marriage License Bureau yesterday afternoon and informed the clerk that his companion was Mrs. Temo Simomin, of 59 Court street, Newark, N. J. The former fighter gave his age as fifty-two and Mrs. Simomin admitted twenty-seven.

"Married before?" asked the clerk. Mrs. Simomin nodder affrmatively, and Bob said of his own career:

"Three times. One dead. Two divorced."

"Have you a copy of the divorce decrees?"

"One in Manhattan, the other in Chicago," groaned Bob.

The big freckled man was told copies of these papers must be shown before a marriage license could be issued, and the Chicago decree must be certified.

With Mrs. Simomin still clinging to him, Bob made for the street. The information was a solar plexus blow, and he seemed groggy.

In the late afternoon Bob appeared in the office of County Clerk Schneider in Manhattan.

"I expected Mrs. Simomin to meet me where you buy marriage licenses," he said.

"But you don't buy them here; you get them in the office of the county clerk," he was told.

"Yes, we deal in them," the clerk replied.

"Gimme one," Bob said.

The decree was being copied, but the old fighter said he hadn't time to wait, and would call again.

"They are giving me a dinner over in Brooklyn tonight," he explained, "and I suppose she's over there."

"Bob has had experience enough to know how to get married," said an employe of the county clerk, "unless he's overtrained."

Swimming News and Notes

The capture by Princeton of the intercollegiate water polo championship should open the eyes of captains and coaches to the necessity of developing strong, able scoring forwards. The Tiger team was weak on defence; its backfield did not compare favorably with those of Yale and Columbia, yet the dashing attacks of Nourse and Selby proved irrestible and enabled the rather unbalanced Orange and Black sextet to win decisively every game of the season.

Too little attention is paid to the linesmen at present. One can count on the fingers of a single hand the first-class forwards of the year. Better by far sacrifice the strength of the rear guard than lack the power to smash through the opponents' defense. Every player—never mind what his given position—should be taught how to reach the rival goal, both over and under water, that he may be shifted and used in attack if the occasion demands.

There is no doubt that Princeton's brilliant victory was due chiefly to Nourse's splendid individual work and to the constant and most efficient support he received from Captain Selby.

As expected, Pennsylvania defeated Princeton in swimming and brought about a triangular tie in the race for league honors. Yale, Columbia and Pennsylvania now are on even terms, and unless the protest of the Philadelphia men against the disqualification of Shryock in the Columbia meet is upheld, which seems most unlikely, the tie will have to be decided in a post-season series. The association authorities will hold a conference in New York on March 28 to take action on the appeal and lay plans for the swim-off if necessary.

An interesting feature of the Pennsylvania-Princeton meet was the try-out of the suggestion recently made for avoiding fouls in swimming races. A rope was stretched in the middle of the pool, from end to end, and the two teams drew for sides, the representatives of each side starting in their own lanes, separated by the centre barrier.

The experiment proved most successful. In more than one instance contestants swerved from their course, but instead of colliding with opponents, as would previously have been the case, and so causing trouble, they either ran into the rope, the wall or their own team-mate, jeopardizing only their own chances. It will avoid all future trouble if the innovation is generally adopted.

College water polo is growing steadily in popularity and yearly winning more recruits. The newly formed team of John Hopkins University made its competitive bow the other day, against the Princeton champions. Amherst has expressed willingness to organize a sextet in order to join the intercollegiate league, and Rutgers proposes to take up the game next season.

Herbert Vollmer, of Columbia, will go into history as the best all-around 'varsity swimmer of 1914-15, with James Shryock, of Pennsylvania, next in line. The New York boy won the 100-yard championship in the record time of 58 1-5 seconds, and the 220-yard title in 2 minutes 32 4-5 seconds, the fastest mark of the year. Shryock took seconds in all three of the league swims, and scored nine points to Vollmer's ten.

Water sports never seem to lose their hold on devotees. Another former champion and record-holder of swimming has returned to competition after a period of retirement—Jamieson Handy, of Chicago, originator of the so-called legless crawl stroke, and once the leading American paddler at distances ranging from a half mile to ten miles. Handy is now playing soccer water polo with the Illinois Athletic Club squad, and was a member of the team which won the Central district championship a few days ago.

The championship committee of the Amateur Athletic Union is to be congratulated on its work in arranging the schedule for the national aquatic titles. Not only have the sanctions been granted so as to minimize for all concerned both expense and loss of time, but the list of dates and places will enable those entering several events to attend all the meets in one short trip.

Following is the announced programme:

March 24, 150-yard back-stroke swim, at the Pittsburg Ataletic Association; March 26, 500-yard free style swim, at the New York Athletic Club; March 29, 220-yard swim and plunge for distance, at the Brookline Gymnasium Athletic Association, Brookline, Mass.; April 8, fancy diving contest, at the New York Athletic Club; April 14, 50-yard swim and 200-yard breast stroke race, at the Chicago Athletic Association; April 15, 100-yard swim and 400-yard relay race, at the Illinois Athletic Club, Chicago; April 16, soccer water polo, at the Illinois Athletic Club.

At the rate T. H. Luke, of Lawrenceville, is developing, he should soon land among our foremost middle distance swimmers. A month ago he could not beat 2 minutes 43 seconds for the furlong in the Princeton interscholastics; the other week, in the slow pool of the New York Athletic Club, he equalled the high school record of 2 minutes 36 4-5 seconds.

Alex Meffert, who coached and developed Daniels when that wonderful swimmer was breaking all records, said a day or two ago that Herbert Vollmer is quite as good if not better than Daniels at the same point of their career. He also is of the opinion that Vollmer is likely to go on and earn equal fame and as great a name. It is true, however, that many young swimmers flash prominently and reach a certain high point and then never improve further and live up to their promise. Such, it is hoped, will not be the case with Vollmer. This youth is remarkably endowed with those qualities which make for speed in the water.

San Francisco, March 19.—The Pacific Association of the Amateur Athletic Union, it was announced today, rebelled against the senior governing body at a meeting last night at which more than forty member associations and clubs were represented.

The action was taken because it was charged the national indoor swimming and water polo championships awarded to San Francisco by the superior body two years ago and ratified last year were recently transferred to cities in the East.

A formal protest, refusing to agree to this change, was telegraphed to the Amateur Athletic Union headquarters today. Every allied organization west of Chicago was urged by telegraph to join in the protest. A convention of all the allied clubs and associations was called to meet in San Francisco in July. It is expected that twenty States will be represented. A proposal to divide the present jurisdiction of the Amateur Athletic Union into four self-governing bodies, to be termed the Northern, Southern, Atlantic and Pacific associations, will be presented to that convention by the Pacific Association.

In reference to the awarding of the national indoor swimming championships to Eastern clubs this year, F. W. Rubien, chairman of the national championship committee of the Amateur Athletic Association, said yesterday:

"It was clearly understood that only the outdoor championships were to be decided at San Francisco this year, and in addition there would be indoor exhibitions.

"The national indoor championships have been divided between Eastern clubs as usual. The rules distinctly say that not more than one of the free style swimming championships may be held on any one day.

"As only five days have been allotted for swimming events at the exhibition, all of the championships could not be decided within that time. Hence the holding of indoor exhibitions instead of championships at San Francisco was deemed advisable."

From Honolulu word comes that Miss Dorothy Becker, of San Francisco, was awarded the decision in a 50-yard swimming event over Miss Ruth Stacker, of Honolulu, by the unintentional fouling of the latter. Both participants mistook the finish. Miss Becker's time was 33 4-5 seconds. Miss Stacker easily won the 440-yard contest in 7 minutes 8 3-5 seconds.

Because of the non-appearance of several members of the team, the Plainfield Five had no game on the Columbus court last night. There were eight girls present, so four-girl teams were organized and an amusing game was staged, the teams playing throughout the thirty minutes with no lines. Those on the quintets were the Misses Clara Smith, Ellen Doughty, Anna McGinnes, Mildred McAuliffe, Helen Bryniarski, Laura Smith, Theresa McCullough and Marion Mair.

LAST GAME FOR P. H. S. GIRLS.

NORTH PLAINFIELD GIRLS' BASKETBALL RESUME SAVORS OF SOME GREAT WORK

The basketball season of the North Plainfield High School girls was brought to a most triumphant close last Tuesday, when they defeated the Ninth street maidens in the final clash for the interscholastic championship. This victory and eighteen others are the results of the season under the careful coaching of Miss Ethel Barnard, only five defeats being chalked up against them.

Three of the defeats were received at the hands of local teams, namely, the Y. W. C. A., the Plainfield Five and P. H. S., while two were inflicted by out-of-town delegations.

Much of the season's success is due to the steadiness of the regular quintet, the two forwards, Miss Burtis and Miss Spencer, having played in every game. Miss Bertha Keller, at guard, also took part in all of the nineteen games, while Miss Douglas only missed playing in one of the contests and Miss Debele in three. Miss McCullough, who made the sixth player when the team played as a sextet, was always ready to go in the game when needed, and showed up well in all of the contests in which she took part.

The big factor of the season's success, however, was the playing of the team as a whole, and the trying not for individual records, but for co-operation and teamwork.

PARKS CRACK ICE IN ELKS' SERIES

Finally Succeeed in Taking Two on Their Rivals Alleys.

The members of the Park Club senior bowling team, rolling in the finest form they have displayed in any of the previous matches with the Elks' team, broke away last night and captured two out of three games from the "Bills" on the latter's alleys, thus getting the edge in the home and home series that has been going on for several months between these two clubs. It took three series, with two matches each, to do the trick but last night the Washington avenue bowlers rolled three great games, all of the team scores being above the "900" mark.

The largest gallery that has yet attended the games was present last night and the Parks had their share of the "rooters." The match was a very exciting affair and was not decided until the last game was played, the Parks taking the initial roll and the home pinners copping the second. All of the three games were won by large margins, the visitors having an advantage of 86 pins in the first game, the scores being 947 to 861. Vail topped the list for the Elks, and chalked up a 203 but his teammates failed to keep up the good work and pulled the team score down. Daniel hit for a 207 in this game while Long counted for 194.

The Watchung avenue men came back in the next game and totalled 945 against their opponents 903. Ray Lyman scored a 210 in this game but marks of 155 and 160 brought down the total while the Elks made scores of 195, 198, 187, 184 and 181. The pinning of Mulford and Long was the feature of the third game, those players getting a 212 and 203 respectively, which aided materially in making such a high team score, 961.

All of the home players rolled their poorest in the deciding game and made a total team mark of 815, the lowest of the match. After the match and the Park heroes had been congratulated over their final success, dancing was enjoyed in the ball room until a late hour. The scores follow:

SILVER LOVING CUP FOR N. P. H. S. GIRLS

First Interscholastic Feminine Trophy Presented by The Ritz.

The greaest surprise of the evening in connection with the North Plainfield High School celebration last night was the presenting of the Ritz cup to the members of the girls' basketball team. Mr. Haff, manager of the Ritz, decided that instead of returning the trophy offered by that concern for the P. H. S.-Y. M. C. A. series, to make the champion girls' team a present of it. Mr. Haff could not be present at the dinner last night and sent the following letter:

"On account of the calling off of the final basketball game between P. H. S. and the Y. M. C. A. we have withdrawn the cup offered by the Ritz. Under the circumstances may we have the pleasure and the privilege of offering it to the North Plainfield High School team, who defeated Plainfield in the third game last Tuesday."

Miss Marjorie Burtis, captain of the girls' team, received the cup last night, and this morning, during the opening exercises of the High School, presented it to Principal Earley for the school. This is the first interscholastic trophy given for a girls' series, and it may be that other Plainfield or North Plainfield merchants will follow suit in future years, as the girls are just as deserving of trophies as the boys. With this cup and medals, which they will undoubtedly receive, the girls will be a genuine championship outfit.

RANDOLPH SIGNS TO TWIRL FOR PACERS

Local Heaver Has An Agreement Drawn With Amboy.

Cliff Randolph, of this city, has agreed to do the twirling for the Perth Amboy Pacers this season. Cliff was tendered an agreement by which he is to pitch five innings in a number of Sunday games during the season.

The local twirler's great work for the Pacers in the first half of last season will long be remembered by Perth Amboy fans. Although he lost the first game he pitched against Danbury, he quickly rounded to form and won six games in a row. Late in July Cliff slumped, and was finally forced out of the game in August with a lame arm. Two weeks elapsed before Randolph discovered his ailment, and he then took a trip to Youngstown, O., where the famous bonesetter, Dr. Reese, set a dislocated bone in his right elbow. Although Randolph did not pitch any games there later his arm regained its former strength, and he expects to be in the best of shape for this season. Randolph won twelve and lost eight games with the Pacers last year.

He was also drafted for this season by Connie Mack, but has not yet been called to report.

Scattered Sport Gleanings

One of the Rip Van Winkle calibre of basketball fans poked his head in the door of the Press office this morning and asked when the third game of the city title series between the Plainfield High School and Y. M. C. A. teams would be played. That's our idea of nothing at all to worry about.

Two teams contented to let a third game for a cup and championship go unplayed are about on a parallel with the guy who admitted he couldn't "shinney" up the side of Washington Monument. Both appear to be scared to death of the third encounter and it might prove disastrous to their nervous systems to force them to battle it out.

Now that the male and feminine basketball hatchet has been thrown into the scrap-heap it's about time someone started an interscholastic scandal along the baseball line. Possibly an inter-school feminine engagement.

Headline in an exchange reads—"Wire says Martin is likely to lose job." As long as nothing more than a wire said this it is our opinion that Jack has no grounds to start negotiations for a wooden kimona and a two by eight plot of real estate.

Our local Y. M. C. A. captain lines up with President Wilson on the neutrality proposition. That's a boy "Al," but even Democratic policies get their bumps once in a while. Keep both feet on the ground.

It must be a great thing to have something nobody wants. The Y. M. C. A. athletes claim the city title and the High School boys flatly refuse to take it away from them. Our idea of a champion, though, is one who is willing to defend his crown under any conditions.

The Y. M. C. A. delegation certainly must have mighty little confidence in its ability to hold on to the gonfalon when it lets a little thing like a playing court stop it from meeting a bunch of infant lightweights in a title engagement.

If it wasn't for the fact that a bowling alley exists in Somerset street we'd never know there were any wooden image smasher talent over the brook. We've been introduced to the Park Club athletes but most of them hang their hats in the Queen City.

Teasing a bunch of girls along so that they led at the end of the first half by two points and then squeezing the verdict out by one lone tally is pretty rough work. This is what the Battin girlies did to the red and blue cohorts in the locals' last "away from the family fireside" game of the season.

Speaking of girls' basketball we are led to wonder if feminine championship medals will be any different from those passed around in mail circles. A few ruffles along the edge and some fancy stitching in the middle, maybe.

A baseball team composed of girls has issued a challenge to Plainfield misses to decide the metropolitan feminine title. It's one safe bet that there won't be much opposition to worry the challengers around these diggings.

The last big attraction of the season will be staged on the Columbus Club court tomorrow night when the Plainfield Y. W. C. A. tries conclusions with the Trenton Association misses for the State title. A more fitting finale to preceed the jerking down of the asbestos would be hard to bill and indications point to a record crowd of enthusiasts at the West Front street clubhouse.

Plainfield "Prints" will windup their bowling schedule tonight on the Westfield alleys. Wonder if there is any significance attached to the selection of Mt. Ararat as a place to die in.

Baseball's coming reminds us of our annual search for Norman Barnes, Warry McLaughlin, Jimmy Montross, Jim Emery, Britt Martin, and other veteran notables who have to be yanked out of hibernation.

RICE BREAKS RECORD IN FIVE BACK MATCH

Two high scores were rolled in the handicap five-back tournament at the Park Club, C. A. Rice winning three points with a total score of 240. His net mark was 227, but his was aided with a 12 handicap. A. M. Abbott was second, and annexed two points with a mark of 215. He was placed at scratch. Rice made a new record at the club for one game, scoring 122 in the first game out of a possible 180. This is a fine mark, considering that it is a hard feat to get a strike.

The sixth point went to F.A.Weeks whose score was 137, plus a 40 handicap, giving him a total of 177. The results follow:

THIRD VICTORY IN FREE-FOR-ALL TILT

St. Joseph's Club Trims Columbus Club Aggregation.

In a rough game of basketball, in which both aggregations indulged in a free-for-all, give-and-take dose, the St. Joseph's boys defeated the Columbus Club for the third time this season on the Columbus Club court last night, by a score of 37 to 14.

In the first half the West Front street quintet had the upper hand for several minutes, but the boroughites soon caught up and established a lead which the local boys were never able to overcome. The score at the conclusion of the initial period was 10 to 26 in favor of the St. Joseph's team.

The Columbus Club forces were kept without a single field goal in the second period, while the North Plainfielders numbered four goals and three fouls.

Moulton and McDonough figured in the high scoring for the visiting quintet. The score is as follows:

DARING COSSACKS

Russian Rough Riders an Old and Famous Body.

ONCE KNIGHTS OF FREEDOM.

In Former Times They Were Known Entirely as Defenders of the Poor and the Oppressed—Deadly as Marksmen and Experts With the Sword.

The popular conception of the Russian Cossack is a whiskered atrocity who rides with the speed of the wind comes to do acts of pillage and of rapine and then goes back again into the bosom of the tall grass from which he came. By many he is supposed to belong to a legendary tribe whose history stretches back into the blackness of the dark ages from which he has not yet emerged.

No; the Cossack is in many respects like the simple Russian peasant. In others he is like the cowboy of the western plains, whose home is as much in the saddle as in his own village. Far from being oppressors, the Cossacks were once known entirely as the defenders of the poor and the wronged. They belonged to an order of rustic chivalry, the Kazachestvo, the Knights of Freedom.

The name Kazak is of Tartar origin and means "Freeman." It was applied to men driven from the more settled countries and who under the blue sky rode without the trammel of tradition without the interference of kings, potentates and powers. There was a time when nobles laid heavy hand upon the subject and human life was held in small account.

The thirteenth and the fourteenth centuries saw the Cossacks developed into communities living in the neighborhood of the river Dnieper and riding hither and thither to keep watch and ward over the domain of the emperor.

The cowboy guards of the great southwest in this country, who are now disappearing from our American life, are Cossacks in spirit. When they become cavalrymen, Texas Rangers or rough riders they are American Cossacks.

There were some criminals among the Cossacks, but once they had enrolled in the Cossack legions they left behind them all their past. Some were exiles for political reasons, others had been hunted for taking into their own hands the avenging of wrongs. And what avails a name after all? When the officers of the state came inquiring into the Cossack encampments for Dimetri this and Ivan that nothing was known of them at all, for the Cossack permitted men to divest themselves of former titles and to begin the free life with a new nomenclature. To this the newcomer were "Big Nose," "Yellow Buttons" or some other nickname comrade.

While other persons paid taxes the Cossack was subject to no such inconvenient levy. His share was paid by the power of his sword and his pistols. He insisted always that he was not to be assessed, but that he should give his military service when Russia required it of him.

When the Cossack communities were first formed they were inhabited only by men. The Kazachestvo took vows of celibacy. It was an order that lived like anchorites and fought like demons.

As the ages have passed there have been many changes. The Cossacks have families and their own home life. At first, however, young and daring youths were sent out to ride with the Cossacks, and there was no system of chivalry more punctilious than was this government of the men of the steppes. Offenses that involved violation of their vows or the ill treatment of the weak and the oppressed were punished with death. The sentences were quickly imposed and speedily executed. Cowboy justice and Cossack rule are the same in principle.

The dress of the Cossack has become more or less conventional as the years have gone. We see him in the long coat of brown or of green, with the great lambskin cap on his head, with strong belts containing cartridges about his waist. He shows the influence of military training. The Cossack of today is a model of elegance compared with what he used to be. He seized garments covered with gold lace, coats of silks and sable and smeared them with mire and tallow to show his supreme disregard for fine trappings. He wore coarse garb, but in the care of his weapons the Cossack has always been punctilious.

His markmanship was deadly and accurate, even when riding at full speed, as that of the cowboys of the western United States. The Cossacks have been expert swordsmen for centuries. Their proficiency in arms came from their environment. The steppes in which they sought their livelihood were covered with grass often so high only the head and shoulders of the riders appeared above the top of it. Game was abundant in those thick tangles; fruit could be obtained easily; the rivers teemed with fish. The wants of the Cossacks were few and simple. They could do with much or little. A slice of horseflesh carried under the saddle to keep it warm was a ration fit to be called a luxury.—New York Herald.

BREVITY OF ENGLISH.

Its Advantage In This Respect Over French and German.

In an international report, printed in parallel columns in French, German and English, the three versions being exact translations of each other, the English report invariably finished first; sometimes it won by a whole page. As a rule, the French report was the most diffuse.

This brevity of English is partly explained by the fact that English is made up to an extraordinary extent of words of one syllable. Its nouns having (unlike the German) lost all their inflections except the possessive "s," have become mere roots, a very large proportion of them monosyllabic. In Germany a monosyllabic root practically always gets an extra syllable tacked on by way of case ending. In the second place English has little of the elaborate and explicit machinery of structure that French has, so it saves space in prepositions and such paraphernalia. Instead, English has what the grammarians call incipient agglutination—that is, sticking words together in groups without either prepositions or case endings to connect them.

An example of the former kind of brevity is a word like "earthquake," two syllables, compared with the German "erdbeben," three syllables, and the French "tremblement de terre," five syllables. An example of the terseness of English would be a phrase like, "I have been to the house and have now come back;" every word a single syllable. In a telegram this would be just as intelligible in the form "Been house now back." You cannot carry that sort of thing far in any other European language.—Manchester Guardian.

THE STATE OF FRANKLIN.

It Had a Short Life In What Is Now Eastern Tennessee.

In 1784 North Carolina, growing impatient of the burden that her western settlements had imposed upon her treasury and irritated by the complaints of the people of those sections, passed an act conveying to the federal government all the lands that now constitute the state of Tennessee.

The people of the country that is now eastern Tennessee, feeling themselves left without a government, made haste to organize themselves into an independent commonwealth, which they called, as a tribute to the illustrious philosopher, the state of Franklin. These people applied for admission into the Union; but, the federal government being slow and unwilling to act and North Carolina having repealed the act of cession of her western province to the Union, the state of Franklin came into very troubled waters for some years.

Some efforts were made to persuade the Kentuckians to join themselves to the state of Franklin, a provision having been made for such co-operation in the constitution of the experiment, but they came to nothing. The new state gradually fell to pieces, and in 1787 its brilliant and able governor, John Sevier, was put on trial for high treason. He was released by a daring rescue and subsequently pardoned and restored in name to the leadership, which he never lost in the affections of his people. In 1787 the last legislature of the state of Franklin held its session at Greenville.—Philadelphia Press.

Napoleon's Confidence.

Just before his marriage Napoleon received the appointment of commander in chief of the army of Italy. He was then twenty-six. "You are rather young," said one of the directors, "to assume responsibility so weighty and to take command over veteran generals."

"In one year," Napoleon replied, "I shall be old or dead."

"We can place you in command of men only," said Carnot, "for the troops are in need of everything, and we can furnish you with no money to provide supplies."

"Give me only men enough," Napoleon answered, "and I ask for nothing more; I will be answerable for the result."—"Table Talk and Opinions of Napoleon Buonaparte."

Pure Bred Arab Horses.

In Cairo there is a society for preserving the pure-bred Arab horse. It is said that recent changes in the lives and habits of the Bedouins have resulted in the deterioration of these horses. A practical horseman of wide experience says that as a rule the Arab horse is now no better treated than our own horses, whatever may have been true of the old days when such poems as "The Arab to His Steed" were written.

TOMORROW'S BURDEN.

It has been well said that no man ever sank under the burden of the day. It is when tomorrow's burden is added to the burden of today that the weight is more than a man can bear.

This office, and the companies we represent, have stepped into the breach many a time and prevented what would otherwise have been more than a man could bear, complete ruin.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Kidney and bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning scalding sensation, or setting up irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

JAMES MELVIN LEE TO ADDRESS RALLY

Press Department of County C. E. to Meet in Elizabeth March 30.

James Melvin Lee, director of journalism at the New York University, has been secured to address the rally of the press department of the Union County Christian Endeavor Union, to be held next Tuesday evening, March 30, in the auditorium of the Elizabeth Y. M. C. A.

State President John T. Sproull, of Arlington; Press Chairman Edgar F. Garwood, of the Brooklyn Christian Endeavor Union, and others will also take part in the program. There will be excellent music and a general good time.

Promptly at 7:15 p. m. a supper will be served by the members of the First Baptist C. E. Society, of Elizabeth, a small charge being made to assist in defraying the expense. Those desiring supper reservations are requested to communicate with Miss Charlotte M. Conger, 112 Stiles street, Elizabeth, or telephone (Elizabeth 2723W), stating approximately how many will be present from each society.

The general rally will begin at 8:15 p. m., to which the public is very cordially invited. Mr. Lee will speak on "The Church and the Press," and after the general rally, he will conduct a conference on "Practical Publicity for Christian Endeavor." It is seldom that so practical a man as Mr. Lee can be secured.

Frederick L. Mintel, of Rahway, press superintendent of the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Union, will act as toastmaster. The rally promises to be the most interesting Christian Endeavor event of the season.

The Elizabeth Y. M. C. A. is very easily reached, being located on East Jersey street, one-half a block off of Broad street; two minutes walk from the Main Line trolley and only five minutes' walk from either the Central or the Pennsylvania Railroad stations. A record attendance is expected.

JEWISH OBSERVANCE OF "THE FEAST OF PASSOVER"

The Feast of the Passover, one of the most solemn of Jewish observances, will be celebrated by all local Hebrew congregations next week, beginning with sundown Monday evening. Services appropriate to the season will be held at all of their houses of worship.

Special Feast of the Passover services will be held at Temple Sholem, Monday evening, at 6 o'clock, no sermon being delivered on that occasion, although there will be special music by the choir. Another service has been arranged for Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock, which will also be marked by special music. Rev. Dr. H. L. Martin will preach a sermon next Friday evening, at the conclusion of the season, on the subject, "Sweet Recollections." Dr. Martin will preach tonight on the subject, "The Prophet Elijah."

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

"Quo Vadis," the greatest dramatic picture production ever produced is coming to the Plainfield Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday as a big feature for Holy Week. What is more, it is to be shown at popular prices for the first time since the wonderful story was transferred to the canvas.

This series of pictures make up an entire evening's entertainment, and visualizes all the principal episodes of the famous novel from which it is taken. It embraces romance, tragedy and history, and is the most veracious and instructive photoplay before the public. Every student of history and the Bible should enjoy it and glean the values so admirably illustrated of the causes that brought about the fall of Rome and the rise of Christianity under the most hostile and Pagan opposition.

As an appropriate offering for Holy Week, "The Sign of the Cross" will be shown at the Plainfield Theatre, Friday and Saturday, April 2 and 3, and "The Ghost Breakers" will hold the boards next Tuesday, on which date the serial film, "The Black Box," will begin. The attraction today and tomorrow is the dramatic success "The Bargain," while Fay Foster's burlesque company, with forty pretty girls, will be the drawing card for Monday.

WILL HOLD AUCTION SALE.

Stonewall Jackson, of the borough, will conduct an auction sale at the stables of Peter Seader, 20 Chatham street, on Monday, April 5, at 1 o'clock. If it rains the auction will be held on the next clear day. A large variety of wagons, horses, sleighs, harness, blankets and robes will be auctioned off.

Library Notes.

Published Every Friday.

Of books in demand at booksellers throughout the country during the month of January last the following head the list in the order named:

1. "The Lone Star Ranger."
2. "Eyes of the World."
3. "Patrol of the Sun Dance Trail."
4. "Mr. Grex of Monte Carlo."

Strange to say the chief demand in New York city has not been for any of the above, but in the downtown book stores the greatest demand has been for the "Ragged Messenger," and in uptown book stores, for "Betty All Alone."

It is an interesting question why the books which were popular throughout the rest of the country were not the most popular in New York city, and also why the book which was the most popular in downtown New York city book stores should not have been the most popula uptown stores.

The New York City Public Library publishes each month a list of the six non-fiction books most called for during each week of the month. In January there was an entirely new set of books at the head of the list for each of the four weeks, with the exception that "Yourself and Your Neighbors" was one of the six books during three of the weeks, and "Russia, a Country of Extremes," was one of the six books during two of the weeks. It is rather remarkable that not one of the other twenty-two books was among the most popular six books for two weeks in succession.

Although February is a short month, the circulation of books at the Plainfield Public Library was greater than during any month since June, 1914, with the exception of January. The number circulated was 7,834.

"The Lone Star Ranger" (by Zane Grey), the book most in demand throughout the country during January, furnishes an interesting comment upon popular demand and the requirements of a "best seller." It is a story of the Wild West, and is rather a conventional romance of wild border days in Texas. The hero is a dead shot, and in almost every chapter there is an affray of some sort.

Yet all this is not to say that the book does not make interesting reading. For that sort of a story it is well written, and in a way gives a truthful picture of conditions in Texas when the Texas Rangers were trying to bring about a reign of law, and at least emphasizes to the reader the difficulties which surrounded those who were trying to achieve this in those unsettled times. The chief value of the book, however, would seem to lie in its indication of what the public likes to read.

Some few novels written twenty years or more ago are still widely enough read to demand new editions occasionally. Among these are George Du Maurier's "Peter Ibbetson," Conan Doyle's "The White Company," Walter Besant's "All Sorts and Conditions of Men," and William Black's "Judith Shakespeare." Of all of the above Harper's have recently issued new editions.

Mark Twain's "The Prince and the Pauper" has been chosen by the War Department for use in the public schools of Manila.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Laughter will run riot at Proctor's Theatre tomorrow, when comedy moving pictures of the highest rank will be added features to the big program. One of the very "extra specials" will be another of those ludicrous Charles Chaplin screams, "The Champion." Proctor's Theatre has made almost everyone in Plainfield acquainted with Mr Chaplin, as it has been handling his latest Essaney series for the past two months. See him tomorrow and imbibe enough humor to last you a month. General Fun and his army will use another 42-centimeter laugh-getter at Proctor's tomorrow in the display of the World's Film Corporation second big comedy release, "Health by the Year," featuring Jefferson De Angelis, drafted from the legitimate stage to the camera field only a few weeks ago. Those who saw Richard Carle in "The Dancing Beetle" at Proctor's last week know that a World's Film comedy means a bunch of giggles. The popular Front street playhouse will offer both of these feature films, in addition to other comedy and dramas.

The change of vaudeville yesterday introduced one of the best comedy acts of the season in the offering of Garcenetti Brothers, bounding trampeline artists, assisted by their wonderful dog, "Toby." This dog is a positive scream. Edith Clifford made a pronounced hit with her character isongs, and the numbers met with instant favor. There were the Two Rubes, comedy musical artists; Mack and Pringree, singing and talking, and Percy Warren and company, comedy skit.

Where does it fasten? will be your first question about the blouse with the V-neck—centre illustration. It has two clusters of tucks in the back and two in the front, which look as though they held the key to the fastening. At the same time, the blouse looks as though it might slip on over the head. But it doesn't. It fastens along the cluster at the left side of the front. Undoubtedly the cleverest blouse of the season. The illustrations best tell the story of the other models.

BROADWAY AND THIRTY-THIRD STREET

SHOW YOUR FRIENDS YOU INTEND TO WIN IN FREE TOUR RACE

It Takes Hustling to Get a Prize Worth While, and Press Contestants Are All in the Contest to Win—Special Awards Spur Aspirants.

First Prize.
$100.00 Diamond Solitaire Ring.
Second Prize.
Merchandise Certificate, good for $25.00 in trade at Woodhull & Martin Co., 163 East Front street, and $15.00 in gold.
Third Prize.
$35.00 Solid Gold Wrist Watch.

The ballot box will be opened again at 8 p. m. tonight and another counting made which will appear in Monday's issue of the Press. The gains for the special prizes will also be published and revised to date.

Take notice of what can be done in a short period in the way of winning valuable "assets."

Whether or not it be one whose time is worth two or three hundred dollars per week, more or less, the woman whose time is used in salaried employment, or the one who is otherwise engaged, now has a chance of a lifetime to win a valuable prize during the next week. If you fail to win the $100 diamond solitaire Ring, which is the greatest offer, there still remains two other splendid special prizes.

If you want to cross the American continent as an honored member of the "Four Trippers" you have the opportunity. If you enter the race and should fail to win the diamond Ring you can win a $25 Merchandise Certificate and $15 in Gold by having the second greatest number of votes standing during the period above mentioned. The third prize applies the same. Now is the occasion to "grab up" one of the special prizes under the unexcelled offer and go ahead after that and get a trip or two across the continent.

How to Get the Votes.

Talk earnestly when you are asking for a subscription and when your friends see that you are really in earnest and want very much to win it will be an eager master if just to for fun to see if you can't, and you need not be surprised to find your name at the bottom of the heap at the final count.

There is not one in the race who can feel sure of her success until the last vote is counted on April 3rd. Every candidate has friends who have promised to subscribe before the contest closes, April 3rd. The candidates should not let one opportunity go by them without exhausting its value in the way of securing these votes now. If such advice is heeded, there will be no regrets.

Use the telephone and make personal calls—anyone will do—be sure to get them all.

Remember about the extension subscription, anyone who may have given you a three months or a year's subscription, can give you another three months' or year's subscription and you are entitled to the difference between the vote allowance on the shorter and longer subscription term. Furthermore, remember that an order or subscription which was new at the start will be held as new throughout the entire contest. This means much to all candidates as many of them can and do get their friends to take longer term subscriptions in this way.

Prizes on Exhibition.

First prize, $100 diamond ring, purchased from the jewelry store of Charles E. Vail, 256 Park avenue; second prize, $25 merchandise certificate on Woodhull & Martin Company and $15 in gold; third prize, $35 solid gold wrist watch, purchased from Reliable Jewelry Shop, 245 West Front street.

The jewelry prizes are on display at the above stores, and every person is invited to look them over; they are beauties, both of them.

Mr. Vail is willing to repurchase the diamond ring offered as first prize from the winner any time within one year for $90 cash.

Not Limited to Districts.

The special prizes will be awarded as follows:

For the first prize, a $100 diamond ring will be given to the candidate, regardless of district limitations, who turns in the greatest number of votes on paid in advance subscriptions between midnight Wednesday, March 17, and 10 p. m., Saturday, April 3.

The second and third prizes will be awarded respectively to the candidates who have the second and third largest number of votes issued as in the case of the winner of the first prize.

The above are all extra prizes and will in no way interfere with the winning of the delightful tours across the continent, for, of course, all votes turned in for these special prizes will count also for the principal prizes—the tours.

Only votes issued on paid-in-advance subscriptions turned in between midnight Wednesday, March 17, and 10 p. m. April 3, will count for the special prizes. No ballots cut from the Press will count for these prizes, but will be accepted and will count for the tours.

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY

BY GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON.

Copyright, 1915, by George Barr McCutcheon.

CHAPTER V.

I Become an Ancestor.

TRUE to the promise she had extracted from me, I laid off my workmen the next morning. They trooped in bright and early, considerably augmented by fresh recruits, who came to share the benefits of my innocuous prodigality, and if I live to be a thousand I shall never again experience such a noisome half hour as the one I spent in listening to their indignant protests against my tyrannical oppression of the poor and needy. In the end I agreed to pay them, one and all, for a full day's work, and they went away mollified, calling me a true gentleman to my face and heaven knows what to my back.

Punctually at 9 o'clock that evening I was in the balcony, thanking my lucky stars that it was a bright moonlit night. There was every reason to rejoice in the prospect of seeing her face clearly when she appeared at her secret little window. But she wore a white, filmy veil. I naturally concluded that she was homely.

"Good evening," she said on opening the window.

"Good evening," said I, contriving to conceal my disappointment. "How is the baby?"

"Very much better, thank you. It was so good of you to stop the workmen."

"Won't you take off your veil and stay awhile?" I asked, politely facetious. "It is not quite fair to me, you know."

Her next remark brought a blush of confusion to my cheek. A silly notion had induced me to don my full evening regalia, spiketail coat and all. Nothing could have been more ludicrously incongruous than my appearance, I am sure, and I never felt more uncomfortable in my life.

"How very nice you look in your new suit," she said, and I was aware of a muffled quality in her ordinarily clear, musical voice. She was laughing at me. "Are you giving a dinner party?"

"I usually dress for dinner," I fled with some haughtiness. "And so does Poopendyke," I added as an afterthought. My blush deepened as I recalled the attenuated blazer in which my secretary breakfasted, lunched and dined without discrimination.

"For Gretel's benefit, I presume."

"Aha! You do know Gretel, then?"

"Oh, I've known her for years. Isn't she a quaint old dear?"

"I shall discharge her in the morning," said I severely. "She is a liar, and her husband is a poltroon. They positively deny your existence in any shape or form."

"They won't pay any attention to you," said she, with a laugh. "They are fixtures, quite as much so as the walls themselves. You'll not be able to discharge them. My grandfather tried it fifty years ago and failed. After that he made it a point to dismiss Conrad every day in the year and Gretel every other day. As well try to remove the mountain, Mr. Smart. They know you can't get on without them."

"I have discharged her as a cook," I said triumphantly. "A new one will be here by the end of the week."

"Oh," she sighed plaintively, "how glad I am! She is an atrocious cook. I don't like to complain, Mr. Smart, but really it is getting so that I can't eat anything she sends up. It is jolly of you to get in a new one. Now we shall be very happy."

"By Jove!" said I, completely staggered by these revelations.

"I have thought it over, Mr. Smart," she went on in a businesslike manner, "and I believe we will get along much better together if we stay apart."

Ambiguous remarks ordinarily reach my intelligence, but I was so stunned by preceding admissions that I could only gasp:

"Do you mean to say you've been subsisting all this time on my food?"

"Oh, dear me, no! How can you think that of me? Gretel merely cooks the food I buy. She keeps a distinct and separate account of everything, poor thing. I am sure you will not find anything wrong with your bills, Mr. Smart. But did you hear what I said a moment ago?"

"I'm quite sure that I did."

"I prefer to let matters stand just as they are. Why should we discommode each other? We are perfectly satisfied as we"—

"I will not have my new cook giving notice, madam. You surely can't expect her—or him—to prepare meals for two separate"—

"I hadn't thought of that," she interrupted ruefully. "Perhaps if I were to pay her—or him—extra wages it would be all right," she added quickly. "We do not require much, you know."

I laughed rather shortly—meanly, I fear.

"This is most extraordinary, madame!"

"I—I quite agree with you. I'm awfully sorry it had to turn out as it has. Who would have dreamed of your buying the place and coming here to upset everything?"

I resolved to be firm with her. She seemed to be taking too much for granted. "Much as I regret it, madame, I am compelled to ask you to evacuate—to get out, in fact. This sort of thing can't go on."

She was silent for so long that I experienced a slow growth of compunction. Just as I was on the point of slightly receding from my position, she gave me another shock.

"Don't you think it would be awfully convenient if you had a telephone put in, Mr. Smart?" she said. "It is such a nuisance to send Max or Rudolph over to town every whipstitch on errands when a telephone—in your name, of course—would be so much more satisfactory."

"A telephone!" I gasped.

"Circumstances make it quite unwise for me to have a telephone in my own name, but you could have one in yours without creating the least suspicion. You are"—

"Madame!" I cried and got no further.

—"perfectly free to have a telephone if you want one," she continued. "The doctor came this evening, and it really wasn't necessary. Don't you see you could have telephoned for me and saved him the trip?"

It was due to the most stupendous exertion of self restraint on my part that I said, "Well, I'll be jiggered!" Her audacity staggered me.

"Madame," I exploded, "will you be good enough to listen to me? I am not to be trifled with. Tomorrow some time I shall enter the east wing of this building if I have to knock down all the doors on the place. Do you understand, madame?"

"I do hope, Mr. Smart, you can arrange to break in about 5 o'clock. It will afford me a great deal of pleasure to give you some tea. May I expect you at 5 or thereabouts?"

Her calmness exasperated me. I struck the stone balustrade an emphatic blow with my fist, sorely peeling the knuckles, and ground out:

"For two cents I'd do it tonight!"

"Oh, dear; oh, dear!" she cried mockingly.

"You must be a dreadful woman!" I cried out. "First you make yourself at home in my house; then you succeed in stopping my workmen, steal my cook and menservants, keep us all awake with a barking dog, defying me to my very face"—

"How awfully stern you are!"

"I don't believe a word you say about a sick baby—or a doctor! It's all poppycock. Tomorrow you will find yourself, bag and baggage, sitting at the bottom of this hill waiting for"—

"Wait!" she cried. "Are you really, truly in earnest?"

"Most emphatically!"

"Then I—I shall surrender," she said very slowly and seriously, I was glad to observe.

"That's more like it!" I cried enthusiastically.

"On one condition," she said. "You must agree in advance to let me stay on here for a month or two. It—it is most imperative, Mr. Smart."

"I shall be the sole judge of that, madame," I retorted, with some dignity. "By the way," I went on, knitting my brows, "how am I to get into your side of the castle? Schmick says he's lost the keys."

A good deal depended on her answer.

"They shall be delivered to you tomorrow morning, Mr. Smart," she said soberly. "Good night."

The little window closed with a snap, and I was left alone in the smiling moonlight. I was vastly excited, even thrilled by the prospect of a sleepless night.

"Britton," I said later, "I want to be called at 7 o'clock sharp in the morning." Noting his polite struggle to conceal his astonishment, I told him of my second encounter with the lady across the way.

"She won't be expecting you at 7, sir," he remarked. "And, as for that, she may be expecting to call on you instead of the other way around."

"Right!" said I, considerably dashed.

"Besides, sir, would it not be safer to wait till the tourist party has come and gone?"

"No tourists enter this place tomorrow or any other day," I declared firmly.

"Well, I'd suggest waiting just the same, sir," said he, evidently inspired.

He hesitated for a moment near the door.

"Will you put in the telephone, sir?" he asked respectfully.

Very curiously I was thinking of it at that instant.

"It really wouldn't be a bad idea, Britton," I said, startled into committing myself. "Save us a great deal of legging it over town and all that sort of thing, eh?"

"Yes, sir. What I was about to suggest, sir, is that while we're about it we might as well have a system of electric bells put in—that is to say, sir, in both wings of the castle. Very convenient, sir, you see, for all parties concerned."

"I see," said I, impressed, and then repeated it, a little more impressed after reflection. "I see. You are a very resourceful fellow, Britton. I am inclined to bounce all of the Schmicks. They have known about this from the start and have fled like thieves. By Jove, she must have an extraordinary power over them or claim or something equally potent. Now I think of it, she mentioned a grandfather. That would go to prove she's related in some way to some one, wouldn't it?"

"I should consider it to be more than likely, sir," said Britton, with a perfectly straight face. He must have been sorely tried in the face of my inane maunderings. "Pardon me, sir, but wouldn't it be a tiptop idea to have it out with the Schmicks tonight?"

"Excellent idea, Britton. We'll have them up in my study."

MAKE YOURS A PUBLIC SERVICE STORE

This is the age of service. The rewards of today go to the men who give the most in return.

Translated for you, Mr. Merchant, this means that the customers are certain to patronize the store that will give them what they want when they want it.

Cut prices may bring some trade, but better service will bring more.

This is the age when people are reading the advertising in their daily newspapers because they are finding that a distinct part of the service they expect their newspapers to give.

When a nationally distributed article of merit is advertised in the newspapers a demand for it sets in right away.

People want to see it and, if satisfied, want to buy it.

They are going to turn to the place that lets them know it has the article. That store will be giving them the service they want at that particular moment.

If it is a good article they are going to remember the store where they got it and will come back to that store again.

Co-operate with the manufacturers who come into the newspapers of your town to exploit their goods and you will be building business for yourself.

—Write a better "To Let" advertisement than is printed today, and see how quickly you'll find a tenant.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

Nell was busily engaged putting up a lunch for a little picnic they were to have together, it being Dick's free afternoon.

"Did I tell you that Mrs. Ellson called yesterday?" asked Nell after a pause.

"No, I was hoping you'd be out when she returned our call!" Dick paused in his shaving operations to deliver himself of this.

"I certainly wished I had been in Halifax or any other seaport before I put the door between us. In the first place I was not dressed; was cleaning the bookcase in fact, but I put the best face I could on the situation and tried to be civil." Nell paused.

"Go on," said Dick.

"I can't; it would be gossip. My overseer is very particular about my not indulging in critical remarks."

Dick put back his head and laughed with delight. "You're all right, Nell; go on, the censor will blue-pencil your remarks as you proceed and so satisfy his curiosity and maintain his high standard of virtue at the same time."

Dick was holding himself disrespectfully by the nose and making faces at his reflection in the glass. Still Nell said nothing.

"How long did she stay?" asked Dick encouragingly.

"Not long; if I made her as uncomfortable as she made me I don't wonder at the brevity of her call. I could hardly keep from running as it was."

"Why, what did she say?" Dick stopped operations to be able to express proper astonishment.

"She made me feel that she was very sorry for me because you were so attentive to Miss Rudolph; spoke of your being always together on the street and enjoying each other so much," blurted out Nell with an effort.

"Oh, is that it?" Dick wheeled on Nell, his face aflame. "So you were comparing notes—in jealousy? I dare say she recognized a kindred spirit in you."

"Dick Morton, you take that back," said Nell, stepping in front of him and looking at him with a level gaze.

"Do you deny that you are jealous?" he demanded.

"If I am, you have not been bothered much with it at any rate," she blazed.

"Oh, haven't I? The air is thick with it. I should think you would have a great deal of pleasure in your new friend."

Nell gasped and turned on her heel, caught up her hat from the rack as she passed and swung out of the house. He heard the gate click behind her and watched her out of sight, as she almost ran up the street toward the near-by fields.

She crept under the fence at the nearest place, fearful of meeting someone she knew. She must be alone. She had never needed to be alone so much in her life before. There was a little gully running through the pasture some half mile farther on and a friendly tree was in sight. When Nell had stumbled to this spot in her blind progress she threw herself down on the warm ground face down. It seemed as if all the fabric of her life had tumbled about her ears.

Household Hints

HOW TO PACK AWAY THE WINTER CLOTHES

Housewives who wish to pack their winter clothes without fear of moths will profit by the following method:

Spray bottom of trunk with kerosene and pour a tablespoonful down each of the four corners. Spread a single newspaper sheet on bottom of the trunk and it is ready for the furs or woolens. Fill trunk, spread a thin paper on top, sprinkle inside of the lid with a little kerosene, and you are insured against moths.

If moths abound about the middle of the season, pour a spoonful of kerosene down each corner as a precaution, and a little on the floor. Moths will not lay eggs where kerosene has been sprinkled.

Men's suits, with a small cotton wad odorized with kerosene in one of the pockets, can be hung in a bag in the open attic and remain intact for half a year.

It is less odorous than gasoline and there is no danger of any trace of a grease spot. This preventive has been used for a decade with the result that not one moth-hole has ever been found nor a moth seen in an attic where furs, cloaks, suits, overcoats and woolen blankets are stored and hung; nor is any odor perceptible when the winter garments are brought out for use.

THE TABLE

Pike—Clean and wash well small pike, fry brown in drippings; roll in flour before frying. Take one tablespoon butter, place in skillet, add bit of dry red pepper; fry till brown, add one cup tomato juice. When it comes to a boil, take two teaspoons flour and thicken. Place fried fish in deep tureen, pour sauce over it, place in oven for half hour before serving.

Creamed Finnan Haddie—Put fish in baking pan, cover with cold water, bring to point of boiling, remove and allow to get cold. Drain, separate fish into flakes and to the fish add one cup cream sauce; heat and season with pepper and salt, if necessary. Add a little parsley if desired. Serve with baked potatoes.

Spaghetti and Hamburg—Chop two large onions and fry with one pound hamburg steak. Cook half package spaghetti in salt water, then drain, add one large can tomatoes, hamburg steak and onions. Season with red pepper, salt and piece of butter size of butternut. Bake in oven twenty minutes.

Easter Meat Dish—Take enough nice lean smoked ham required for size of family. Freshen ham in usual way, put into granite pan or small roaster, cover with sweet milk, pieces of butter, season to taste. Bake one hour uncovered; remove from oven, break required number of fresh eggs on top of ham, return to oven, cover and bake until eggs are nicely set. Serve hot.

Fruit Salad—Four apples cut in dice, one grapefruit, two oranges, four bananas, one-half pound English walnuts (chopped), one small bottle of red cherries, some whipped cream. Mix fruit and nuts with sugar to suit taste, then add whipped cream. Very pretty served in orange shells with whipped cream on top and a red cherry in the middle. Serve on lettuce leaf.

Dainty Cheese Tarts—Make a rich pie crust, cut with a cooky cutter about the size of gem tins and fit into gem tins, filling with the following: One egg, one small cup sugar, one cup currants, one teaspoon vanilla; stir all together and put a spoonful in each crust; bake in moderate oven till crust is done. This makes one dozen.

Bran Mush With Cereal—Mix bran with oatmeal and salt. Pour upon mixture, stirring all the time, one pint boiling water and cook slowly two hours. Delicious for breakfast or luncheon. Will serve six: bran, one-half cup; oatmeal, one-half cup.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

Mother McGrew and Her Family.

Once Mother McGrew said, "I know a good chance
For all of you children to learn how to dance.
A good dancing school is about to begin,
And I really believe that I'll let you start in."

They'd long wished to know just how dancing was done.
And so when the dancing school opened next day,
The children were there in their finest array.

The dancing instructor said, "Everyone knows
The first thing to learn is to turn out your toes;
The next thing you do is to count, 'One, two, three,'
Then start with your right foot and imitate me."

The dancing instructor was quite old and gray.
(That he was a Crab I neglected to say).
And the dancing school floor was as slippery as glass,
Which was often the cause of disaster, alas!

They turned out their toes and the Crab said, "That's fine."
Said he, "I believe in a very short while I'll have you all dancing with finish and style."

The Elephant said, "That is easy," said he.
And just as he said that he came down ker-dab!
On the very worst corn of that crusty old Crab.

It hurt him so bad that he fainted from pain,
And for hours all attempts to revive him were vain.
When he finally came to, though he looked very white,
He said, "There will be no more dancing tonight."

Then the Elephant went with poor Mother McGrew,
Who said, "Well, that finishes dancing for you!"
And if you ask me I don't think there's a chance
That the Elephant ever will learn how to dance.

In the Doctor's Waiting Room

—"Well, Mabel Brown, whatever are you doing here? Nerves? Well, I wonder we are not all of us wrecks, by the way we rush about. But Dr. Jones is such a comfort. He has so much common-sense. He'll straighten you out in no time.

—"Oh, I'm all right. I just run in once in a while to report. I'm a strong believer in the 'ounce of prevention,' you know.

—"Harold? My dear, that child! He's the healthiest thing alive. Perfectly wonderful, when I look back to the time when I thought I could not raise him. The time I had! I nursed him, you know, but things went wrong—nerves, heat—such a hot summer it was. I was such a goose—thought I had to nurse him. No, I did not have Dr. Jones then. Harold lost weight rapidly. I simply cried every day to see him wasting away. Finally I weaned him. Put him on modified milk, but by that time his condition was so bad it only made him worse. Then I tried a malted food. He did start to gain a little, but I said, 'I don't think any food that is so highly sweetened can be really good for a baby,' and sent for Dr. Jones. Dr. Jones read me the riot act. Said the trouble with most women is that they are apt to be satisfied with immediate results, that if I wanted a child with a robust constitution and the proper firm flesh I'd have to use more sense in feeding him. I felt too foolish. The answer? IMPERIAL GRANUM, of course. I gave it to him first prepared with water alone, and then as his digestion grew stronger added fresh milk. To see that child pick up! He's had it as his chief diet ever since, in a cereal and all sorts of ways. They send you a list of recipes. You can make the daintiest dishes and so appetizing for a convalescent. "But, tell me, why are you nervous? Too much sewing for Margaret? Why do you do it? I never make a thing for Harold. Buy every single thing he needs at Hahne's, even his Imperial Granum, and that is an advantage in these busy times. They have the daintiest, most sensible things for children. The most perfectly equipped Infants' Wear Department I've seen.

"Do come to see me, Mabel, and take my advice. Buy Margaret's things at Hahne's. You'll not regret it. I think you'd better take Imperial Granum yourself. It's dandy for rundown people. Good-by."

The Plainfield Press, Plainfield, N. J.

"PUSSY" MUST HAVE HAD A PREMONITION

When In Danger of Notoriety "Miss Taby Cat" Made Herself Heard.

"Ding-a-ling-a-ling!"

It was the 999th time the telephone had rung in the editorial rooms of the Daily Press this morning. The scribe delegated to lift the receiver heard the chirp of a suffragette's voice at the other end of the string."

"Will you please help me find my cat It has been missing for four days and I will pay $5 to get it back." Such was the declaration of the feminine "phonist" who happened to be a well-known woman living on East Second street.

After the reporter had assured her that everything possible would be done to bring "Tabby" back to the east-end fireside, which was followed by profound thanks on the part of the feminine help-seeker, the interview ended and the partie. "hung up."

Several minutes later, as the scribe was framing up a suitable "lead" to his account of the disappearance of pussy another "ding-a-ling-a-ling" sounded. The same individual answered the bell summons and to his surprise heard the same girlish voice chirp out on the other end of the line: "I've found my pussy, you don't need to write that story."

The sudden blasting of the reporter's hopes for a human interest yarn about "Tabby's wanderlus," led him to further quiz the woman. He learned that pussy had disappeared from home Sunday morning and had not been seen up to the time the caller came to the Press office the first time this morning. The family had made up their mind that the twenty-pound four-legged fur-bearer had departed never to return and as a last resort decided to enlist the aid of the public press. After outlining her publicity campaign to the scribe the woman had gone about her household duties as usual but was soon attracted to the front porch of her home by the cries of her five-year old daughter. Hastening to the front door, she beheld the youngster standing on the front lawn with the feline tucked under her arm.

It appears that carpenters working at the house Saturday had neglected to call pussy from underneath the front porch when they finished their work and as a consequence the cat had been "nailed up." The feline, when rescued by the youngster appeared little the worse for its four days' confinement, save for a ravenous appetite

The animal was the property of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Melvin, of East Second street, and the little rescuer was Miss Mary Clair Melvin, aged five.

LOCAL MAN HEADS ROSELLE CRUSADE AGAINST CHICKENS

Because chickens have persisted in running the streets of Roselle Park at all hours of the day, minus escorts and with apparently no regard for property, the Board of Health of that place last night decided to take energetic steps to curb the nuisance. Collis H. Case, of West Front street, is the sanitary inspector of that municipality, and has been active in the movement to abate the annoyance.

In some cases the chickens, which, by the way, are of the feathered species, have been so bold as to visit the porches of neighboring houses and steal the rolls and bread left there by bakers. A ten-cent license fee will be charged, and the Board is planning to prosecute all poultry owners who neglect to heed the warning.

BUSINESS BUILDING TO BE ERECTED IN FIRST WARD

The second permit to be issued for business buildings in the First ward during the course of the present week, was issued yesterday by Inspector T. O. Doane. The structure is to be erected at 110 Watchung avenue by J. Fred MacDonald

The buildings, which will adjoin the store now occupied by Marchant Brothers as a milk depot, will be one story high, and measure 24 by 80 feet, and will be of brick construction. The base course and foundations will be of concrete, with interior supports and floors of reinforced concrete. The building will be a modern store in every detail with the fireproofing features called for.

Mr. MacDonald, the owner, is the architect of the structure, while the contracts have been awarded to William H Pangborn & Son, of the borough, masons, and Wyman & Haberle, carpenters. The estimated cost has been placed at $4,700

On the evening of Good Friday, at 7:30, the Rev. Dr. C. E. Moldenke will hold English services, together with the celebration of the Lord's Supper, in English, at St. Peter's Lutheran Church, corner Grove and Mercer avenue.

RUNAWAY ON FRONT STREET.

A runaway occurred yesterday afternoon on Front street when a horse attached to an ash wagon became frightened at a passing trolley car and ran wild. The animal got as far as Front and Grove streets when the wagon collapsed and the excitement came to an end. The wagon was partially filled with ashes which were spread all over the street.

English Porcelain Dinnerware from the Grindley Pottery

Fifteen Huge Crates Bought at Half the Importers' Landed Price and to Be Offered at Less Than Cost to Import

$13.50 for 108-piece Sets

Duplicates of these sets were earlier in our March Sale at $17.50. This pattern was among the first to sell out. In the meantime a firm in another city decided to put this border in its open stock. When the sets arrived however, something happened. They were left on the agent's hands. "I cannot bother with fifteen crates," said he.

Naturally there will be a large number of complete sets in these crates, but they should go in a day. In addition a number of odd pieces also priced at less than importer's cost. Plates, tea cups, fruit saucers, vegetable dishes, sugar bowls, cream pitchers, oatmeal saucers, etc.

Savings Maintained in March Sale of Housewares

for example, is to be had at a 20 per cent. discount on our regular prices. This, though spelter, a composition which figures largely in the finished iron utensils (such as garbage and ash cans, water pails, etc.) is at a premium, and its cost has greatly advanced.

Nickel frying pans, No. 7, 40c; No. 8, 50c; No. 9, 65c.

Galvanized water pails, 10, 12 and 14-qt., 15c, 18c, 20c.

DENIES KNOWING JOHN K. ROUNDEY

IN A $25,000 ACTION

Mrs. Poinier Claims Her Witnesses Have Been Threatened and Tampered With—Makes Specific Allegations Against Defendant.

Testimony in Mrs. Florence J. Roundey's $25,000 alienation suit against Mrs. Mina Poinier, of East Second street, was taken before two masters in chancery in the Plainfield District Court this morning. Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., representing Mrs. Poinier, examined his witness before Special Master John P. Owens of this city, and Richard Stockton, of Newark, representing Mrs. Roundey, conducted his examination before William B. McFadden, of Newark. Both Mrs. Roundey and Mrs. Poinier were placed on the stand, both giving every indication of confidence.

In her complaint Mrs. Roundey alleges a number of specific marital violations of a serious nature and in her defense Mrs. Poinier maintained that she never saw or spoke to Mr. Roundey, whose affections she is alleged to have alienated.

In his examination of Mrs. Roundey, Mr. Hetfield, of the law firm of Reed & Hetfield, asked Mrs. Roundey if she knew a William Miller.

"I do," she answered.

"Did you pay him for making an affidavit?"

"Certainly not."

"Did you pay an elevator boy by the name of Kline in the Babcock building for making an affidavit?"

"I did not."

"Have you paid anyone for making affidavits in this case?"

Mr. Stockton, Mrs. Roundey's lawyer, explained at this point that detectives had been hired to make investigations for his client.

"Have you paid William Miller, Kline, the elevator boy, or any one else money for services to obtain evidence against your husband or assist you in the Poinier case?"

Mr. Stockton again interrupted. "She had paid detectives."

Mr. Hetfield then asked, "Did you employ anyone living in the city of Plainfield to get evidence for you?"

"Yes," said Mrs. Roundey.

"When did you first learn or hear that Mrs. Poinier knew your husband or was in any way intimate with him?"

"Approximately the middle of September, 1914."

"From whom did you receive that information?"

"I do not care to divulge the names of my witnesses for they have already been tampered with and threatened and I do not wish to endanger them further."

Mrs. Poinier then took the stand before Special Master McFadden.

"When did you see me before," asked Stockton.

"Last February," replied Mrs. Poinier.

"You mentioned the name of Martin Stutsman to me when I saw you, did you not?"

"I said he was a friend of Mr. Roundey's."

"You said he, Stutsman, was a friend of yours?"

"Yes."

"Has he ever been your attorney?"

"No."

"Did you ever have any intimate relations with Roundey?"

"No."

"Then anyone who swears you were together October 23 commits perjury?"

"Yes."

Anyone who says Roundey visited your house is committing perjury?"

"Yes."

"Do you deny ever having been in the upper part of the Endress store or that Roundey ever came to your house?"

"I do."

Stockton at this point explained: "I do not want to pry into the evidence of the defense, so I will conclude."

Hetfield then retorted: "We have nothing to conceal and you can go ahead, if you so desire."

Hetfield continued: "Have you ever spoken to Mr. Roundey?"

"Not to my knowledge."

"Would you know him if you saw him?"

"I would not."

APPROVES PLANS FOR LOCAL CAVALRY

Governor Authorizes Adjutant General Sadler to Effect Organization.

Governor James F. Fielder through Adjutant-General Wilbur F. Sadler, has authorized the organization of a cavalry of platoon in Plainfield to be a part of Troop D, First Squadron Cavalry, N. G. N. J., with headquarters and drills and school of instruction in Plainfield. Arrangements have been made for the necessary horses for the balance of the season at a cost per man of $10, with an additional cost of from $10 to $15, making the total cost for the rest of the season between $20 and $25.

Next year the cost will depend on what appropriation is received from the State, but it will not exceed $50 per man. The State requires twenty-four drills of one and a half hours' duration and five days in the field. The term of enlistment is for three years.

The applicants who enlist, it is expected, will be willing to comply with all military rules and regulations. The initial meeting for organization will be held next Tuesday night at the Queen City Hotel, at which time Major W. A. Bryant and Lieut. A. G. Borden, acting captain of Troop D will be present; also a surgeon who will conduct the physical examination of all applicants.

Already a large number of Plainfield men have signified a desire to join the platoon and it is expected that a strong organization will be effected. It is proposed to use the Plainfield Horse Show grounds for drilling and stabling of horses.

JOHN K. ROUNDEY SUES FOR DIVORCE

Papers were served this morning by Alex Ayers on Mrs. Florence E. Roundey, making her defendant in divorce proceedings started by her husband, John K. Roundey, president of the Endress Company. The charges are made on statuatory grounds. Martin Stutsman represents Mr. Roundey.

John DuPont, of New York city, is named as co-respondent. An answer is returnable April 25. Mrs. Roundey is at present complainant in a $25,000 alienation suit against Mrs. Elmer Poinier, and defendant in a $5,000 alienation suit brought by Mrs. Harold Vanderhoef.

Public Utility Commission Had Ordered Lighting Co. to Live up to Provision Providing Free Light for City Building.

Trenton, March 27—The Supreme Court today, in an opinion by Justice Kalisch, set aside the order of the Board of Public Utility Commissioners directing the Public Service Electric Company to continue to furnish free lighting for the public buildings of Plainfield. In December, 1913, the company notified the Plainfield authorities that it must discontinue furnishing the free lighting, as the contract therefore was in violation of Section 18 of the Public Utility Act of 1911, and also one of the Seven Sisters' Acts, making it a misdemeanor for a corporation to discriminate in the sale or distribution of any commodity.

The city appealed to the Utility Board, which after a hearing made its order to the effect that the contract was not illegal and the company must continue the free service. The company then carried the case to the Supreme Court.

Justice Kalisch says that the Public Utility Act in forbidding discrimination, made the performance of this contract unlawful, and the company could not continue to perform the contract without violation of the act. He rules that the preference or advantage given by the contract is undue and unreasonable within the inhabition of the act. He also holds that the Utility Commission has no power to enforce the specific performance of contracts, and yet its order directs the specific performance of this free lighting contract. On these grounds the order is set aside.

The question of whether the Seven Sisters' Act referred to is applicable to the case is not decided.

HIGH SCHOOL PLAY SCORES BIG HIT

"Teddy or the Runaways" Given at the Park Club Last Night.

"Teddy, or the Runaways," a three act farce comedy by Walter Ben Hare, was presented by the Boys' Athletic Association of the North Plainfield High School last night at the Park Club before a large audience. The entertainment was equally as good as those given in the past, and Miss Helen K. Ray, the coach, was largely responsible for its great success.

All three acts were full of action and excitement, the play containing a diamond robbery, an elopement and several entangling situations. Edson Day, as "Jim Larrabee, Officer 666," was unusually good. There were touches of original parts of local interest throughout which took well with the audience. Gladys Sullivan, as "Texana," the maid, had the most amusing part of all, her funny remarks at the wrong time winning her much applause. Emily Pleydell and Duclos Van Mater, the young married couple who lived on the Texas ranch, had a near quarrel which was only averted by Miss Helen Schmidt, known as "Little Miss Fixit," the love specialist. The appearance of the diamond robbers in the first act at the ranch led to complicated conditions until all were arrested by the sheriff and his deputies, Bob Hebert and Warren Townley.

Ann Hull, the "misleading lady," scored a hit in the manner in which she handled the serious situation with the officers of the law while her partner in the deal, Elmer French, was subject to much rough treatment. Lester Chandler, a fortune hunter and ardent suitor for the hand of "Little Miss Fixit," was arrested as the robber with Texana.

Between the acts Miss Ray was presented with a sterling silver picture frame from the Boys' Athletic Association. The presentation was made by Elmer French. Miss Ray was also the recipient of a beautiful bouquet of flowers.

$25,000 BLAZE IN RISING SUN BREWERY

A fire which broke out at 7 o'clock this morning, in the main building of the Rising Sun Brewery, at Elizabeth, resulted in damage to the amount of $25,000, divided between the structure and a large stock of malt. The firemen worked four hours before the flames were subdued. The origin is a mystery, but by some of the officials it is believed to have been caused by a grain of sand from some of the malt getting into the delicate machinery and producing friction.

The blaze started on the third floor and worked up to the fifth and, although the flames were bad at times none of the other buildings were touched. The damaged building is the one which has the large tower holding the clock that can be seen from the trains on the New Jersey Central.

SAYS SHE COULD BUY TESTIMONY

Mrs. Roundey Alleges Edward Vanderhoef Offered Aid for Compensation.

OFFERED IN DEFENSE

Mrs. Lillian Vanderhoef Charges Mrs. Roundey With Alienating Her Husband's Affections and Asks for $5,000.

Featured by frequent tilts between Robert Newton Crane, counsel for the complaining party, and Richard Stockton, representing the defense, testimony in the $5,000 alienation suit brought by Mrs. Lillian Vanderhoef against Mrs. Florence K. Roundey, was taken before Special Master in Chancery, John P. Owens in the Plainfield District Court this morning. In her charges Mrs. Vanderhoef alleges that Harold Vanderhoef, her husband, and Mrs. Roundey were together frequently and that they had committed certain serious acts.

On the witness stand this morning Mrs. Roundey was cool and collected. She took her seat with a heavy green veil covering her face.

Mr. Crane opened the case by demanding that the court direct Mrs. Roundey to lift her veil so that he could get a glimpse of her features. Following a cross-fire of objection and insistance between Crane and Stockton the court finally granted the demand and told her to leave it up permanently.

In the examination by Mr. Crane to ascertain Mrs. Roundey's defense in the suit the witness divulged some startling revelations, which, if proven, will have a direct effect on the outcome of both suits in which she figures at the present time. She testified to having met Edward Vanderhoef, an uncle of Harold Vanderhoef, in the Babcock building and declared that he said to her that he would be a witness for her if compensated. Mrs. Roundey stated that she scorned any aid offered by Edward Vanderhoef. Mr. Crane served notice of trial on Mr. Stockton for Tuesday, May 4, at Elizabeth, at which time the case will be concluded.

SUDDEN DEATH OF JOSEPH MORRISON

Well Known Plainfielder Passed Away After Three Days' Illness.

The many friends of Joseph B. Morrison, for the past fifteen years janitor of the Lincoln School, received a distinct shock when they learned today that he had died suddenly at his home on East Second street, early last night. He was stricken with pneumonia three days ago and from the outset his condition became serious. The news that he was ill had hardly been announced when the end came.

Joseph B. Morrison was born in the old Eleventh Ward in New York fifty-seven years ago. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Morrison, the former now living at Jamesport, Long Island. Thirty years ago, Mr. Morrison came to Plainfield and with his brother, James M. Morrison, formed a partnership to conduct a painting and decorating business. The firm was afterward dissolved and Joseph Morrison went to the employ of Woolston & Buckle, with whom he remained until appointed to the position at the Lincoln School.

Mr. Morrison had a host of acquaintances in the city and borough and was liked by everyone. He was of a social disposition and possessed of a happy, genial temperament. His kindly nature won him the friendship of all the pupils at the Lincoln School and he will be missed greatly by those who have been with him lately. He was a member of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M.

Beside his father, Mr. Morrison is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Walter Ells, of Newport, R. I., and one son, Harvey Morrison, of this city. The latter was in Syracuse, N. Y., when his father's illness began and arrived home only a short time before his death occurred. Mr. Morrison's wife died about six years ago and another daughter, Haze., died seven years ago as a result of burns received in a bonfire accident. There are also surviving two brothers, James M. Morrison, of Myrtle avenue, and Ambrose Morrison, of Mineola, L. I.; and two sisters, Mrs. Letitia Harrar, of Brooklyn, and Miss Hattie Morrison of Jamesport.

The funeral will be held at the home of Mrs. Margaret Hansen, 255 East Second street, with whom he boarded, Monday afternoon at 2:30, and will be in charge of Rev. Charles L. Goodrich. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

THE TELEPHONE AT THE FRONT

OFFICER TAKING OBSERVATIONS FROM TOP OF HAYMOW.

The current issue of The New York Telephone Review carries a series of pictures showing various ways in which the telephone is being used in the European war and giving striking evidence of the problems which the soldier telephone man has to solve.

An outpost or scout is connected with headquarters by a telephone line so that the result of his observations may be reported at once. This is made possible by the use of a reel on which the wire is wound and which may be turned so as to pay out or take up the wire as the progress of the party demands.

three soldier operators in a pit where they had been completely concealed a few moments before. The top of the pit had been covered in some manner so that when the opposing force of Russians advanced, corps after corps had passed directly over the German telephone operators, who were, of course, telephoning to their headquarters all necessary information regarding the Russian advance. The Russians had been speedily driven back by the well-informed Germans and, in retreat, had again passed over the hidden telephonists. The German forces, pressing their advantage, soon came to the ingenious hiding place of their fellows and the soldier operators at last came out of their narrow quarters.

From behind a sheltering brick wall in Austria a military observer views the action in the front line of battle and dictates his reports of the movements and strength of the approaching enemy to a telephonist who takes down the reports in shorthand, at the same time transmitting the information to headquarters over the telephone.

The difficulties of establishing telephonic communication are also vividly portrayed. Erecting temporary poles, stringing wires through the treetops so that they may be hidden from the enemy, establishing a temporary "Central" in the field and even running wires under huge hay-mows where the operator may be safe for a few minutes, while the officer climbs the haymow, hides as best he may among the irregularities of the matted hay, and obtains what information he can which is immediately conveyed to head-quarters by telephone.

TELEPHONES IN ELEVATORS.

The last word in elevator fashions and convenience will be seen when the new Equitable Building opens its doors, according to an article in The New York Telephone Review, for in each of the forty-eight elevators there will be a telephone. These instruments will connect with the private branch exchange switchboard in the building so that regular exchange service will be available from each of the elevators.

Now that the transcontinental telephone service is a fact, the far western banker or merchant or politician can "while away" a few minutes talking to his home or his office in San Francisco, on his way up or down the skyscraper. What Arnold Bennett has dubbed "the fearful universality of the telephone" has advanced another step

If you have pain in the back, urinary disorders, dizziness and nervousness, it's time to act and no time to experiment. These are frequently symptoms of kidney trouble, and a remedy which is recommended for the kidneys should be taken in time.

Doan's Kidney Pills is a good remedy to use. No need to experiment. It has acted effectively in many cases in Plainfield. Follow the advice of a Plainfield citizen.

A. K. Mattis, 127 West Fourth street, Plainfield, says: "I confirm all that one of my family said in my favor in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Randolph's drug store, some years ago. The cure they gave me has lasted."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Mattis had. Foster Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old, famous Sage Tea Recipe are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so gradually and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray, becoming faded, dry, scraggly and thin have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful— all dandruff goes, scalp itching and falling hair stops.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur tonight and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.—Adv.

RECIPE TO CLEAR A PIMPLY SKIN

Pimples, sores and boils usually result from toxins, poisons and impurities which are generated in the bowels and then absorbed into the blood through the very ducts which should absorb only nourishment to sustain the body.

It is the function of the kidneys to filter impurities from the blood and cast them out in the form of urine, but in many instances the bowels create more toxins and impurities than the kidneys can eliminate, then the blood uses the skin pores as the next best means of getting rid of these impurities which often break out all over the skin in the form of pimples.

The surest way to clear the skin of these eruptions, says a noted authority, is to get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of hot water each morning before breakfast for one week. This will prevent the formation of toxins in the bowels. It also stimulates the kidneys to normal activity, thus coaxing them to filter the blood of impurities and clearing the skin of pimples.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent drink which usually makes pimples disappear; cleanses the blood and is excellent for the kidneys as well.—Adv.

JUST A LITTLE MORE FOR PLAINFIELD.

Do all you can for the town in which you live—be a doer—don't knock. If things don't suit offer a remedy. If you can't do that be still and let others try. Mistakes will be made but don't accuse the maker of dishonesty because he failed in an honest endeavor.

Trust your city officials, give them your hearty support, encourage them, confer with them, advise them—if they are the right kind they will be glad to have you do that. If they are not the right kind, you, and the whole city, will soon find it out and they won't stay with you long. If you think the Councilmen from your ward are asleep go after them, prod them on—they won't mind that. They can get used to anything, you know, if it is only kept up long enough, particularly if they are good councilmen. If you think your ward is being neglected ask them what is being done to remedy such neglect.

The Fourth Ward has paid interest on sewer bonds and contributed toward maintenance of sewers for twenty years, and yet a large area of that ward has never been able to use the sewers or to derive any benefit from them, but with the completion of the Joint Sewer project that difficulty will be speedily overcome.

Don't berate your councilman because he can not get your pet measure through. It may be impossible for him to make the other ten see things from your point of view.

Don't condemn him if he happens to favor a man for an appointment who is not of your religious belief. Remember that our forefathers came here that they might enjoy the freedom to worship God as their consciences dictated. If a man does that he is a good citizen and every good citizen, if he has the ability, should be entitled to fill any office within the gift of the people.

Boom your town wherever you go—tell every one that your home town is the best place on God's footstool.

Supposing you are assessed for a permanent pavement, wouldn't you rather pay it than hire an airship to escape the mud every time you wish to cross the street? Plainfielders are never satisfied with anything second class—the best is good enough for them—and the best comes high.

In conclusion let us all give thanks that we are Plainfielders.

CHARLES C. GRAVES.

PRIZE WINNERS WILL BE ENVIED BY MANY WHEN RACE IS OVER

Opportunity to Gain Free Trans-Continental Tour and Extra Awards Comes But Once—Contestants Hustle for Votes.

First Prize.
$100.00 Diamond Solitaire Ring.

Second Prize.
Merchandise Certificate, good for $25.00 in trade at Woodhull & Martin Co., 163 East Front street, and $15.00 in gold.

Third Prize.
$35.00 Solid Gold Wrist Watch.

A man once stood on London bridge. Round his neck was fastened a tray, upon which were laid several golden sovereigns which he was offering for sale at the price of a penny each. All the afternoon he stood there without effecting a sale until at length a workingman made a purchase of one of the coins, thinking it would be an excellent toy for his child. When he reached home he discovered the value of the coin and hastened back to buy more, but the vender was gone.

The Press is making a better offer than this. In fact, there is no money consideration for any of the trips. Effort alone counts, but in order to secure vote prepaid subscriptions must be secured, as votes clipped from the Press do not count big enough alone to win any of the prizes. These subscriptions are not paid for by the candidates, but by friends who desire to have a daily newspaper of "class and worth" on their reading table. Old subscribers, as well as new, can secure votes in this contest by prepaying their subscriptions for three months or more in advance, up to two years.

The Prizes Offered.

To summarize, what can be won in the Press' Trans-continental and Panama-Pacific Exposition Tour contest?

First, there is the $100 diamond ring to be won in the next week. Second, there is a $25 merchandise certificate and $15 in gold to be awarded beside the other prize to be awarded April 3. There are only a few thousand votes cast, and no greater opportunity will ever present itself than this one. The three candidates having issued to them the highest number of votes during the period extending from March 17 at midnight to April 3 at 10 p. m. (coupons clipped from the Press not included toward winning the special prizes), will be awarded in order of voto gain:

First, a $100 diamond ring, purchased from the jewelry shop of Charles E. Vail, 236 Park avenue; second, $25 merchandise certificate on Woodhull & Martin Company, and $15 in gold; third, $35 solid gold wrist watch, purchased from Reliable Jewelry Shop, 245 West Front street.

The jewelry prizes are on display at the above stores, and every person is invited to look them over; they are beauties, both of them.

Mr. Vail is willing to repurchase the diamond ring offered as first prize from the winner any time within one year for $90 cash.

And then there are four trips to the Pacific coast, one to be won by each candidate having the greatest number of votes of the candidates in her district.

The Highest Honor.

The highest honor is the selection of the chaperone of the party. The chaperone will be the fourth member of the party. She will be chosen by the grand leader. Perhaps the grand leader will be the one who will win the $100 diamond ring. Maybe not. This question is probably the hardest of all to solve. Only time can tell. On April 17 it will be all over but the shouting.

Friendly Rivalry for Honors.

A great friendly battle is now on among the candidates as to who shall have the privilege of selecting the chaperone for the Press party. The privilege of a friend on the trip is particularly appealing to the active workers, and those who have votes amassed to proportions far beyond their expectations now believe that by a little extra effort they can not only win the district trip, but poll the necessary vote which will ensure the selection of some dear one to accompany them.

Candidates Must Hustle.

Only votes issued on paid-in-advance subscriptions turned in between midnight Wednesday, March 17, and 10 p. m., April 3, will count for the special prizes. No ballots cut from the Press will count for these prizes, but will be accepted and will count for the tours.

COUNTY SUFFRAGISTS MEET AT CARTERET ARMS

Elizabeth, March 27—Mrs. Edward Feickert, of Dunellen, president of the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association, presided at the Union county conference of Suffragists at Carteret Arms, yesterday. There were 160 Suffragists in attendance, the delegates coming from ten counties and forty-four organizations. The Suffragists sent a telegram to Bishop Henderson of the Newark Methodist Episcopal Conference, asking the organization's support for woman suffrage.

In several speeches the opinion was voiced that the Suffragists should ignore the liquor men and not try to win them over. Mrs. Feickert praised the newspapers of the State for their support. Miss Eva Ward criticized the movement to abolish dower rights and Mrs. J. W. Slayback said that women workers did not seem to desire the vote. A business session and luncheon preceded the open meeting, which was held in the afternoon.

BETA ALPHA CLASS GIVES COLONIAL SOCIAL

Under the auspices of the Beta Alpha Class, of the First Baptist church, a Colonial social was held in the church parlors last night. There was a large attendance and all enjoyed the affair. The members of the class, who acted as the hostesses, were all dressed in Colonial costume. There was a varied program, one of the features being shadow pictures which caused much fun. A postoffice was also opened and a guessing contest, also proved interesting.

In one part of the room was a table with photographs of well-known people of the church, taken when they were young and those present tried to identify them. Music was also enjoyed during the evening. The superintendent of the Sunday-school baked a large cake which was cut and served with ice cream. The top was iced to represent an American flag.

CREW LAW CUTS STATE'S INCOME

Costs Treasury $92,000 A Year. Increased Revenue Is Needed

Trenton, N. J., March 26.

Earnest attention is being given here to the fact developed that the Full Crew—"excess man crew"—Law is robbing the Commonwealth of New Jersey of a large amount in taxes. This is all the more important when it is realized that the state sorely needs increased revenue and the Legislature is now confronted with the problem of providing it, very likely by new taxes upon the people.

Referring to this matter in an editorial, the Jersey Journal of Jersey City, one of the leading newspapers of the state, says:

"At the hearing on the bill to repeal the Full Crew law in Trenton yesterday it was brought out that this law costs railroads in New Jersey $367,000 a year and that the annual loss to the State in taxes, on account of the Full Crew law, is $92,000

"The railroad tax is based upon the net earnings of the roads and naturally the net earnings are decreased by each increase in operating expenses.

"Regardless of the merits of the main question at issue, the fact that the law reduces tax income by $92,000 a year presents this full crew problem to the public in a new and hitherto unconsidered light."

Nonchalant Shaw.

Archibald Henderson tells the story that when William T. Stead was planning to get together some of the great men of Europe and make a world tour in the interests of peace he asked George Bernard Shaw to join the company and received the reply:

"If you care to bring a collection of rulers to my quarters in Adelphi terrace I shall be very glad to receive them some morning."

During the Solos.

"What a very light voice the soprano has!"

"Yes, it's much too light."

"Eh! How so?"

"Why, the women in the boxes don't feel free to talk as they usually do"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

By Internal Evidence.

"Where do you suppose we got the saying, 'He laughs best who laughs last?'" asked Mrs. Binks of her husband.

"Probably some Englishman first said it," replied Mr. Binks. "He was doubtless trying to set a national failing in a favorable light."—Youth's Companion.

"Where are you going?"

"To call on Mrs. Wallaby Wombat. Better come along. I understand there are some very interesting things to be heard."

"How so?"

PLAINFIELDERS OUGHT TO CONSIDER PLAINFIELD FIRST

A city must progress, it must be guided by its optimists, and must approve of enterprises; it must value constructive men more than destructive ones, must have a clear idea of the demands of the future city growth and live up to its ideals.

One of the most essential elements of progress is enterprise. The enterprise of the business men of Plainfield is dependent upon the support of the residents of the city. In the same measure that they co-operate in the support of Plainfield's stores they will share in the prosperity that will be the result of this co-operative effort.

The duty of Plainfield's people to themselves and their obligation to their city, calls upon them to PATRONIZE PLAINFIELD MERCHANTS, CRAFTSMEN and MECHANICS.

They are not asked to make any sacrifice, either of money or quality in order to do this. Rather are they presented with the opportunity of making financial saving and gaining at advantage in quality of the goods purchased.

The old fallacy that it is now necessary to go to the stores of other cities in order to get the best goods at the lowest prices has long been dissipated.

The merchants of Plainfield have proved conclusively that the stores of Plainfield are not surpassed in any respect by mail order houses of the stores of larger cities and that the question of buying outside the city is attended by loss to the purchaser in more ways than one.

The man who has home pride enough to PATRONIZE PLAINFIELD MERCHANTS, CRAFTSMEN and MECHANICS, gets the most for his money. It is easy to be convinced of this fact by visiting local stores. The advertising columns of the local papers will direct you to the most advantageous buying. PATRONIZE PLAINFIELD MERCHANTS, CRAFTSMEN and MECHANICS.

FLEMINGTON DANCING CLASS IS GIVEN A RECEPTION

The dancing class conducted at Flemington by Miss Alice Higgins, of this city, was given a reception by a number of friends at the final session this week. Fully one hundred persons were present and a most enjoyable time was had. The hall was prettily decorated with plants, cut flowers and at midnight a buffet lunch was served. Miss Higgins has been assisted in her instruction of the class by Claude Fisher of Bound Brook and during the evening Miss Higgins and Mr. Fisher gave an exhibition of modern dancing, particularly demonstrating the "Tango" and the "Lu Lu Lado."

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Faran, of Flemington, were instrumental in arranging the affair and assisted the class instructors in receiving.

A Book That Wasn't Published.

A singular plan for honoring heroes was proposed in 1852. If we may credit the following footnote to "La Typographie," a poem by Le Pelletier, published in that year at Geneva: "In February last several newspapers announced that the largest book ever printed will shortly appear in London under the title 'The Pantheon of English Heroes.' The pages of this book will be twelve feet long and two feet wide and the letters six inches high. It has been found necessary to erect special machinery for the manufacture of the paper required. This gigantic work will be printed by steam in characters of gold, no ordinary printing ink being used in the process. Only a hundred copies will be struck and these will serve to adorn the principal libraries in England. You will not find that book in any public or private library."

Pearls.

The use and popularity of pearls date back to about 350 B. C., but they were known to the older peoples, and especially to those of the east. The Chinese records go still further back, and oyster pearls were received as tribute in the twenty-third century B. C. It is probable that they were found in the waters of Ceylon and India 2,000 years ago, and the Greeks of course both knew and recognized the value of the pearl. But it was not until the Roman empire was beginning to rise that the knowledge of the value of the pearl became general.

Unfortunate Namur.

From the tenth century to 1421 Namur was the capital of a dukedom, but was merged in the Netherlands in 1421. It was captured in 1692 by Marshal Vauban in the Netherlands war and three years later by William of Orange. Again in 1746 the French General Clermont took it, and it was taken from the French by Joseph II. in 1794, but restored again later. In 1815 it was defended with great bravery in the Waterloo campaign.—London Answers.

Interrogating a Reformer.

"I shall leave politics a poorer man than when I first accepted office," said the patriot.

"I wish I knew how to get rid of trouble."

"I'll help you out. I know a fellow who's always looking for it!"—Judge.

SOUTH AVENUE HOUSE IS DAMAGED BY FIRE

The residence at 607 South avenue, owned by Mrs. C. G. Ross, and occupied by C. M. Harrison, was badly damaged by fire shortly before noon today. A boarder in the family who is ill in bed with the grip, detected smoke and shortly after the upper hall was found to be ablaze. Two children were also in the adjoining room ill with the grip and they were gotten out with some difficulty.

An alarm was turned in from box 63 and the fire was put out after an hour's work. An estimate places the loss at $600 covered by insurance. The origin of the blaze is a mystery.

"AMERICAN COMPOSERS."

The Monday Afternoon Club will hold an informal meeting in the Parish House of the Congregational church Monday afternoon, March 29. "American Composers" will be the subject of the afternoon and the session will be in charge of Mrs. Albert H. Atterbury. Each member is given the privilege of inviting one guest to the meeting.

TWO SMALL FIRES.

The apparatus at fire headquarters went out on a telephone alarm this morning for a chimney blaze at 244 East Third street. It was put out with extinguishers before any damage had occurred. The department answered an alarm from box 53 at 3:48 yesterday afternoon for a grass fire on East Front street opposite Farrington avenue.

PATRIOTIC SOCIETIES MET.

The Union County Federation of Patriotic Societies met in Coward's Hall last night for the purpose of discussing Senate bill No. 310, which affects fraternal insurance and the act relating to the reading of the Bible in public schools. A fair sized representation was present and both matters were thoroughly aired from various points of view.

GOSPEL ADDRESS.

There will be a Gospel address given by Samuel Ridout at the hall 209 East Front street tomorrow evening at 7.30 o'clock, the subject being, "The ages immediately succeeding the fall, extending on the flood." As already announced, there will be used at each address a large chart which should serve to illustrate the Scripture bearing on the subject.

IN THE SPORTING SPOTLIGHT

Scattered Sport Gleanings

Some feather ruffling among a flock of live-wire chicken athletes is due to take place at the Columbus Club tonight when the Plainfield and Trenton Y. W. C. A. forces meet in a match to decide the State feminine title. Those who enjoy girls' basketball with all the fixin's and those who have never had the opportunity to get a peak at this pastime should take occasion to drop in and give the combatants the double "O" tonight.

Connie Mack claims that tango dancing is an excellent winter pastime for ball players. Wonder what effect this indoor sport will have on some of our diamond notables around here. If tango wiggling developes youngsters into ball players we ought to soon have a harvest ripe for big league plucking.

News that Cliff Randolph has signed with the Perth Amboy Pacers comes as more or less of a surprise in these diggings. It's only another evidence of the fact that Plainfield is down and out as far as opportunity along the baseball line is concerned. The local youth with big league aspirations nowadays beats it for other sections. When Perth Amboy is selected it's time to call a halt.

News has reached us from the camp of the New York Giants at Marlin, Texas, that "Fat" Hurtt, the monster exhibit of Queen City sport development, was seen giving the McGrawites the once-over one day last week. Hurtt is wintering with a theatrical troupe in the west and while in Marlin took occasion to visit the training park.

Now that the Park Club alleyites have succeeded in setting a precedent in Park-Elks' Club bowling by copping a pair of matches on the rival's lane we wonder what they will serve up next in the line of tournaments. It was a case of "If once you don't succeed, try again" and the pin-splitters from the city and borough tried several times.

It must have been painful for those Y. M. C. A. and Plainfield High School athletes to see their city title trophy handed out to a team of girls. A more deserving delegation would be hard to single out, however.

LITTLE "BLACK MAN" IN BOROUGH CAMP

N. P. H. S. Ball Tossers Are Being Pestered With a Jinx.

Hard luck seems to have struck the North Plainfield High School baseball team from all sides and if many more of the candidates for the team are taken out the captain and coaches will not have nine men to put on the field. To hash all over again the condition at the first practice, the pitching staff was the weakest part of the team. Several weeks ago it was thought and hoped that Dan Denny would return to school to do some duty on the mound but the boroughites have now given up hope of seeing Dan in a High School uniform this year. Bob Hebert's going will leave another important position open which will be hard to fill, and sickness has claimed three "rookies" who were promising candidates for the team this year.

Appleton Van Mater, Malcolm Marsh and Sidney Dunning are three players who will be unable to try for the team. Marsh will be especially missed as he was in line for the catcher's berth next season and Smalley intended breaking him in some this year. Marsh caught several games last year and was on the job during every game. Van Mater is a fast fielder and was out to make a strong bid for one of the positions but is on the sick list. Dunning may have turned out to be a relief pitcher this year with a good chance of getting a regular berth next season but he has been forbidden to play.

During the several practices that have been held lately some new material has shown up well and there may be some new faces on the team this year. Harold Meade, who came to the borough school from Philadelphia, is playing a good game around the first sack and John Dawe, the midget athlete of the school, is swatting the pill in good shape. All of the players are rounding into form and one week from today the lid will be pried off on Hyde Oval.

TIED FOR FIRST HONORS.

Arthur E. Ralston, of this city, son of Rev. Edward S. Ralston, of Netherwood Reformed church, was one of the participants in the intercollegiate gymnastic meet at Columbia College, last night, representing Amherst. He tied with Hogert, of the University of Pennsylvania, for first honors, in the sidehorse apparatus work. The meet was a very successful one and was attended by many persons from this city. The colleges represented were Amherst, Brown, Columbia, Harvard, Haverford, New York University, Princeton, Rutgers, University of Pennsylvania and Yale.

FAILED TO APPEAR.

The Essex team of the Masonic Bowling League, failed to put in an appearance for a postponed match with the Jerusalem five scheduled for the Elks' alleys last night. There was probably some misunderstanding as the match was originally booked to be played in Elizabeth.

ONE-MAN BOWLING CONTEST.

Art Voorhees, who is taking part in the borough one-man bowling tournament, and Walter Vail, of the Elks' Senior team, will play a series of games on the Somerset street alleys Monday night. The match will be decided by the winner of six out of eleven games.

BOWLED AND ATE.

The Plainfield and Westfield printers' bowling teams held an informal time at Westfield, last night, and enjoyed a banquet. The two teams rolled several matches which were all won by the homesters. The affair closes the season for both of the teams.

MASONIC MATCH MONDAY.

The Tyrian and Orient bowling teams of the Masonic League are due to hook up on Elizabeth alleys Monday night.

FIVEBACK WINNER.

Dr. Hubbard was the winner of the monthly average prize of the Handicap Five-back Tourney being held at the Park Club.

P. H. S. SENIORS GET EVEN WITH FACULTY

Win An Exciting Basketball Game by the Score of 21 to 9.

Pent up grievances were let loose yesterday afternoon, when the Senior girls of the Plainfield High School gave the Faculty a severe drubbing, the final score being 21 to 9 in favor of the schoolgirls. The game was staged behind closed doors, barracaded windows, and with no visitors save the female members of the school. Eleven girls were given an opportunity to figure in the contest while six teachers did their level best to turn the tables on the lassies.

During the first half the members of the Faculty numbered 7 points, while the schoolgirls were kept to three foul goals. Miss Elliott did all the scoring for the teachers while Miss Jenson tallied the three fouls.

In the second period of play, Miss Ruth Morris entered the fray and brought the score up, caging six goals and six fouls, while Miss Elliott again scored the only goal for the Faculty.

Much credit is due to Miss Margaret Eaton, the High School guard, who kept Miss Denton scoreless throughout the play. Miss Elliott was the Faculty star while Miss Engstrandt and Miss Lounsberry played fine games at center and guard.

BOICE THE WINNER IN PARK CLUB PLAY

Gets Monthly Ten Pin Prize and Annexed Three Points Last Night.

C. D. Boice, Weston Williams and A. G. Bauer, Jr., were the winners of first, second and third places, respectively, in the weekly handicap ten pin tournament at the Park Club last night. The fight for the three points that goes with first place was hot and Boice only had one pin to spare in the totals. His mark was 557 while Williams made a 556. Boice had 31 on each of the three games and Williams 19. This gives the night and the monthly prize to Boice.

Bauer hit the pins for 475 and was aided by a handicap of 14 per game which made his total 517. Butler was placed at 14 pins behind the scratch mark and totalled 485, while Dudley Strong lost three points on his score.

C. A. RICE SETS FINE RECORD AT PARK CLUB

Charles A. Rice's mark of 122, made in the first game rolled in the fiveback tournament at the Park Club Thursday night, was not only a record for the club, but is the best mark ever made in this State in fiveback. The game is much harder than the regular ten pins as there are only five small pins on the alleys with a good distance between each one. In order to get a strike all the pins must fall on the first ball.

A strike in each of the twelve frames would give a perfect score of 180, but that figure has never been approached. In his first game Mr. Rice made a strike in the first frame. The fourth was a spare and the next seven were all strikes which raised his score so high. The high score record previous to this was 114 made by H. C. Krebs, of the borough, in 1913. The score by frames follow: 9, 13, 17, 27, 42, 57, 72, 87, 102, 113, 119, 122.

ALL WILL WORK FOR A NEW GYM

North Plainfield Parents in Earnest in New Fund Project.

Now that the North Plainfield Parent-Teacher Association has started agitation for a High School gymnasium, that organization does not intend to let the interest in the matter dry up but has formulated plans for money-raising. Mrs. W. O. Taylor, who is secretary of the association has a plan in which the school children are to take part.

The idea is to have every member of the borough schools, from the kindergarten to the Seniors in High School, earn a dollar themselves between April 1 and January 1, 1916. The returns from this voluntary subscription should bring in a good sum of money. The pupils will pledge themselves for one dollar to be placed in a local banking institution for the gym fund and those in charge will keep after the boys and girls for their amounts. There are at present about 1,200 pupils in the Watchung and Somerset Schools and they would undoubtedly be willing to work for a short time for this fund.

The members of the grade classes are the ones that should be greatly interested in the work for the reason that they will be the ones to benefit by the new building. When it is seen that the P. T. A. and the members of the school mean business in this matter the borough citizens will be willing to lend a hand in pushing it through. Work by the pupils this year and a campaign in the borough next spring or summer should bring the desired results, a building for athletics and entertainments under the supervision of the school.

DECISION RESERVED IN PHILLIPS' LIABILITY CASE

The action brought by Arthur R. Phillips, of this city, against the Welsh Farms Dairy Company, Inc., for $12.50 for 400 weeks under the Employer's Liability Act, was concluded before Judge Conolly, at Elizabeth, yesterday. The court reserved decision for one week. Phillips was employed by the defendant concern as manager at a salary of $25 a week and alleged that while in the performnce of his duty he struck his knee against a milk box, producing permanent injury.

The dairy company maintained that if Phillips did meet with the accident the permanent part of his injury was not caused by it, asserting that it resulted from an entirely foreign source. The petitioner was represented by Charles M. Dolliver.

THE DANSANT PLANS.

Every affair given by the Pine Mountain Association is sure to be good. Preparations are being made to make the The Dansant to be given at the Park Club, Saturday night, April 10, attractive to all. Those who don't foxtrot may look on and sup tea, eat ices and enjoy the excellent music. The committee in charge is Miss Eva Browne, chairman; Miss Ethel Colton, Mrs. Allen Cowperthwaite, Mis Helen Harman, Miss Helen Hyde, Miss Helen Joy, Miss Lillian King, Miss Margaret Mead and Mrs. Daniel Runkle.

GIVEN SURPRISE PARTY.

An enjoyable surprise was tendered Miss Mabel Johnson, of Plainfield avenue, last night, in honor of her eighteenth birthday. The affair was arranged by Miss Hammie and Miss Rogers and was held at the former's home which was prettily decorated for the occasion with cut flowers and potted plants. The young people enjoyed dancing, singing and instrumental music and at a late hour refreshments were served.

BRAWNY NORWEGIANS.

They Are the Longest Lived People in the World Today.

The fine stature and unique physical qualities of the athletic Norsemen are thus described by Price Collier in an article on "Norway and the Norwegians, From an American Point of View," in Scribner's Magazine:

"The so called bonder, or agricultural peasantry, form the very backbone of the nation in Norway. Each is proprietor of his own farm, and they occupy the country from the shore of the sea to the foot of the hills and up every glen or valley as far as corn will grow. They are, as a rule, fine looking, athletic men, as their properties are not so large as to exempt them from work, but large enough to supply them and their families with wholesome food. In the old days they built their own houses, made their own furniture, plows, carts, harness, ironwork, woodwork and basketwork. Probably there are no communities anywhere else in the world so self efficient, so independent and so comfortable.

"Indeed, their size and wholesome aspect prove this, for they are the fairest, tallest, broadest chested and longest lived people in the world today.

"In the streets of the towns, at the farms, on the roads, one seldom sees a fat man or one who looks unwieldy. They are sturdily, sometimes heavily, built, but they are lean in the flank, broad of shoulder and thick through, and, though they do not always carry themselves lightly or gracefully, they look to have plenty of room for the working machinery of living, for heart and lungs and digestive apparatus. Wherever you go in Norway, from Christiansand to the North cape, you cannot go far without going up and down hill, nor can you go far without inhaling the champagne like mountain air. It is not impossible that the plain food—a necessity in a poor country—the physical training in the schools, the obligatory military training, the sensible temperance legislation, the up and down hill exercise, the almost entire lack of luxury and the fact that they are not hard workers—not lazy, perhaps, but certainly leisurely in their toil, seldom making any undue demand upon their nervous energy—have produced what no artificial legislation can copy."

Napoleon and Rousseau.

Napoleon on visiting the tomb of Rousseau said:

"It would have been better for the repose of France that this man had never been born."

"Why so, Citizen Consul?"

"It is he who prepared the French revolution."

"I should have thought, Citizen Consul, that it was not for you to complain of the revolution."

"Well," replied Napoleon, "the future will discover whether it was not better for the repose of the world that neither Rousseau nor I had ever been born."

In these words we hear the first clarion of advancing imperialism.—"The Personality of Napoleon," J. Holland Rose.

The Origin of "Hurrah."

The word "hurrah" is pure Slavonian and is commonly heard from the coast of Dalmatia to Bering strait when any of the population living within these limits is called on to give proof of courage and valor. The origin of the word belongs to the primitive idea that every man that dies heroically for his country goes straight to heaven—Hu ray, to paradise and in the shock and ardor of battle the combatants utter that cry, as the Turks do that of "Allah!" each animating himself by the certitude of immediate recompense to forget earth and to contemn death.

How Indians Purified Water.

The Indians had a way of purifying water from a pond or swamp by digging a hole about a foot across and down about six inches below the water level a few feet from the pond. After it was filled with water they bailed it out quickly, repeating the bailing process about three times. After the third bailing the hole would be filled with filtered water. Try it.—Boy Scout Handbook.

Why Corn Has Silk.

A Potato Hill man who is sixty-one years old never knew until recently that for every grain on an ear of corn there is a silk running out to the end to light and moisture. These silks run back under the husk. One is attached to each grain on the cob and nourishes it. Everything in nature is more wonderful than any invented story.—Potato Hill Cor. in Atchison Globe.

Culture's Progress.

"Our daughter is studying French, German, music, dancing and painting," said the fond mother complacently.

"Well," replied Mr. Cumrox, "that's a good start. But has she yet learned not to use back number slang and chew gum?"—Washington Star.

No Longer Company.

"Familiarity breeds contempt."

"True. When I was first invited over to their house to dinner they used to let the dishes go until morning; now they do them right after dinner and call me into the kitchen to help."—Detroit Free Press.

RUMOR HAS IT THAT "TACKS" HARDWICK MAY SUCCEED TO "SPEEDY" RUSH'S JOB

"Tacks" Hardwick (top) and Coach Rush.

Report now has it that "Tacks" Hardwick, Harvard star, may be chosen to coach University School football team at Cleveland for the 1915 season. The athletic authorities at the school refuse to verify the report, saying that the choice will not be announced for another month.

The man who is selected for the job will have to measure up pretty well if he proves a worthy successor to "Speedy" Rush, who will go to Princeton the coming season. Rush was regarded as the leader among all the prep school coaches and one of the best in the country when Princeton invited him.

PROGRESS AND PROSPERITY IN PLAINFIFLD

NO DULLNESS FOR THIS CONTRACTOR

HAS A JOLLY GANG

Plainfield Wood Butchers Are Mixing Pleasure With Business While Putting up Forty Bungalows "Down the Shore."

Although Plainfield contractors in general are complaining of inactivity in their particular line, there is one boss carpenter who is as busy as a surgeon after a Prussian attack. This fortunate individual is Charles Bicknell, of Pine street, who is now head-over-heels in work at Monmouth Beach, putting up the advance guard of the forty bungalows to be erected by the Shorelands' Company, of which Charles A. Dall, of this city, is a moving spirit. One of the structures is already enclosed, two others are well underwayand eight more are to be staked out next week. It will take until late in the summer or the early fall, however, before the contract is completed.

Mr. Bicknell is making the job a Plainfield one as far as is possible and not only has local men in his gang, but he is getting his material from here as well. The Loizeaux Lumber Company broke all transportation records by putting three carloads of lumber on the ground two days after the order was received. Since this the concern has been shipping supplies as fast as they have been needed, never failing to deliver the goods as promised. The Loizeaux promptness has made all the big coast dealers sit up and take notice.

Morris Youston, one of Plainfield's best known foremen, is in charge of the work for the contractor. His gang includes William Stites, Paul Overbaugh, Wilbert Pennington, Wilbur Bush, Fred Christofferson, John Alexander and several others from this city and borough, in addition to a number from Monmouth county. The Plainfielders are boarding near the job with Mrs. Jones, who has made a big hit with her cooking and motherly ways. Even Wilbert Pennington, who has been off his feed all winter, has never missed a meal and feels so much like his old self that he has stayed out two nights after 9 o'clock. Paul Overbaugh made himself so solid with a native who owns a motor boat that the whole crowd is being taken out on fine trips after working hours. Anyone who knows Paul can imagine the line of talk he handed out. It's a safe bet he told the gullible Monmouth county man he owns half of Watchung Lake, erected the Babcock building, had three rich uncles and only took up carpentering to wear out his old clothes.

All hands were the guests of Mr. Bicknell at a minstrel show in Long Branch a few nights ago and they declared afterward if the good times on the side keep up Plainfield will have to offer unusual inducements to get them back home.

$4,000 IMPROVEMENT TO WEST SEVENTH ST. HOUSE

An alteration job amounting to $4,000 has been given out during the past week for work on the residence at 652 West Seventh street recently purchased by Eugene Liftchild from Walter Longman, Jr. The property was known for many years as the "Stewart Place," owing to the fact that it belong to John Stewart, now a resident of Springfield, Mass.

New floors will be put down all through the house, modern bathrooms installed, the plumbing, heating and lighting entirely renewed. When the changes have been completed, both the interior and exterior will be repainted and decorated. A new porch will be one of the features of the outside work.

The improvements will be made by the following contractors: Carpentry work, George D. Wilson; mason, Joseph Brandt; plumbing and heating, E. F. Borman & Brother; tinning, Vail Brothers; painting and decorating, Julius Borman.

NEARING COMPLETION.

Another house, being erected by James Hurley, of the borough, on Belmont avenue, is now being completed, being the sixth to be put up by the owner on that thoroughfare. Mr. Hurley owns a tract of land in this vicinity, and anticipates opening up another street in this section during the course of the summer, thus affording a further number of desirable building sites.

BETTER TONE IN CEMENT MARKET

Companies Advance the Price for Future Delivery, Making Quotation $1.42.

FULL PLANT CAPACITY

Greater Demand for Materials—Loans Are Being Made With Little or No Premiums Asked—Many Building Plans Filed.

New York, March 27.—Following the lead of the Allentown Portland Cement Company in advancing its price five cents last week, the Atlas Portland Cement Company this week advanced its price for future delivery ten cents making the quotation $1.42 effective at once. Incidentally it will start its Hudson mill next week utilizing its full capacity. The Lehigh Portland Cement Company's Fogelsville plant is running 47,000 barrels a day. This company's storage capacity is 700,000 barrels and it has at present only 200,000 barrels in reserve so that it would appear that although this company is now operating its full plant capacity the demand for this commodity is such as to indicate that the market is taking care of it despite the fact that the railroads have not yet come into the purchasing market as heavily as usual.

There is some business being taken at levels below the $1.42 future delivery price, but only for immediate delivery. It is extremely hard to buy cement in the market even on a spot basis at $1.23 because none of the companies selling standard cement of a dependable quality appear to care for any more business at that figure. Dealers who have contracted for cement at the sixty cent mill base are advised to get their supplies into their own hands at the earliest possible moment because some opinion in the trade questions the validity of the agreement should, for any reason the manufacturers find it inconvenient to fulfill it.

It was pointed out, for instance, that if the building season should develop the strength that plan filing reports at present indicate, the mill price might advance to a figure even higher than the ninety cent base ruling before the late break in prices. If dealers proceed to contract upon the basis of sixty cents and under to builders upon the assumption that the manufacturers will make deliveries thirty cents a barrel below prices that may exist around August, and the demand for cement as the result of the building movement should crowd most of the mills, it might prove difficult for the dealer to make good on the business he has taken. Proceeding on the basis that a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush, most dealers are making room for all the cement they can in their sheds now.

While there is a great quantity of building plans being filed in the metropolitan district, and especially in Manhattan, the peculiar condition of the money market is holding actual work back to a considerable extent. There is, however, a better demand for material everywhere save in the lower part of Manhattan. Harlem is doing well and so are those outlying sections that are going to be reached by the new subways. In the outskirts of the city loans are being made with little or no premium asked. The same is true of the New Jersey suburbs. In Manhattan, however, as high as three per cent. premium is being asked and, in some cases, where extra hazards make the loan more difficult to get the premium has been reported as moving to 8 per cent.

Brick sales in the wholesale market were weak because dealers apparently are riding from stacks. Prices are steady at $5.75 for good Hudsons. Raritans are stronger at $6. Other departments are without feature, save in steel which, while adhering to the $25.20 basis, is stiffening in tone for future requirement.

"There have been changes for the better in business," said a prominent New Jersey financier this week, "and there is a better tone to building finance as well as in the money market in general. Gold to the amount of $5,500,000 was transferred from Ottawa to New York this week and additional engagements are pending. Total imports of gold thus far this year amounts to $28,000,000, the bulk of which came from Canada where the Bank of England has established a special reserve. Exchange rates are distinctly favorable to bringing in gold. The first quarter of the calendar year promises to show a trade balance of between $400,000,000 and $500,000,000 in favor of this country. This money must be placed.

"Furthermore the individual savings bank book holder has had his lesson during the late depression. He has found that his little nest egg in the savings department has stood him safe from the maw of the wolf. He will figure upon positively putting aside as much, if not more, to rebuild that an refuge. This will mean hundreds more millions to be reinvested. Banks will not be so critical of mortgages, etc., and building construction and expansion of all kinds will go ahead."

Looking over the construction situation practically every person concerned admits that changes are better. Lime, cement, lumber, steel, plaster and specialty mills are all developing and throwing in greater capacity, brick being the only exception, mainly because the Hudson district is still in its winter season when no brick is made at all even under normal conditions. The upturn in the price of building materials has come and it is merely speculation to attempt to fix the limits to which quotations may go. The consuming public must bear in mind that factory and mill stocks have been seriously depleted and that demand for some time probably will be in excess of supply which always means higher prices.

BUSINESS BUILDING MARKS THIS WEEK

Four Permits Issued by Inspector Doane—Structures to Cost $8,500.

Building operations took a spurt during the course of the past week when four permits, calling for two business buildings and two garages were issued by Inspector T. O. Doane. The new buildings will cost in the vicinity of $8,500.

The action of the local building world during the present week has been instrumental in sending the month of March above the record of the same month of last year in the matter of value of the buildings for which the permits were issued. This fact brings each of the first three months of the present year in excess of 1914 in regards to the starting of new building work, thus lending encouragement to the local situation.

First Ward.

The Rush Commercial Job Printing Company has been granted a permit for the erection of a 55 by 70 foot hollow terra cotta block plant on Leland avenue at a cost of $3,500. The structure will be a one-story affair. James Gibbs has the contract for the entire work.

J. Fred MacDonald has been granted a permit for a one-story brick building for business purposes to be erected at 110 Watchung avenue to measure 24 by 80 feet. The cost is estimated at $4,700. William H. Pangborn & Son, of the borough, have the mason contract, while Wyman & Haberle have the carpenter contract. The owner is the architect of the building.

F. T. Dickerson is to erect a garage at 535 East Second street of frame construction to cost $200. The building will measure 18 by 18 feet.

Third Ward.

S. B. Myers, of 4025 West Seventh street, has been granted a permit for the erection of a 10 by 18-foot frame garage at a cost of $100 in the rear of his residence.

DENTISTS' SUITES UNDER ONE ROOF

House at 507 Park Ave. to Undergo Alterations Amounting to $5,000.

The residential building at 507 Park avenue, owned by M. Edna Richards, is shortly to undergo complete alterations for the purpose of making a building solely for dentists' offices. When completed it will have two complete suites on both the first and second floors, while the third floor will be arranged as living quarters for a caretaker. According to estimates, the improvement will cost $5,000. Charles Smith of the borough, is the architect.

The plans figured upon call for the raising of the present one-story kitchen in the rear to the full height of three stories and a further addition to it, to measure 13 by 19 feet. The interior arrangement of the entire structure is to be torn out and a new floor plan substituted. The dental suites will each have an operating room, reception room, lavatory and toilet. Each set will be divided by a large main hall. All the finishing, heating and plumbing and decorations are to be strictly up-to-the-minute in order to make the building an ideal home for dental practice. The residence as it stands was erected only a few years ago and was occupied for a time by Dr. Guy H. Hillman.

COUNTY ACTIVITIES.

Ten building contracts of various proportions were filed with County Clerk James C. Calvert during the week ending last Saturday, calling for the expenditure of $52,019. The one of the most importance is that between the Linden Board of Education and the Barnes Building Company, of Elizabeth, for the work on a new school building at that place to cost $30,478. But one contract was filed from this city, that being between Isidor Reiss and Nathan Eskowitz for an alteration job at 452 West Fourth street to cost $855.

The Garden Day By Day

by Tarkington Baker

Next Week's Work In Brief

As rapidly as the weather and temperature will permit, get all the soil spaded where flowers or vegetables are to be grown. In an average season, outdoor planting begins in earnest early in April.

Top-dress the asparagus bed. It is better to use bone meal or some other commercial fertilizer for this purpose rather than barnyard manure. The latter introduces too many weed seed. If you intend to start a new bed of asparagus, begin the work now.

If early flowers of dahlias are wanted, divide and start the roots into growth. Look over the stock of summer-flowering bulbs stored in the cellar during the winter. As the days grow warmer, the winter storing place may become too hot for them.

As the leaf buds begin to open, spray currants, raspberries, blackberries and gooseberries with Bordeaux mixture.

As seedlings planted indoors in flats begin to show, avoid watering them too generously. An over-supply of water will cause damping off or result in spindling plants.

The basis of success in the flower or vegetable garden is thorough preparation of the ground where the seed is to be sown or the plants set out. The deeper the spading is done, the better, and the more thoroughly the clods are broken up in the process, the surer will be success. Too often shallow spading is the cause of loss when summer droughts set in; the growing roots have found it difficult to penetrate to proper depth and, accordingly, have spread out near the surface where the moisture is soon exhausted. As the soil is turned, spade in bone meal and wood ashes or a liberal dressing of well rotted cow manure. Finish by thoroughly pulverizing the surface soil, not merely on top, but for several inches in depth. This makes for quick, strong, healthy root growth and rapidly draws the roots downward so that they are able to withstand a siege of dry weather later in the season.

In making beds or borders for perennials the work should be even more thorough. These plants, it must be remembered, are to remain in the same place for several seasons and, as most of them are strong feeders, the preparation must be accordingly. The best results are obtained by marking off the space to be planted and then by excavating all the soil to a depth of three feet. The bottom of the trench is then broken up with spade or pick and if drainage is required a layer of broken stone or coarse gravel is spread. Upon this, wherever possible, place a layer of spits of sod—that shaved off from the surface in case the ground is being cultivated for the first time. On the sod, in turn, place a well-rotted cow manure to a depth of six inches, follow this with a layer of soil and manure—half and half—and continue adding other layers of soil and manure, decreasing the quantity of manure used the nearer the level is brought to the surface. The top three inches should contain very little of the fertilizer unless it is at least six months old. Allow the newly made bed to settle for a week or ten days before it is planted.

Asparagus beds should be dressed immediately with a liberal quantity of bone meal. If new beds of asparagus are to be set out, prepare the ground as for the herbaceous perennials. In selecting the roots to be planted, choose only the best—such varieties as Conover's Colossal, Palmetto, Argenteuil and Burr's Mammoth. In planting crops of this sort, always remember that inferior varieties demand as much care, occupy as much space and demand as much of the gardener's time as the better sorts. It might be well, while setting out the asparagus, to plant some rhubarb in an out-of-the-way corner. This plant prefers a moist situation.

If space permits and the season is well advanced, with the frost out of the ground and the bed well prepared, it will oftentimes pay to plant some early potatoes during the last week in March. For this early planting, select Bovee, Queen, Early Rose or Early Ohio. If a late frost threatens the tops when they have shown above ground, they can be protected sufficiently by covering them with old newspapers or, in case of severer weather, by hastily heaping soil over the foliage. Where space is limited and the gardener consequently must turn it to fullest account, it will profit him to risk planting seed of some of the hardier vegetables outdoors during the week. These frequently reward him generously for his boldness and, even if they fail utterly, the loss involved is never very serious. This applies as well to the hardy annuals.

If early cannas are wanted, start the tubers into growth by half covering them with a very sandy compost and keeping them in a warm place. Dahlias may be started in the same manner. Carefully examine the gladiolus bulbs, tuberoses and other tender, summer-flowering bulbs to see that the winter storage place has not grown too warm with the advance of spring. Look over the lists of new gladioli and invest in some of the splendid new creations offered annually by the nurserymen.

Spray the berries and grapes with Bordeaux mixture to guard against leaf-spot and anthracnose. The spray should be applied just as the foliage is breaking from the bud. If the winter mulch is not entirely removed from the strawberries, finish taking it off if the weather does not forbid, but withdraw it gradually so that the plants will have ample opportunity to harden.

TARKINGTON BAKER.

NEW MARKET HAS ANOTHER IMPETUS

Sale of Twelve Acre Farm in Village Means Factory and Further Buildings.

Quite an important deal in New Market real estate, which ought to result in a further boom for the village, was consummated on Tuesday through the real estate agency of John Pedderman, of Dunellen. This was in the sale of the farm of Thos. J. MacKinnon to New York parties for the purpose of building a factory there. The farm contains twelve acres and is located along the line of the Lehigh Valley Railroad not far from Prospect avenue and next to the C. E. Kelly coal yard. The new owners propose to develop it at an early date and put up a large factory there, the nature of which will be announced later.

With another factory coming to Piscataway township it looks as if the boom, longed for and so long delayed, had dawned at last. There will be quite a material advance to the amount of taxable property in the village too, when the new plants are built and houses erected to shelter the families of the workmen. It may ultimately be the means of coalescing population right around this vicinity so the New Market borough idea will be rendered irresistible.

IN THE SUBURBS

Dunellen.

Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Thorn and daughter, Frances, of Brooklyn, who recently purchased the Wrage property on Center street, are contemplating moving to town on April.

Improvements in the plumbing line are to be installed at once in the flats of the Standard Investment Company building on North avenue. The contract has been awarded to Contractor Otis Webber.

The contract for electric wiring at the residence of William K. Hartpense, on New Market road, where alterations have been in progress for the past two weeks, has been awarded to Contractor Edward J. Herlich.

Work has been begun by Plainfield contractors on what is understood to be a contract for the erection of four new dwellings on the Equator Park tract. The contract is given by President Samuel H. Schwartz, of the company. Excavations are already being made.

Improvements in the painting and decorating line are being made at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Kookogey. Contractor Edward Ayers has the contract.

South Plainfield.

A contract between the Merchants and Traders Realty Company, of New York city, owners, and Morris Rabinowitz, of Plainfield, contractor, has been filed at the county clerk's office for the erection of a one and a half story bungalow on New York avenue, South Plainfield, to cost $2,350. The specifications were drawn by R. L. Robinson, of Plainfield.

Sealed proposals for the erection of an addition to the South Plainfield School and also for the building and ventilating of the building will be received by the Piscataway Township Board at the New Market school house Wednesday evening.

Scotch Plains.

Charles Ball, of Scotch Plains, has awarded Anthony Albert, the local contractor, the job of building him a two-and-a-half story house on Westfield road, to be completed with all the modern fixtures.

Middlesex Borough.

Field Brothers have started the erection of a new house on Grant avenue, Beechwood Heights, near Harris lane corner.

New Market.

Dr. William J. Nelson has his icehouse at Lake Nelson well along the road to completion. It suffered materially in the severe storms of the winter, necessitating the putting up of a new frame in parts, and this work is about accomplished.

PUBLIC SALE.

A public sale will be held Thursday at 2 o'clock, of a portion of the Butler property on Park avenue, partly in the township of Piscataway partly in the Township of Piscataway by A. M. Beekman and W. A. Coddington.

CHAPTER VI.

"Who is this woman?"

CONRAD and Gretel appeared with Britton after an unconscionable lapse of time, partially dressed and grumbling. "Conrad," said I, fixing the ancient with a stern, compelling gaze, "this has gone quite far enough."

"I am a very old man," he whined.

"Yes, mein herr?"

"Do you serve me, or do you serve the lady in the east wing?"

"I do," said he, with a great deal more wit than I thought he possessed.

"I have been talking with the lady this evening," said I.

"Yes, mein herr; I know," said he.

"Oh, you do, eh? Well, will you be good enough to tell me what is the meaning of all this two faced, underhand conduct on your part? I want the truth from you. Who is this woman, and why are you so infernally set upon shielding her? What crime has she committed? Tell me at once, or, by the Lord Harry, out you go tomorrow—all of you!"

"I am a very old man," he whined, twisting his gnarled fingers, a suggestion of tears in his voice. "My wife is old, mein herr. You would not be cruel. We have been here for sixty years. The old baron"—

"Enough!" I cried resolutely. "Out with it, man! I mean all that I say!"

"Tomorrow, mein herr, tomorrow," he mumbled in a final plea. I shook my head. "She will explain everything tomorrow," he went on eagerly. "I am sworn to reveal nothing, mein herr. My wife, too, and my sons. We may not speak until she gives the word. Alas, we shall be turned out to die in our"—

"We have been faithful servants to the Rothhoefens for sixty years!" sobbed his wife.

"And still are, I suspect!" I cried angrily.

Mr. Poopendyke's common sense came in very handily at this critical juncture. He counseled me to let the matter rest until the next morning, when it was reasonable to expect the lady herself would explain everything.

However, we forced something out of Schmick before his stalwart sons came tramping up the stairs to rescue him. The old man gave us a touch of inside history concerning Schloss Rothhoefen and its erstwhile powerful barons.

About the middle of the nineteenth century the last of the real barons—the powerful, landowning, despotic barons, I mean—came to the end of his fourscore years and ten and was laid away with great pomp and glee by the people of the town across the river. He was the last of the Rothhoefens, for he left no male heir. His two daughters had married Austrian noblemen, and neither of them had a male descendant. The estate, already in a state of financial as well as physical disintegration, fell into the hands of women and went from bad to worse so rapidly that long before the last quarter of the century was fairly begun the castle and the reduced holdings slipped away from the Rothhoefens altogether and into the control of the father of the count from whom I purchased the property. The count's father, it appears, was a distiller of great wealth in his day and a man of action. Unfortunately he died before he had the chance to carry out his projects in connection with the rehabilitation of Schloss Rothhoefen, even then a deserted, ramshackle resort for paying tourists and a Mecca for antique and picture dealers.

The new count, my immediate predecessor, was not long in dissipating the great fortune left by his father, the worthy distiller. He had run through with the bulk of his patrimony by the time he was twenty-five and was pretty much run down at the heel when he married in the hope of recouping his lost fortune.

The Schmicks did not like him. They did not approve of him as lord and master, nor was it possible for them to resign themselves to the fate that had put this young scapegrace into the shoes, so to speak, of the grim old barons Rothhoefen, who, whatever else they may have been in a high handed sort of way, were men to the core. This pretender, this creature without brains or blood, this sponging reprobate, was not to their liking. If I am to quote Conrad, who became quite forceful in his harangue against the recent order of things,

He, his wife and his sons, he assured me, were full of rejoicing when they learned that the castle had passed from Count Hohendahl's hands into mine. I at least would pay them their wages, and I might, in a pinch, be depended upon to pension them when they got too old to be of any use about the castle.

All attempts on my part to connect the lady in the east wing with the history of the extinct Rothhoefens were futile. He would not commit himself.

"Well," said I, yawning in helpless collusion with the sleepy Gretel, "we'll let it go over till morning. Call me at 7, Britton."

I went to bed, but not to sleep. It was very clear to me that my neighbor was a disturber in every sense of the word. She wouldn't let me sleep. For hours I tried to get rid of her, but she filtered into my brain and prodded my thoughts into the most violent activity. She wouldn't stay put. But finally I dropped off.

I was aroused from my belated sleep by the sound of mighty cataracts and the tread of countless elephants. Too late I realized that the tourists were upon me! Too late I remembered that the door to my room had been left unlocked! One hundred and sixty-nine were huddled outside my door, drinking in the monotonous drivel of the guide who had a shrill, penetrating voice and not the faintest notion of a conscience.

I listened in dismay for a moment and then, actuated by something more than mere fury, leaped out of bed and prepared for a dash across the room to lock the door. On the third stride I whirled and made a flying leap into the bed, scuttling beneath the covers with the speed and accuracy of a crawfish. Just in time, too, for the heavy door swung slowly open a second later and the shrill, explanatory voice was projected loudly into my lofty bed chamber.

"Come a little closer, please," said the morose man with the cap. "This room was occupied for centuries by the masters of Schloss Rothhoefen. It is a bedchamber. See the great baronial bed. It has not been slept in for more than 200 years. The later barons refused to sleep in it because one of their ancestors had been assassinated between its sheets at the tender age of six. He was stabbed by a stepuncle who played him false."

A resolute beholder spoke up, "Can't we step inside?"

"If you choose, madame. But we must waste no time."

"I do so want to see where the old barons slept."

"Please do not handle the bedspreads and curtains. They will fall to pieces"—

I heard no more, for the vanguard had pushed him aside and was swooping down upon me. A sharp nosed man led the way. He was within three feet of the bed and was stretching out his hand to touch the proscribed fabrics when I sat bolt upright and yelled:

"Get out!"

Afterward I was told that the guide was the first to reach the bottom of the stairs and that he narrowly escaped death in the avalanche of horrified humanity that piled after him, pursued by the puissant ghost of a six-year-old ancestor.

In 1914 Colorado was the only suffrage State to pass minor legislation to improve conditions for women.

Child Labor Legislation.

1. Thirty States set an early closing hour for children under sixteen. Colorado and Arizona got it under male suffrage.

2. California prohibits night labor for children under 18 after 10 p. m., Washington, suffrage four years, in bake shops only

3. Colorado, until 1911, had practically no protective legislation for children; after 18 years of woman suffrage—then it passed an eight hour provision for children under 16, already on the statute books of 11 male suffrage States.

4. Washington, suffrage since 1910—any child boy or girl, ten years of age, is permitted to beg, peddle or sing on the street for gain. Utah, with the Mormon church, and suffrage since 1896, permits girls of twelve to follow the "dainty, dignified and essentially feminine profession of shining shoes at the gutter's edge."—Member of National Child Labor Committee. In Colorado boys of any age and girls of ten may engage in street trades. In California, September 10, 1914, Mrs. Katherine P. Edson, of the State Welfare Commission, testified before the Federal Industrial Relations Commission as follows:

[illegible] special trouble, such as the children in the street, is due to men working for an inadequate wage and women being forced to go out and work. It seems to me a hopeless situation. My opinion is that there are more women outside their homes here than there should be. Some large dry goods stores, I understand, are contemplating refusing to employ married women because of the numerous complaints from unmarried women workers.

The Consumers' League of New Jersey sends the following communication to Mrs. Alexander F. Jamieson, of Lawrenceville, N. J., and asks that she will give it further publicity.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD.

Dick finished shaving, lit a cigar and took a book to the porch swing, pleasantly shaded by the big maple tree, but he was too upset to read or even enjoy his cigar. He and Nell had had their first real quarrel and the suddenness of it and the trivial nature of the disturbance made it loom with greater seriousness.

"It was all my fault, too," he reflected with rare justice. "I urged her to tell what that meddling fool of a woman had said, then jumped on her with both feet because it happened to hit me in a tender place. How I hate a meddlesome, gossipy village," he thought, and threw away his cigar. "Lord! what is a man to do? Here is a nice girl who happens to board in the neighborhood where I live and of course she goes to lunch at the same time. I suppose Mrs. Ellson and her ilk would have me walk five feet behind her all the way there and back to avoid talk." He tossed his book on a chair, adjusted a pillow under his head and lay down. "The girl is a stranger and lonely, and it is pleasant for her to talk to me of mutual friends. I like to talk to her. Why shouldn't I? She's a good listener and interested in my ideas about things. Scott! Is a man never to be seen walking, standing, or talking to any other woman because he's married? Nell had been quite sensible before that fool woman stirred her up. Where has she gone? We were to have had such a nice picnic together. It's a shame!" He swung moodily back and forth.

"Is that the best use you can make of your time on a half holiday?" came a voice from the gate. It was Miss Rudolph.

Dick sat up. "I was lying here waiting for my wife. We are going on a little picnic."

"Why, it's three o'clock. You won't any more than get somewhere when it will be time to come back." She was leaning against the fence. "I have had a lovely walk. You are poor managers to waste two golden hours when there are only four in the afternoon."

"You are right, there," said Dick, leaning his elbows on his knees and dropping his chin in his hands.

"May I come in and sit on your porch till you go? It's cool here and there is no shade at Mrs. Brown's—and I am lonesome." She had an appealing way with her, like a timid animal. Dick felt that if Nell came back and found her there the quarrel would be harder to make up, but there was nothing he could do but say, "certainly."

She would not sit in a rocker, but dropped onto a cushion on the step. She realized that the more detached she appeared the more she would appeal to his sympathy, and she knew that something was wrong with the usually cheerful Dick. He did not want to talk; in fact he was wishing she would go away, and wondering what excuse he could make to Nell if she came home and found her there with him alone.

At last he jumped to his feet. "Excuse me, I just happened to think of an errand I must do before we start." Then he got his hat.

"I'll walk with you as far as my room," she said, and they went off together just as Nell came in sight of the gate, at the head of the street.

Animal Jingles
FOR LITTLE FOLKS
BY ALICE CREW GALL

Mother McGrew and Her Family.

To her family one day said Old Mother McGrew:
"I'm going to give a big party for you,
And you children can help me a lot if you try;
The party will be on the Fourth of July.

"So you'd better behave until then or you'll find
At the very last minute I may change my mind."
The children all promised because, it is true,
They doted on parties as all children do.

In the meantime good Mother McGrew baked and brewed;
She fried and she frizzled; she broiled and she stewed;
So when the great day came she had as a treat
All sorts of delectable goodies to eat.

She bought some pin-wheels and some sky-rockets, too;
And so when the little folks got there that night
And saw all these things they were wild with delight.

As they sat down to supper good Mother McGrew
Said, "We will have fireworks as soon as you're through."
But alas for her plans, when they looked on the lawn
They found all their beautiful fireworks were gone.

The children all started to weep and to wail;
Then Mother McGrew saw the Ostrich turn pale;
She knew in a minute just what he had done;
He'd eaten the fireworks up, every last one!

"Though I really should shake you, I'll scold you instead,
For a shaking might set off the fireworks," she said.
"In fact, I don't know just what I should do
In a case of this kind," said poor Mother McGrew.

"But this much I know, it's distressingly plain You'll never be asked to a party again."
And I think that her word must have proved to be true,
For I've never seen him at any, have you?

Household Hints..

WORTH KNOWING.

One tablespoon vinegar in a basin of hot water for washing windows, mirrors, etc., changes a task to a pleasure.

If warm water as hot as one can bear the hands in is used in making cold starch, the clothes will iron much more easily and quickly and be much smoother than by the old method.

To take off wall paper easily—To two gallons soft warm water use two tablespoons saltpeter dissolved in it. Wet the paper with this; you can take it off in half of the time.

To clean lace curtains—Take cornmeal about two pints, and two pounds pulverized borax. Lay curtain on table and a clean cloth. Double curtain lengthwise. Put on meal and borax mixed, then take a brush and brush it into the curtain from one end to the other; then shake well and hang out to air. Press and your curtain will look like new. A fine way to clean fine curtains for the first time.

EASTER EGG CANDIES.

Fried Eggs—Take juice of one orange, one teaspoon lemon juice, white of one egg whipped slightly, as much powdered sugar as you can work into the juice, making a nice dough. Color this mixture with vegetable coloring to make a pretty yellow. Form into balls like big marbles, then flatten them on buttered paper to the thickness of fried egg yolks. Set aside to harden.

To make the egg whites: Soak two tablespoons gelatin powder in six tablespoons cold water while you make the sirup. Boil two cups granulated sugar in one cup water till it forms a stiff ball in cold water. Pour sirup over gelatin and when cool beat fifteen minutes with a cream whip or a fork. Add one teaspoon of vanilla and beat one minute. This should be light, white and foamy. Drop in large dabs on buttered paper or buttered platters. Have each dab the size of a fried egg. Press a yolk into each dab before it begins to harden; leave till well set. Dust both sides with powdered sugar and arrange on platter that has been previously dusted with powdered sugar.

Whites: Boil one cup granulated sugar in one-fourth cup water till it spins a thread when lifted on fork or spoon; add one-half teaspoon vanilla and set off fire. Stir till it begins to look cloudy, then pour quickly, in small dabs, on buttered plates. Drop a yolk in center of each dab and fold white immediately about it, shaping with your hands as much like an egg as possible. If the mixture gets too thick before you are done, set the kettle in boiling water till it melts again.

Shell: Add one cup sugar to one-fourth cup water. Boil till it threads; add one tablespoon melted chocolate and let it boil up once, stirring slightly. Remove from fire, let get slightly cool; don't stir. Stick a stout pin in each egg and dip the whole egg in chocolate mixture, holding by the pin till it begins to harden; lay on cold buttered platter. This recipe makes a pretty brown shell. Then, if a fine brush or pin is used, dipping it in the chocolate and dabbing on the egg, it leaves darker spots, making them a pretty speckled egg.

UP-TO-DATE RECIPES.

Miss Elizabeth Wetherell, of Y. W. C. A., Engaged by Syracuse University.

WILL LEAVE IN THE FALL

Has Introduced Many New Features in Routine of Work Here—Local Physical Department One of the Strongest in the State.

Miss Elizabeth Wetherell, who has been connected with the local Y. W. C. A. physical department for the past three years, will leave the Plainfield association to take a similar position with the Syracuse University in the fall.

Miss Wetherell graduated from the Pesse Normal School of Gymnastics, Boston, Mass., in 1911, and her first position was with the Springfield Y. W. C. A. of that State, where she stayed for one year before coming to Plainfield. The city association has felt itself particularly fortunate in having her and the loss will be felt deeply by the members of the association and all who knew her. During her stay in this city Miss Wetherell has been unusually successful in her work and with the hearty co-operation that she has received from all the members she has been able to build up one of the finest gymnastic institutions in the State. Her course here included Swedish gymnastics, aesthetic and folk dancing, apparatus work, Indian clubs, dumb bells, wands, tactics, games, volley ball and corrective gymnastics for round shoulders, flatfoot and spinal curvature. Last year the local association captured the silver cup at the New York exhibit for dancing and drills. The basketball team under her supervision is classed among the strongest in the State.

Miss Wetherell will be the assistant physical director at Syracuse University where she will have a larger field to work in. The university has a membership of 3,500 members with 1,700 girls in the physical department. The local association, including the members and all her friends, wish her the highest success in her new position. Miss Wetherell's home is in Syracuse which is another inducement to the local physical director, bringing her nearer to her relatives. She will begin her duties in the university the second week of September.

The Plainfield board has not made any arrangements as yet for another physical director.

TO LECTURE ON THE "FJORDS OF NORWAY"

The final entertainment of the free lecture course provided by the Board of Education this winter will be held at the High School Auditorium, Thursday, at 8 p. m. The lecturer will be B. R. Baumgardt, and the subject of his lecture is the Fjords of Norway." The lecture will be illustrated with many carefully chosen stereopticon views, most of which were taken by Mr. Baumgardt during his long years of residence in Europe.

The lecture itself provides a vivid description of the scenes portrayed upon the screen and is calculated to give to the audience a graphic and accurate knowledge of the historical outlines of the Norse people. Mr. Baumgardt's reputation as a successful lecturer is well known and a large and appreciative audience is assured.

GERMANS PLAN TO HELP FATHERLAND

The local branch of the American Alliance for the permanent relief of the war sufferers of Germany, Austria, Hungary and America was definitely organized Friday evening at the Saengerbund Hall. The alliance is planned to be a permanent organization with an extension over the whole vast area of the United States. Its aims and intentions are best expressed in section thereof the by-laws of the alliance: "It is the aim of the alliance to give lasting relief to the needy warriors and those depending upon them; to erect and maintain orphan asylums and other institutions of a similar nature and for other deeds of brotherly love in general."

The newly organized Plainfield branch numbers to date over two hundred and fifty members, men and women, with a yearly contribution amounting to nearly three hundred dollars ($300). After the by-laws of the local branch had been passed, the following officers were elected: President, Prof. A. W. Hauck; first vice president, Dr. Richard Moldenke; second vice president, Louis Bothar; treasurer, C. W. Krausse; financial secretary, W. Leitheusser; executive secretary, E. A. Janke; trustees, Mrs. Marie Kuenlen, Mrs. Elsie Schanz, Henry Haurand, Ludwig Kohlweis and Henry C. Vogel; delegates to the State convention, Prof. A. W. Hauck, sub-delegate, Rev. Geo. Hauser, of the German Reformed church.

There will be regular meeting on the second Friday of every month at which musical selections will be rendered, addresses made by prominent speakers and general entertainment provided.

WILL SEND THIRD LOT OF MILK TO BELGIANS

Dunellen Contribution Makes it Possible to Order 4,800 Cans of Condensed Milk.

Ten dollars sent to the Daily Press by the Missionary Society of the Dunellen Presbyterian church for the Belgian babies milk fund, completed the $310 necessary to ship 4,800 cans of condensed milk to the sufferers, and the order has been placed by Miss E. B. Hartridge, treasurer of the local Relief Committee. This is the third shipment of the kind that has been made from this city, and work will be started at once on collecting a similar sum to make a fourth shipment. Another contribution of $2 was also received today from a friend.

Of all the appeals being made for the Belgians, there are none which have such a real heart interest as those for milk for the babies. The invading Germans have taken possession of all the cattle in the little country, and the mothers have been pressed in every way to get milk to keep the 30,000 babies alive, who have been born since the war started. Hundreds of generous Plainfielders have come forward with small subscriptions for the cause, and especially in the case of the shipment just ordered has the movement been one of all the people. Each dollar contributed keeps two babies alive for a month and goes half way toward caring for a third. Each shipment provides substance for 750 babies for a month, and the Plainfield committee hopes to make a shipment at least on the average of twelve times a year until the need is no longer there.

Contributions of any amount from five cents up will be welcomed. The Daily Press will acknowledge them and forward the money to the proper authorities.

TO INCREASE THE FORCE ON BORO SEWER WORK

A large number of extra Italian laborers will be put on the sewer work in the borough this week. The supervising engineer wants to make the best of this good weather and get all the work done possible. The work is now in operation on Greenbrook road and Mountain and Norwood avenues.

There are many laborers in the borough who could get work, but want more money, so willing help from outside may be used.

MAY PUT BAN ON SHINGLE ROOFING

Agitation for Amendment to Building Ordinance to Be Considered.

FAVORED BY DOANE

Says "It Will Be the Best Thing in the World for the Community"—Non-inflammable Roofing Urged—Will Last Longer.

As a result of a communication received by Mayor Leighton Calkins from a local taxpayer, advocating an amendment to the building ordinance which in time would do away with all shingle roofs in Plainfield, an agitation has developed and it is not unlikely that the matter will be brought to the attention of the Common Council in the near future. It is argued that shingle roofs are a menace to surrounding property, being easily susceptible to fire and likely to cause big conflagrations.

In commenting on the proposition to a Daily Press reporter the Mayor said: "While I have not had an opportunity to give the matter a thorough investigation as yet I can see a number of advantages and also a number of disadvantages. I have turned the matter over to Fire Chief Doane and other developments will probably result. It is a well-known fact that non-inflammable roofing is a safeguard against property.

"Fire experts have told me that sparks from wooden-roofed houses under favorable conditions will be carried sometimes a mile on a horizontal plane. If one of these sparks happens to light on another shingle roof there is a possibility of a second blaze being started. The spread of the big Salem fire in Salem (Mass.), I have been told, was due largely to the fact that the houses in the fire-menaced area had shingle roofs. Sparks from the section in which the blaze had its origin were scattered about a wide radius and caused many other dwellings to go up in flames.

"On the other hand there are some styles of architecture that demand shingle roofing to produce the proper effect. There are a large number of such residences in Plainfield and this fact will also have to come in for due consideration."

When approached on the subject and asked for his opinion both from a fire and building standpoint, Fire Chief T. O. Doane, who is also the local building inspector, said:

"I think it is one of the best things that could be done for the people of Plainfield. Shingle roofs are practically a thing of the past. They are not only a danger in case of fire, being susceptible to sparks and inflammable at all times, but deterioriate much quicker than any kind of spark-proof roof. The difference in the original cost between shingles and slate, for instance, is so small that it is hardly worth considering, yet the shingle roof put on nowadays will never last more than sixteen years and generally has to be renewed in eight.

"Those constructed of slate and other non-inflammable materials frequently last thirty and forty years with only slight repairs. The proposition to do away with shingle roofs should be backed up by every citizen who has the safety of Plainfield at heart. The time to do it is now and not later on after a conflagration has destroyed a good portion of the thickly populated sections."

MUSIC WILL BE A FEATURE OF ANNUAL CHARITY BALL

Lovers of good dance music will have an unusual opportunity to listen to the rendition of an excellent program at the Charity Ball to be held in Columbus Auditorium Easter Monday evening. Elaborate preparations have been made for the event and it is expected that it will surpass any of the previous successes of this nature.

Featuring the musical portion of the program will be a quartet of players and an orchestra under the personal supervision of Fred VanEps, of this city, one of the brothers in the well-known musical firm that has played at a large number of social affairs in Plainfield. Dancing will of course be the leading feature but a number of other attractions are now under consideration.

FRANK SAFFORD'S IDENTITY SOUGHT

Postoffice Inspectors Searching for Former Kensington Hotel Clerk.

IS THIS HIS WIFE?

Woman in Watervliet, N. Y., Asks for Information Concerning Him—Promise of Confession in Rae Tanzer's Civil Suit Denied.

New York, March 29.—Miss Rae Tanzer, plaintiff in the $50,000 breach of promise suit against Jas. W. Osborne, and who is herself out on bond charged with conspiracy, appeared at the Federal building today with Herald A. Spielberg, who, it is learned, has taken over her defense. It was reported this morning that Miss Tanzier would subscribe to a confession admitting the conspiracy charge and involving other persons. Her counsel denied this both the principal in the case and her attorney entered into conference with District Attorney Marshall and interesting developments are anticipated.

There are now three important witnesses whose whereabouts are not generally known, one of them being Frank Safford, formerly clerk in Hotel Kensington, Plainfield. Samuel Hershenstein, assistant District Attorney, admitted yesterday that government searchers have sought in vain since last Thursday to locate Safford who identified James W. Osborne as the man who registered with Miss Tanzier last October as "O. Osborne" at the Plainfield hostelry. After giving his testimony last Thursday he was turned loose, according to the girl's attorneys. On the stand he gave his home as Bound Brook, but added that he had been stopping at Greenwood Lake. Postoffice inspectors have not been able to locate him.

Part of the letter written by the mysterious Oliver Osborne, whose present whereabouts are also unknown, to James W. Osborne two days after Miss Tanzer filed her civil suit was made public yesterday. The following is said about the alleged trip of Miss Tanzer and James Osborne to Plainfield: "And about the trip to another State. We (Oliver Osborne and Rae Tanzer) went to Plainfield one Sunday afternoon and stayed in a hotel right near the station. * * *"

The New York police yesterday received a letter from a Mrs. Frank Safford, of Watervliet, N. Y., asking for information concerning the identity of the Safford who testified in the Tanzer hearing. She says she thinks the Safford is her husband and wants to know where she could locate him. Inasmuch as only meager details were available the New York authorities were unable to assist her materially.

An interview by a Daily Press reporter this morning with William Kitchen, proprietor of the Kensington Hotel, where Safford was employed as a clerk, led to the information that he had been there several months. When engaged he was a travelling salesman for a drug firm and claimed to have hailed originally from the upper part of New York State. He represented himself here as a widower, saying that his wife had been dead for twenty-one years. According to his own statement it was customary for him to make annual trips to a place near Saratoga Springs, N. Y., where he says he attended a requiem mass said over the grave of his departed wife. Whether or not the woman who wrote from Watervliet is any relation of his or not could not be ascertained.

Michael Watson, of Grant avenue, was called to New York as a witness in the hearing Saturday, it being alleged that James W. Osborne, or the one said to have been in Plainfield had requested him to ascertain certain information about real estate.

TROUBLE AWAITS MEN IN MISHAP

Investigation Following Auto Collision Reveals Serious Complications.

FOUR SLIGHTLY INJURED

Investigation by the State Department of Motor Vehicles and the arrest of at least one of the participants will be the result of a serious accident that occurred on West Seventh street, just west of the city line, at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Adam Stutz, a farmer living near Samptown, was driving through West Seventh street in the direction of New Market when an automobile owned and driven by John Thornton, of South Plainfield, crashed into his vehicle. The auto was travelling on West Seventh street in an easterly direction and the collision came with a terrific impact.

Stutz was hurled from the lighter vehicle and sustained bad bruises about the head and body and a severely wrenched back. After hitting the wagon the machine continued at a speedy clip a distance of 200 feet through a field, its wild flight being brought to an abrupt stop when it struck a ditch and turned turtle.

Joe Delaney and George Bradley, who were in the car with Thornton, were thrown out, both sustaining minor bruises and cuts. Thornton was also slightly injured.

News of the mixup reached the local police soon after it happened and Chief Kiely dispatched Sergeant Higgins to the scene to assist the Middlesex county authorities. When the local officer arrived on the scene there were no signs of activity on the part of the police in the other county and it was apparent that nothing was being done to ascertain the responsibility for the collision.

Higgins reported after his investigation "that Thornton, the owner of the machine, had no driver's license; that he was under the influence of liquor while driving the car, and that the automobile displayed no license tag."

Consequently Chief Kiely got into communication with the State Department of Motor Vehicles and State Supervisor Job Lippincott immediately instituted an investigation for the State. In the event that it can be proven that Thornton was intoxicated it will go hard with him. The State penalty offers no alternative other than a jail sentence for driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor and an additional charge of operating a car without the necessary licenses will also probably be pressed.

Some damage was done to the wagon and automobile, but the injuries received by those who figured in the crash were not of a serious nature. It is not known whether Stutz is planning to prosecute the automobilist or not.

FOUR HUSKIES AFTER POLICE FORCE JOBS

Men to Appear Before Councilmanic Board Tonight and Two May Be Named.

Announcement was made today by Mayor Leighton Calkins that the list of twelve candidates who took the examinations for the vacancy on the local police force occasioned by the retirement of Patrolman Nicholas Meyers, had simmered down to four and these will appear before the Councilmanic Police Board at a meeting tonight. They are Raymond Strayer, Joseph Dunlap, Samuel Kriney and John Wirth.

Dunlap was formerly a special officer in the local department, but resigned to enter another line of work in 1906. Strayer has an honorable discharge from the U. S. Navy. These men all obtained good percentages in the competitive physical, mental and medical examinations and any of the four would make an excellent addition to the force of bluecoats in Plainfield. While but one vacancy has been announced it is understood that the Police Board is considering the appointment of two at this time, the material at hand making it imperative to bring the force up to the standard number needed.

DEATH OF INFANT DAUGHTER.

Jennie, the two months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Frazee, of South avenue, Fanwood, died at the parents home Saturday night. The funeral will be held at the parents' residence tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock and will be in charge of Rev. Birney Hudson, of the Park Avenue Baptist church. Burial will be at Metuchen.

WANT AMENDMENT TO FIRE ORDINANCE

Proposed Measure Will Prohibit Burning of Papers on Private Property.

In response to a communication received from Joseph W. Gavett, a West Front street business man, Mayor Leighton Calkins has taken up with the councilmanic fire committee, Fire Chief T. O. Doane and Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed, the advisability of drawing an amendment to the local fire ordinance making it compulsory to burn papers and other refuse in wire or metal "crematories." It is cited that papers burned in the open on windy days menace surrounding property.

In an interview with a Daily Press reporter, this morning, Mayor Calkins stated that he was personally in favor of the measure and that he had interviewed Chairman Abiel D. Edgar, of the councilmanic fire committee, and Fire Chief Doane on the subject. According to the Mayor, Chief Doane is a firm believer in the proposition and has advocated that the new legislation be made as binding as possible.

Heretofore householders have been allowed to burn papers in their back yard in whatever way they may see fit, but burning refuse in the gutter has been tabooed. When the papers are heaped in a yard minus a burning receptacle they are likely to be blown "to the four corners of the globe" and this results in an untidy condition existing in the immediate vicinity of where the fire was started. The possibility of flying papers setting fire to surrounding property is also one worthy of consideration.

Upon the recommendation of Chief Doane and Councilman Edgar the Mayor will take up the matter of drawing an amendment with the corporation counsel and it will be presented to the Common Council, probably at the April meeting.

JAIL STARVING MAN FOR SLAYING RABBIT

Without Work and Money Foreigner Killed Animal For Food Purposes.

Because he killed a wild rabbit to save himself from starvation, Jasper Svarka, a Far Hills farmhand, is now serving thirty days in the Somerset county jail at Somerville. Without employment and consequently without funds with which to buy the "staff of life," the prisoner, who is twenty-four years of age, saw a good-sized rabbit near Far Hills and he hurled a stone at it. His aim was good and the bunny fell dead.

Svarka picked up the animal and was carrying it under his arm when Special Game Warden Charles Meyers espied him. He admitted that he had killed the rabbit, and also admitted knowing that it was the "closed season" for this game, adding that he wanted food.

The game warden arraigned Svarka before Justice Lane at Far Hills who, when the circumstances were related to him, sentenced Svarka to pay a fine of $22.35. The prisoner said he did not have any money to pay the fine and was sent to jail for thirty days, being brought to Somerville yesterday.

Last November the public became incensed over a similar decision handed down by Justice of the Peace Snape, in the North Plainfield police court. He sentenced Oscar Phillipson, a borough boy, to serve ninety days in the Somerville jail for having killed a rabbit which was destroying his mother's garden truck.

Citizens in this city and North Plainfield started a petition after the youth had been sent to jail and lawyers took the case up with Governor Fielder. An investigation resulted in his release from custody.

FUNERAL SERVICE OF ROBERT F. BOGARDUS

Many Mourners Attend Obsequies Held at the Late Home.

The funeral of Robert F. Bogardus, who was one of Dunellen's most highly respected citizens was held at his late home, 321 New Market road, Saturday night at 8 o'clock. The service was in charge of Rev. Ernest R. Brown, pastor of the Dunellen Presbyterian church, of which the deceased had long been an elder, assisted by Rev. Dr. N. H. Van Arsdale, editor-in-chief of the Christian Intelligencer, the publication with which Mr. Bogardus had been connected for thirty-five years as business manager.

Mr. Brown read Scripture and offered prayer and Dr. Van Arsdale spoke in an eulogistic vein, telling of the fine Christian life of Mr. Bogardus that had been revealed to him throughout their intimate friendship of many years. The departed friend, Dr. Van Arsdale said, was one who made religion his business and business his religion. He was a great believer in prayer and the whole tenor of his life was that of a man who believed in the principles of the Golden Rule. During the service Miss Beatrice Cameron of the Presbyterian choir sang "Shine for Jesus," Mr. Bogardus' favorite hymn. Arthur S. Hawley, a nephew of the deceased, gave an additional solo, "Lead Kindly Light." The large attendance included the membership of the Presbyterian Bible class, which came in a body.

The many handsome floral tributes included a wreath from the Dunellen Common Council, a pillar from the Sunday-school class, a pillar from the Sunday-school, a spray from the church elders, a spray from editor of the Christian Intelligencer and many other handsome pieces from friends and relatives. Burial was made in Hillside cemetery, yesterday, morning, members of the Bible class being bearers. They were Ralph, Vernon and Alton Eckert, Benjamin Dodwell, Theadore Day, Jr., and Albert Ritterbusch.

The neighbors all turned out to render such assistance as possible, but all that they could do was to help carry the furniture from the blazing structure. The loss will aggregate several thousand dollars. Only partial insurance was carried.

The woods near the home of Edward H. Cooper at Mt. Bethel was on fire on Saturday and it was necessary to summon the Mt. Bethel Volunteer Fire Company to extinguish the blaze.

THE ALLIES' RESERVES.

With Italy soon to enter the war and the people of Greece and Roumania clamoring for their governments to participate, the German boast that they are fighting the world gives promise of becoming true. With the exception of the United States, which Americans hope will keep out of the strife, certainly every great nation gives promise of becoming a participant.

How Germany can expect to eventually win is inexplainable. The resources of all the great nations opposing her, in both money and men are almost limitless, while she has nothing to fall back upon except the support which her own people can give. Ruhssia is the only nation which has no great colonial possessions to draw upon, but her population in Europe alone has been estimated at over 125,000,000. England has all her great colonies to draw on, and it is not improbable that Japan will eventually send an army to Europe. France has brought recruits from northern Africa, and can bring many more.

As early as the days of Nebuchadnezzar foreigners were hired by the rulers of more or less decadent nations to do the larger part of the fighting in their wars, the brave and vigorous Greeks being often thus employed by the monarchs of Asia Minor. A practice that was common in ancient times has been heard of less often in our own period, though all colonizing nations recruit native troops for employment on their own soil. After the Franco-Prussian war Lord Beaconfield is said to have threatened the Berlin Conference with native soldiers brought from India via the Suez Canal and thus prevented the adoption of proposed arbitrary measures. But until recently Europe has seen no soldiers other than white since Charles Martel turned back the Moorish tide at Tours.

Now that England has brought a few dark soldiers from India and France a few more from North Africa to the theatre of the present European war, a policy rare in modern times but as old as Nebuchadnezzar and Cyrus may be said to be already adopted, and its further pursuit on a large scale would seem to depend solely on the duration of the war and the urgency of the apparent need.

Certainly it does not seem possible, with all these resources, that the struggle can last long or that there can be any question about the final outcome.

JAMES CREELMAN.

James Creelman's funeral in New York city a few days ago brings back to mind the occasion of his tragic death in Berlin on Lincoln's Birthday.

All who knew Mr. Creelman as a man loved him for his excellent qualities. Those who him as a writer and a public servant admired him for his straight forwardness and convincing style. As a war correspondent no man was his equal. All throughout a brilliant career he showed remarkable energy and insight. His courage was undeniable. His moral sense of duty was pronounced.

After walking to New York from Montreal years ago he started in the newspaper game and through perseverance he worked to the top of his profession. He defined his opportunities and took advantage of them. With Mr. Creelman's death the world not only lost its most famous war correspondent but also a strong man of ability and integrity—the noblest work of God.

Commenting on the neglect of duty shown by members of the Legislature at different times this season the Trenton Times says that "a more neglectful and incompetent Legislature than this year's has thus far shown itself to be is hardly possible. It lacks not only ability, but leadership, also." If that last statement is directed at William N. Runyon, the majority leader, the Times is mighty unfair. Mr. Runyon is head and shoulders above any other man in the House in ability, honesty and intelligence. If the men will not respond to his leadership it is the people's fault for electing that type to the Legislature.

Plainfield people are to be given an unusual opportunity on Wednesday night, when Dean Howard McClenahan, of Princeton University, and Captain John F. Lucey are to tell of the work being done by Americans in Belgium for the refugees. Both men will bring first-hand information about conditions in Albert's kingdom, and they will be well worth hearing. It is to be hoped that the High School Auditorium will not hold all the people who try to attend the meeting.

Justice Kalisch of the Supreme Court has handed down an opinion in the case of the free lighting of the Plainfield city buildings. If his ruling is sustained it means that hereafter the Legislature may abrogate any contract which may be made. It is a remarkable situation, and endangers the future action of every Council in it's dealing with public utility companies.

PICTURES CHIRST'S TRIUMPHAL ENTRY

Palm Sunday was observed at the Park Avenue Baptist church yesterday morning with a sermon by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, on "Christ's Triumphal Entry into Jerusalem." The entire elementary department marched into the church singing "The Children's Hosanna," Miss Marjorie Robinson, of the choir, taking the solo. At the close of his sermon, Dr. Hudson asked all to come forward who desired to start upon the Christian life, or who wished to re-consecrate themselves to the Lord. A large number responded. The pastor then asked the entire congregation to come as near the pulpit as possible, and all united in singing "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

In the evening, Dr. Hudson gave a number of stereopticon views bearing upon Christ's Triumphal Entry into Jerusalem, also pictures of several scenes in the Passion Play. During the discourse several hymns were thrown upon the screen, and sung by the congregation. Raymond Manley sang "The Palms" with pleasing effect. Anthems appropriate to the day were rendered by the choir at both services.

Passion Week will be observed every evening, with the exception of Friday and Saturday, by a special service at which Dr. Hudson will give a short talk illustrated by stereopticon pictures. These services will be of unusual interest because of their bearing upon the last week of the life of Christ. The first one of these services will be held this evening and a cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend. Next Sunday evening the ordinance of baptism will be administered to several candidates.

NOTED BIBLE SCHOOL WORKER SPEAKS HERE

W. C. Pearce Addresses Large Congregation at First Baptist Church.

W. C. Pearce, associate general secretary of the International Sunday-school Association and superintendent of the Organized Adult Department of that organization, addressed an unusually large congregation of worshippers at the First Baptist church yesterday morning his presence here being considered a rare privilege. Mr. Pearce's talk was filled with interesting incidents in connection with his extensive work throughout the country, all tending to show the remarkable increase in adult Bible class work. He said that the net increase from 1905 to 1914 had been about four and a half millions.

"The slogan today is 'mobilize the forces,'" said Mr. Pearce, "and all along the line greater effort than ever before is being made to enlist the people in Bible-school work. Within the next decade America will have her greatest opportunity for Christian work."

Mr. Pearce then spoke on three characteristics of the adult class work, fraternity, the Word of God and evangelism, upon each of which he dwelt at some length. He emphasized the great fraternal spirit to be found among the members of the adult classes, the amount of time devoted to the study of the Bible and the evangelistic spirit that is to be found among the large army of Christian workers.

"If you boys and girls go bad," said Mr. Pearce, "you are a defeated people for therein lies the hope of the nation. We must keep hold of our boys and girls." Mr. Pearce deplored the fact that so many people are being swept away by Pastor Russell, whom he characterized as a moral reprobate. In conclusion Mr. Pearce told a number of stories, some very pathetic, showing the power of Christ and how many men have been won to him through the organized Bible school work.

SUBSTITUTE 'PHONES FOR WAITRESSES

The Latest Innovation to Be Introduced at The Ritz Emporium.

The substitution of telephones for waitresses is the latest innovation at The Ritz. The idea is so strictly up-to-date that this store is the only one in the entire district covered by the New York Telephone Company that has made use of it but it will undoubtedly be a feature in many business establishments in the near future.

The local office of the telephone concern has placed what is known as a "forty line" exchange at The Ritz store. The cashier's desk has a private exchange connected with the main central by two trunks and having direct communication with twenty-seven telephones located on as many tables in The Ritz ice cream parlor and dining room. A simple printed code stands beside each instrument and the customer, after making himself comfortable, thinks of what he wants, lifts the receiver from the hook and gives the order to the cashier. From the latter the message is transmitted to the serving room and the article required is brought out.

By the use of the telephones, the interference with prompt service caused by customers debating as to what is wanted and holding a waitress idle for sometimes as long as five minutes, is made impossible. In addition, a business man can make any calls from his table or can be called in the same manner.

The idea of the complete table telephone service originated with John J. Carty, salesmanager of the Plainfield exchange. The fact that it was strictly adopted by Stephen Haff, the hustling manager of The Ritz, demonstrates the business of acumen he possesses. It is probable that the plan will be almost universally adopted in the course of a year or so.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

ORGANIZED CHARITY CALUMNATED.

It is the most lamentable that at just this time, when the city (New York), is in such need as it has not often been before for the services which can be rendered by, and only by, what has come to be known as "organized" charity, the great agencies wich deal with poverty successfully because scientifically should be subjected to an attack which, in truth, should probably be ascribed merely ignorant, though the temptation to call it vicious is almost irresistible.

Nobody who has given to the problems of "relief" even a little of intelligent study can still believe in the utility of the giving that considers destitution as a thing to be met with doles of bread or coal or clothing, draws a hard and fast line between the "deserving" and the "undeserving," and has for its one more than momentary effect that of producing in the unenlightened giver the sense of merit acquired—by himself. "Organized" charity also recognizes the necessity to distribute alms in certain cases, but its ultimate objects are the uplifting of the individual, by restoring their capacity for self support and the gradual removal of the conditions that produce helplessness and dependence.

For this it is called "cold," and the expenditures made in the performance of the higher and more important work are criticized as a diversion of funds from their proper and intended purpose. Investigation would convince these critics that of the money spent by the organized charities, the part devoted to the much-denounced "administration" accomplishes most for "the poor," and that the remainder goes merely as a concession to an existing situation which in time, it is hoped, will be abolished.

It is easy to ridicule or denounce the keeping of records and the payment of salaries to society officials and visitors. It is not easy—it is impossible—to prove the records are useless, that the salaries are not as a rule well earned by hard, efficient work, or that the trained subordinates in "the field" are not really restoring to social efficiency great numbers of those whom mere giving would but "tide over into next week's misery"—or next day's.—From New York Times Editorial.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

IT IS TIME TO PRAY

PLAINFIELDERS OUGHT TO CONSIDER PLAINFIELD FIRST

A city must progress, it must be guided by its optimists, and must approve of enterprises; it must value constructive men more than destructive ones, must have a clear idea of the demands of the future city growth and live up to its ideals.

One of the most essential elements of progress is enterprise. The enterprise of the business men of Plainfield is dependent upon the support of the residents of the city. In the same measure that they co-operate in the support of Plainfield's stores they will share in the prosperity that will be the result of this co-operative effort.

The duty of Plainfield's people to themselves and their obligation to their city, calls upon them to PATRONIZE PLAINFIELD MERCHANTS, CRAFTSMEN and MECHANICS.

They are not asked to make any sacrifice, either of money or quality in order to do this. Rather are they presented with the opportunity of making financial saving and gaining at advantage in quality of the goods purchased.

The old fallacy that it is now necessary to go to the stores of other cities in order to get the best goods at the lowest prices has long been dissipated.

The merchants of Plainfield have proved conclusively that the stores of Plainfield are not surpassed in any respect by mail order houses of the stores of larger cities and that the question of buying outside the city is attended by loss to the purchaser in more ways than one.

The man who has home pride enough to PATRONIZE PLAINFIELD MERCHANTS, CRAFTSMEN and MECHANICS, gets the most for his money. It is easy to be convinced of this fact by visiting local stores. The advertising columns of the local papers will direct you to the most advantageous buying. PATRONIZE PLAINFIELD MERCHANTS, CRAFTSMEN and MECHANICS.

SUBSCRIPTION RACE FOR SPECIAL PIRZES TO END THIS WEEK

Help Your Favorite Candidate by Sending Subscriptions Direct to Press Office—Five Days More to Help "Your Girl" Win.

First Prize.
$100.00 Diamond Solitaire Ring.

Second Prize.
Merchandise Certificate, good for $25.00 in trade at Woodhull & Martin Co., 103 East Front street, and $15.00 in gold.

Third Prize.
$35.00 Solid Gold Wrist Watch.

Look over the vote standing of candidates today and see where your favorite stands, glance at the vote showing the gains made for the Special Prizes and see where "She" stands in the race for the three extra prizes. If you are not entirely satisfied that your candidate is sure to come out at the head of the list when the votes are counted up, better send in your subscription, for the limit at once and add that many votes to her score.

There are only five days left of the Special Prize Contest, and each day means a great deal to every candidate and every one is on the hustle collecting every paid-in-advance subscription possible. Time will not permit the candidates to get to everyone who has promised a subscription and make the collection, so we are offering a timely suggestion. Suppose you send your paid-in-advance subscription direct to the Press office with instructions to credit the votes you are entitled to, to a certain candidate. This will save her a trip to see you and will add just so much time for her to look up new people. Each candidate will need every available vote and the public is assured that a subscription sent direct to this office will be doubly appreciated by the candidate for whom the votes are to be issued.

Promises Outstanding.

Just figure out how many people a candidate would be obliged to call on personally if they like yourself, said when first asked: "I will give you my subscription later if you need it." Suppose everyone said that. Can you imagine how many calls it would mean. Candidates report almost daily that if they could only realize on the promises they would feel almost sure of winning. Are you one of these promises? Make good your promise and now that the time is so short, send it direct to this office and the credit will be given to the candidate just the same as though she had to hunt you out and get it herself. She will also receive a receipt showing the full transaction—the number of votes and from whom they came. Do this for the candidate's sake—Do It Now.

Just Work.

Exhilarated by the intense excitement, interested in the extreme, the contestants work ardously, eagerly and expectantly.

The stories that have emanated from some unknown sources are more or less exaggerated, and the contestants are urged to place no credence in them whatever. If a certain one has several thousand votes in reserve she is not going to tell it. So be on your guard at all times. Say nothing—listen to nothing—just work. Another favorite rumor, which is invariably exaggerated or absolutely false, is that some candidate has thirty to forty people working for her. The winners of the contests are the ones who depend upon themselves and not their friends. The old saying, If you want a thing done, do it yourself, applies here.

There are some who are not doing much in the voting game that have assured others that they will be there when the vote is cast, and we surmise from reports issued from their headquarters, that the assertions are all right. Look out for the silent candidates. They are dangerous. "Still water runs deep."

Only Five Days More.

But five days remain before the special contest will be won or lost. Let the candidates and all their friends now rally anew to the fray, as all Plainfield and surrounding territory is watching the progress of the race, and is waiting to applaud the winners for their popularity and enterprise.

Word of Caution.

Don't stop to think just work. This is a special contest within a contest, as it were—in which you can win a prize. You can rest after it is all over. Rest and feel better for having WON.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

With the exception of this afternoon and tonight, when Fay Foster's burlesque company holds the boards, moving pictures with illustrated songs as an added feature will be the attraction at the Plainfield Theatre all the week. The announcements include the following: Tuesday, "The Ghost Breakers." Wednesday and Thursday, "Quo Vadis." Friday and Saturday, "The Sign of the Cross."

The Plainfield Theatre has the exclusive contract in this city for the first "run" of Paramount pictures and patrons of this popular playhouse are assured of receiving all that is strictly up-to-date. Beside the attractions named above, the first installment of the new detective serial, "The Black Box," will be shown tomorrow. On Wednesday and Saturday night and Saturday matinee, Edward Harding, Jr., a Plainfield boy, renders the latest popular song hits, illustrated by beautiful slides. This is the only house in the city which includes this novelty in its program and the fact [illegible] a greeted by large [illegible] proves the wisdom of [illegible].

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Bret Harte's M'liss," a five-part offering with Howard Estabrook and Barbara Tennant, will be presented at Proctor's Theatre today and tomorrow as the feature photo-play portion of the program. Except, perhaps, by confirmed students of the late Mr. Harte, "M'liss," one of the best of his many stories, is not well remembered. He wrote it as far back as 1871, long before he had made anything of a name as a writer.

"M'liss" is a Nevada gold-field story, and the girl, "M'liss," a contraction for Melissa, is the whole thing of that story. Bret Harte never drew a more fascinating picture in words, than that of this wild child, daughter of Smith, the ruined prospector of Smith's Pocket. Wilful, impulsive, cunning, in love with her schoolmaster, hating a second girl rival, hating also the parson of the camp, shrewd, loyal, devoted, selfish and lovable, "M'liss" is an ideal character for the screen.

"Smith's Pocket," a deserted claim, suddenly becomes rich and "M'liss" is by way of becoming an heiress. Howard Estabrook plays "Gray" and Barbara Tennant, "M'liss." The photo-play for its producer, O. A. C. Lund, who made "The Market Women" and "When Broadway Was a Trail," and he has included in it a wealth of picturesque settings illustrative of American and Mexican life. The entire action is placed in both countries and the full advantages of "Lund" in her progress from the primitive to civilization and wealth are immensely varied and exciting.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

This week's program at the U. S. Astor Theatre opens with William Farnum in "The Gilded Fool" for today and tomorrow, and this notable attraction will be followed on Wednesday and Thursday by the great New York success, "The Thief," featuring Dorothy Donnelly in her most powerful screen role to date. Still another special feature of the week's bill is Charles Chaplin, the world's greatest comedian, who will be a one-day drawing card today, in addition to the Farnum picture, in the two-reel comedy, "In the Park."

"The Gilded Fool" is played by one of the strongest companies ever presented, Mr. Farnum's leading lady being charming Maude Gilbert, who supports Robert Hilliard and William Gillette in their greatest stage successes, and some of the other members being Margaret Vale, niece of Woodrow Wilson, Charles Guthrie and Harry Spingler.

The play is remarkable for its dramatic power and compelling forces, its chief motif being an appeal combination of love, art, finance and frivolous life on the "Great White Way." The hero is a young man, a typical "gilded fool," whose wealth enables him to waste the hours of day and night alike in extravagant idleness. Meeting the only girl who has ever appealed to his nobler nature, the "fool" is aroused to a sense of his responsibility to life, and in a determined effort he strikes out to win back his wasted manhood. The climax comes after a fiercely fought battle of finance, in which the erstwhile "gilded fool" thwarts the plans of a thieving rascal and saves his sweetheart's father from ruin.

"The Thief" is another powerful drama, but it is a woman who plays the part of the fool in it, running the risk of her character in her mad ambition to win a man whose admiration for elegant dress in a woman blinds him to other and higher considerations of character and sentiment. Robbing her most intimate friends of large sums of money to buy the clothes she feels she must have to hold the man she loves and whom she does win, the heroine involves a younger man who adores her in her guilt, and nearly wrecks his life by permitting him to assume the blame for her fault. "The Thief" is a play with a moral that strikes home with [illegible] force in this day of extravagance and luxury of dress.

RESULT OF TRENTON GAME LEAVES LITTLE DOUBT AS TO STATE FEMININE CHAMPION

Plainfield Y. W. C. A. Girls' Victory a Decisive One—Good Guarding Feature of Both Teams' Work — Fact That Trentonians Tallied One Point More in Previous Contest is of Little Consequence Inasmuch as Trenton Refused to Play Rubber Engagement.

The Trenton Y. W. C. A. girls' expectations of repeating their victory of several weeks ago over the local Y. W. C. A. girls, met with a rude jolt Saturday night, at the Columbus Club, when the Plainfield quintet ran up a score of 21 to the visitors' 13 points.

Columbus Club never had a more enthusiastic crown of rooters than was housed in it Saturday night. On the side lines were the feminine supporters of the association while on the stage a large squad of male cohorts kept up a constant round of yells and songs. Their "Plainfield Will Win Tonight" was especially good and all predictions were fulfilled.

The battle between "Dot" Hayes, of Trenton, and Clara Smith, the Plainfield guard, was worth going miles to see. The former's dodging, swift passing and deadly aim, gave the Plainfield guard a chance to show her adeptness at her position. Miss Smith held the versatile Trenton forward to three field goals, the only ones made during the contest.

A jinx seemed to be lurking in every throw Miss Helen Hummel made, the sphere continually rolling around the edge of the basket and toppling off, thus the star Plainfield forward was kept to a solitary foul goal during the initial period, while her sister, Miss Ida Hummel, caged four beautiful field goals from difficult angles. "Dot" Hayes did the only scoring for the visitors during this period, caging one goal and three fouls.

The second half was played without lines and the Trentonians familiarity with this phase of the indoor sport was revealed in their lightning speed in teamwork. "Dot" Hayes again tallied two field goals and a brace of fouls while Miss A. Balderston caged two fifteen foot goals. Miss Helen Hummel got her eye on the basket during this session and numbered 6 fouls and two goals, while Miss Ellen Doughty caged a pretty field goal.

Much credit is due every player on the two quintets, each having performed her part to perfection.

Johnson is training hard in Cuba for his fistic encounter with Jess Willard at Havana. There is a constant buzz of activity about his camp and Jack is keeping his sparring partners on the move all the time. Long daily hikes, vigorous sparring with as many as can stand up and take punishment, and plenty of gymnastic exercise make up his present training schedule.

FEMININE POINTERS BY A FEMININE "POINTRESS"

Conclusive evidence of the superiority of the Plainfield feminine basketball representatives was exemplified on the Columbus Club court Saturday night, the Y. W. C. A squad going to the tune in a combat that was virtually a State title match. Trenton, the rival aspirant for titular honors, was noticeably outclassed in every phase of the national pastime. The Queen Citeites' supremacy in caging baskets, manipulating the sphere and guarding opponents was exhibited to a degree of onesidedness that left little room for dispute.

Trenton's attitude following the game was only another indication of the acceptance of the female a real champions. It is only too true that Plainfield was defeated in the first game at Trenton. But that decision was hung up by the narrowest of one-point margins (if you can conceive of such a verdict) and the difference in Saturday night's scores gave ample room for comparison. Trenton refused to play a third game "under any conditions," hence the Plainfielders' right to assume the crown.

Popularity of male and feminine competition is beginning to assert itself in this section. Announcement has been made of a combat between the boys' and girls' forces of the Plainfield High School. The rules of the match compel the boys to sport hobble skirts and carry one arm in a sling. Under these handicaps the girls think their male rivals will be formidable foes.

A challenge has been sent by the manager of the Plainfield Five to the champion North Plainfield High School interscholastic cup bearers. Although no response has trickled across the brook as yet it is one safe bet that the suggested three game series would be an interesting one from both angles. Possibly a mug could be 'dug-up" to lend spice to the fight.

The basketball season is far from being at an end, according to certain managers. Some interesting encounters have been slated for a few weeks to come and the enthusiasm has as yet given no indications of being on the wane.

"CURLEY" PLAYED, BUT NO SIGNIFICANCE IS ATTACHED

The Colorado School of Mines basketball team, of which, 'Curly' Taylor, of the borough, is a member, has just finished the worst season in the history of the institution. Not one game was won and the big contest of the season, with Bowider, was a walk away. This is "Curly's" second year playing and the first season the team made a fine record. Three of the star players were lost by graduation which left only two from which to start a team.

Taylor played forward and was among the high scorers of the team. Several of the games played were very close, only a few points separating the scores, but the School of Mines' boys always seemed to have the short end. Basketball togs have been laid aside and the borough boy is practicing baseball now. He played right field on the nine last season and will undoubtedly get a position this year.

NEW YORK A. C. MEN IN HIGH SCHOOL POOL

Swimmers of National Repute Will Give Exhibition Tomorrow Night.

Lovers of aquatic sports will be given an opportunity to witness the greatest exhibition of swimming ever staged in this vicinity tomorrow night when Jim Reilly, captain of the New York A. C. swimming team, and a squad of his colleagues will take a plunge in the new Plainfield High School tank. Included in the party will be Reilly's younger brother, Charthwaite, Parks and a number of other swimmers who have national reputations as speed kings.

The exhibition will include diving, speed swimming and demonstrations of various modern strokes used by experts. The men will also compete in several races against each other.

Interest in swimming is rife among the Plainfield High School athletes at the present time and the formation of a team is under consideration.

ON HIGH BRIDGE CARD.

Both the Plainfield and North Plainfield High School baseball teams appear on the schedule of the High Bridge High School which was issued by the manager Saturday. High Bridge is due at Parker Field on April 12 and no return game has yet been arranged with the Ninth street nine. North Plainfield will entertain the High Bridge team on May 5 at Hyde Oval and will play a return game on May 26. Mr. Phelps, who is principal of the High Bridge School, will undoubtedly make the trip to this city with his team. He came last year and saw his former pupils licked by the High Bridge aggregation.

P. H. S. TRACK PRACTICE.

Coach Jack Fritts, of the Plainfield High School track team, has issued a call for the first track team practice of the outdoor season to be held at Parker Field next Friday afternoon. Active work will be served up from now on and several outdoor meets are under consideration prior to the Union county meeting on Decoration Day.

HOPE WANTS GAMES.

Manager Ernest Luthman, of the Hope Chapel baseball team, is booking games for the season and would like to hear from any fast team in this city or vicinity. Hope expects to be represented by a fast aggregation this year and wants games for Saturdays. The manager's address is 432 East Sixth street.

WILL PLAY ELIZABETH.

The Plainfield Eagles' bowling team will leave at 6:45 o'clock tomorrow night by special car for Elizabeth, where it will meet the Elizabeth T. A. B. five. A large delegation of "rooters" will accompany the local team. A large number of local T. A. B. members will also make the trip.

SWIMMERS IMPROVING.

The men's swimming class which meets Tuesday evening in the High School pool, is turning out some pretty fine swimmers. Mr. Pptch is the instructor and will make arrangements with any young men who apply for instruction.

MASONIC BOWLING.

Tyrian and Orient are booked to play on the former's alleys tonight.

SCHEDULE OF POSTPONED GAMES IN MASONIC LEAGUE

Washington will complete its series tonight, Essex will finish Friday and both Tyrian and Orient will play closing matches on April 5. Azure still has another series to bowl. Anchor, after her games with Washington tonight, will have only one left and Lafayette two. Jerusalem will have two series to play after her match with Essex Friday night.

The schedule of postponed games follows: March 29, Washington vs. Anchor; April 2, Jerusalem vs. Essex, and April 5, Tyrian vs. Orient.

TRENTON WAS ENTERTAINED BY WINNING BASKETBALLERS

Following the Plainfield-Trenton game on the Columbus Club court Saturday night the visiting players and their friends were entertained by the local Association players at the Y. W. C. A. Twenty-five were present at a reception in the Association parlors.

Prior to the departure of the losing side for Trenton every effort was made by officers of the Y. W. C. A. of this city to effect arrangements for a third match. Every offer was turned down by Trenton, however, and the defeated faction refused to meet the locals again this season under "any conditions."

LOCAL Y. M. H. A. ENTERED ON THE CENTRAL CIRCUIT

The Plainfield Y. M. H. A. baseball team will be one of the clubs identified with the Central Jersey Y. M. H. A. League this summer. At a meeting held recently a proposal was made to have three separate leagues this year instead of one as in former years. The leagues will be divided as follows: North Jersey, South Jersey and Central Jersey. In the latter, besides Plainfield, will be Somerville, Perth Amboy and New Brunswick.

There is much available material in the "Queen City" for one of the fastest nines in the league and practices will start shortly.

MASONIC LEAGUE RACE DRAWING TO A CLOSE

Tyrian Now Holds First Place in Team and Individual Records.

There are only a few changes this week in the records of the Masonic Bowling League as announced by Secretary Martin, of Elizabeth. The race between Murray and Wright is still hot and will probably be close until the finish which is only a couple of weeks off. Both of these pinners have three more games to roll, the Tyrian man having nearly two points on his opponent.

Murray's mark is 177.3 and Wright's 175.4. The Tyrian team is still five full games ahead of Orient with another match to play. That team will undoubtedly finish in first place. John H. Cose, of Anchor, leads the Plainfield pinners, with an average of 163.8. W. B. Martin holds high score record, 269. The standings follow:

Englewood Sextet Needed Three Points at the End of the Final Period.

The Plainfield High School girls' basketball team closed its schedule Saturday afternoon with a victory over the Englewood High School sextet in the local gym, the final count being 17 to 14. SERVICES FOR PALM SUNDAY ARE HELD

Palm Sunday services were held yesterday in the local Episcopal and Catholic churches, when the rectors preached sermons appropriate to the occasion and there was a distribution of palms. At Grace church, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson was in charge of the services, while at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Rev. C. H. Mallery was in charge of services there. Rev. C. H. Kues, the rector of Holy Cross church, officiated at his church and Rev. Henry Mesier, rector, was in charge of the services at St. Stephen's church.

Father B. M. Bogan, rector of St. Mary's church, preached the sermon at that church, there being services every hour from 6:30 until 11 o'clock. In the evening he preached on "The Trials and Triumphs of the Papacy." All the services were largely attended. Special Holy Week services will be held this week.

Appropriate services were conducted in St. Joseph's church yesterday in observance of Palm Sunday. Musical selections were rendered by the choir under the supervision of Miss Mary O'Coner, organist of the church, including the male and female choir singing "The Palms" at both morning services. Andrew E. Kenney read the "Passion of Our Lord" at the two morning services. The sermon was preached by Father Patrick Hart, pastor of the church. There was no procession as in former years because of no accommodations for the children. The basement is being remodeled and is expected to be completed very shortly.

Holy Thursday and Good Friday there will be a procession by the Sunday-school children at the morning services. Mass will be celebrated both days at 7:30 o'clock.

METHODISTS CONDUCT AN EVERY MEMBER CANVASS

The annual "every member" canvass of the congregation of the First Methodist church was held yesterday. Forty men of the church spent the afternoon calling on the members for annual subscriptions. The entire list of names was covered and every member of the church seen.

The forty men who did the canvassing were divided into pairs and each team had about thirty names. F. G. Crawford was in charge of the canvass.

HOLY NAME SOCIETIES GATHER AT WESTFIELD

The members of the Holy Name Society of St. Mary's church, attended the Union County Federation meeting held at Westfield, yesterday when William Young, of New York, made an address on "The Catholic Theatre Movement," which is designated to select reputable plays which can be endorsed.

There was a large delegation from all parts of the county, Plainfield being well represented. Daniel J. Courain, of this city, is the president of the county federation and presided at yesterday's meeting.

PERSONAL.

Miss Mary E. Robinson, of Madison avenue, is registered at Hahneman Hall Sanatorium, Atlantic City.

Frank Cullen, a student in Holy Cross College, Worcester, Mass., is spending his Easter vacation in this city visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cullen, of South Second street.

Edward Gawler, formerly of Plainfield, but now of Newark, has accepted a position at the Saurer Motor Company plant.

Patrolman and Mrs. Tobias Nolan, who have been living at 634 East Third street, will move on April 1 to the residence at 961 Arlington avenue, which Mr. Nolan purchased two years ago.

T. Hazelwood Kellar, of West Front street, who recently underwent an operation at Muhlenberg Hospital for appendicitis and was subsequently seriously ill, is reported as being greatly improved and being well on the road to recovery.

Mrs. V. W. Nash, Jr., of North avenue, has returned home after a ten days' visit with her mother, Mrs. M. A. Furman, of Rockaway.

ATTENDED VESPER SERVICE.

The fourth degree members of Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, this city, went to Cranford last night to attend the first annual vesper service of the Knights of Columbus, that place. The Plainfield members were in charge of Grand Knight Robert McCormack. The service which was held in the Catholic church, Cranford, was largely attended.

Y. W. C. A.

There will be a "Sunrise Breakfast" Wednesday morning at the association. The delegation will meet at the parlors at 6.15 and from there proceed to the mountains where breakfast will be cooked and served. Miss Elizabeth Wetherell will have charge of the trip.

MAYOR WELCOMES MANY SUGGESTIONS

Taxpayers Have Called on Him and Expressed Views on Various Subjects.

Prompted by discussion raised at local civic meetings a number of Plainfield property-owners have called on Mayor Calkins recently with suggestions concerning reforms that might be made to various municipal work here. Several of the reforms have been productive of "new thought" in the mind of the Mayor, and subsequently in the council, and when interviewed by a Daily Press reporter, this morning, the city executive said:

"I am a firm believer in conferences between the Mayor of a city and the taxpayers. Recently I have given up considerable time to listening to suggestions offered by various individuals, some of which have been offered as "boosts" while others were for reforms along numerous lines. While the individual ideas in some cases are biased the interviews as a whole are productive of some valuable ideas and I would welcome more visits from those who have them to offer.

"Loose talk regarding municipal government yields no profit to either the individual or the city, but if they would lodge their complaints and booms to the proper officials the matter could be brought to a head."

One regrettable feature of the meetings held by local civic organizations is the fact that a wealth of informal discussion is awakened among the members, but never gets to the proper authorities. The members criticize and rake various municipal departments "over the coals."

MRS. E. M. ROBERTS DIES IN 54TH YEAR

Succumbs at Her Home on Park Avenue After Long Illness.

Mrs. Elizabeth Miller Roberts, wife of Charles Roberts, died yesterday at the home of her sister, Miss Annie Miller, of 339 Park avenue. Mrs. Roberts had been in failing health for several years and had undergone several operations without obtaining relief. She was fifty-four years old and was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Miller, who were among the most prominent residents of the city a generation ago.

Mrs. Roberts was a native of Plainfield and had lived here all her life, until ten years ago, when she and her husband removed to Brooklyn. Mr. Roberts is the son of the late Dan S. Roberts and resides in Brooklyn at the present time. Mrs. Roberts came to Plainfield about a year ago, in the hope that a change might afford her relief. She was widely known throughout the city and borough and was always regarded as a woman of many estimable traits. Beside her sister, Miss Annie Miller, she is survived by two brothers, George Miller, who also resides at 339 Park avenue, and Wallace V. Miller, of New York. Two other brothers, Joseph B. Miller and William Miller died during the past two years. Mrs. Roberts' father was a well-known hotel keeper and at various times conducted the old Laing Hotel on West Front street, where the Babcock building now stands and another hostelry on Clinton avenue torn down many years ago.

The arrangements for the funeral have not yet been completed.

SUCCESSFUL FAIR AT THE HARTRIDGE

What was without a doubt the most successful event of its kind ever conducted under the auspices of the Hartridge School, pupils and members of the faculty of that institution was given Saturday afternoon, only 500 persons assisting to make the function a notable one. For five years past the local school has held an affair of this nature, the proceeds of which are contributed to the children's ward of Muhlenberg Hospital.

During the first two years the proceeds were turned over as a nucleus for a ward fund and the third contribution was used for two beds. Last fall the donation, amounting to $500 was devoted to the equipment of the ward and when that was an established fact they sent $400 additional for the support of two cribs for a first year. The object of Saturday's fair was to raise $400 more for the support of these two cribs for another year and as much more as possible for the maintenance of equipment or for gifts to the ward. It resulted in the sum of $542.64 being raised, this amount being the highest ever received by the school at its annual function.

The fair was conducted Saturday on strict business principles, prices being sensible and all change being returned, contrary to the usual custom in vogue at fairs of this kind. Every department of the school entered into the spirit of the event and the following assignments of booths were made: First grade, Easter favors; second grade, Japanese booth; third and fourth grades, to sell dolls; fifth, sixth and seventh grades, wardrobe table; academic first grade, fancy articles, academic second grade, home-made cake and jelly; academic third grade, refreshments, in the studio; academic fourth and fifth grades, flowers and candy.

Statistics compiled after the affair showed that the academic department had raised $319.09 to add to the fund. The articles for sale were of the useful variety and considerable favorable comment was expressed by those in attendance.

Among the speakers were Assemblyman William N. Runyon, Senator W. W. Smalley, Assemblyman Ogden Hammond and Judge Robert Carey of Jersey City.

MAKE YOURS A PUBLIC SERVICE STORE

This is the age of service. The rewards of today go to the men who give the most in return.

Translated for you, Mr. Merchant this means that the customers are certain to patronize the store that will give them what they want when they want it.

Cut prices may bring some trade but better service will bring more.

This is the age when people are reading the advertising in their daily newspapers because they are finding it a distinct part of the service they expect their newspapers to give.

When a nationally distributed article of merit is advertised in the newspapers a demand for it sets in right away.

People want to see it and, if satisfied, want to buy it.

They are going to turn to the store that lets them know it has the article. That store will be giving them the service they want at that particular moment.

If it is a good article they are going to remember the store where they got it and will come back to that store again.

Co-operate with the manufacturers who come into the newspapers of your town to exploit their goods, and you will be building business for yourself.

The Daily Press will be glad to have its attention called to any misleading or untrue statement if such should appear at any time in an advertisement in its columns.

Readers are requested to assist in protecting themselves and legitimate advertisers.

CHAPTER VII.

I Meet the Foe and Fall.

THE post that morning, besides containing a telegram from Vienna apprising me of the immediate embarkation of four irreproachable angels in the guise of servants, brought a letter from my friends the Hazzards, inquiring when my castle would be in shape to receive and discharge house parties without subjecting them to an intermediate season of peril from drafts, leaky roofs, damp sheets and vampires.

I sat down and looked about me in gloomy despair. No words can describe the scene, unless we devote a whole page to repeating the word "dismal." Morning in the midst of repairs is an awful thing. I looked, despaired and then dictated a letter to the Hazzards, urging them to come at once with all their friends!

I needed some one to make me forget.

At 11 o'clock Poopendyke brought me a note from the chatelaine of the east wing. It had been dropped into the courtyard from one of the upper windows. The reading of it transformed me into a stern, relentless demon. She very calmly announced that she had a headache and couldn't think of being disturbed that day and probably not the next.

My mind was made up in an instant. I would not be put off by a headache—which was doubtless assumed for the occasion—and I would be master of my castle or know the reason why, etc.

In the courtyard I found a score or more of idle artisans, banished by the onsweeping tourists and completely forgotten by me in the excitement of the hour. Commanding them to fetch their files, saws, broadaxes and augers, I led the way to the mighty doors that barred my entrance to the other side. I stood over my toiling minions, and I venture to say that they never worked harder or faster in their lives. By 12 o'clock we had the great doors open and swept on to the next obstruction.

At 2 o'clock the last door in the east antechamber gave way before our resolute advance, and I stood victorious and dusty in the little recess at the top of the last stairway. Beyond the twentieth century portieres of a thirteenth century doorway lay the goal we sought. I hesitated briefly before drawing them apart and taking the final plunge. As a matter of fact, I was beginning to feel ashamed of myself. Suppose that she really had a headache? What an uncouth, pusillanimous brute I—

Just then, even as my hand fell upon the curtains, they were snatched aside, and I found myself staring into the livid, uptilted face of the lady who had defied me and would continue to do so if my suddenly active perceptions counted for anything.

I saw nothing but the dark, indignant, imperious eyes. They fairly withered me.

In some haste, attended by the most disheartening nervousness, I tried to find my cap to remove it in the presence of royalty. Unfortunately I was obliged to release the somewhat cumbersome crowbar I had been carrying about with me, and it dropped with a sullen thwack upon my toes. In moments of gravity I am always doing something like that. The pain was terrific, but I clutched at the forlorn hope that she might at least smile over my agony.

"I beg your pardon," I began, and then discovered that I was not wearing a cap. It was most disconcerting.

"So you would come," she said very coldly and very levelly.

"It—it was necessary, madame," I replied as best I could. "You defied me. I think you should have appreciated my position, my motives—er—my"—

"Your position! It is intensely Napoleonic," said she, with fine irony. Her gaze swept my horde of panting, wide eyed house breakers. "What a noble victory!"

It was quite time for me to assert myself. Bowing very stiffly, I remarked:

"I regret exceedingly to have been forced to devastate my own property in such a trifling enterprise, madame. The physical loss is apparent—you can see that for yourself—but, of course, you have no means of estimating the mental destruction that has been going on for days and days. You have been hacking away at my poor, distracted brain so persistently that it really had to give way. In a measure, this should account for my present lapse of sanity. Weak mindedness is not a crime, but an affliction."

She did not smile.

"Well, now that you are here, Mr. Smart, may I be so bold as to inquire what you are going to do about it?"

I reflected. "I think, if you don't mind, I'll come in and sit down. That was a deuce of a rap I got across the toes. I am sure to be a great deal more lenient and agreeable if I'm asked to come in and see you. Incidentally I thought I'd step up to inquire how your headache is getting on. Better, I hope?"

"If you choose to bang your old castle to pieces in order to satisfy a masculine curiosity, Mr. Smart, I have nothing more to say," she said, facing me again still ominously, to my despair. Confound it all, she was such a slim, helpless little thing—and all alone against a mob of burly ruffians! "Will you be good enough to send your—your army away, or do you prefer to have it on hand in case I should take it into my head to attack you?"

"Take 'em away, Mr. Poopendyke," I commanded hurriedly. As they crowded down the short, narrow stairway I remarked old Conrad and his two sons standing over against the wall, three very sinister figures.

"I see, madame, that you do not dismiss your army," I said, blandly sarcastic.

"Oh, you dear old Conrad!" she cried, catching sight of the hitherto submerged Schmicks. The three of them bobbed and scraped and grinned from ear to ear. There could be no mistaking the intensity of their joy. "Don't look so sad, Conrad. I know you are blameless. You poor old dear!"

I have never seen any one who looked less sad than Conrad Schmick. I rather peremptorily ordered him below.

"I will attend to you presently—all of you," said I. They did not move. "Do you hear me?" I snapped angrily. They looked stolidly at the slim young lady.

She smiled, rather proudly, I thought. "You may go, Conrad. I shall not need you. Max, will you fetch up another scuttle of coal?"

They took their orders from her!

"By Jove!" I said, looking after my trusty men servants as they descended. "I like this! Are they my servants or yours?"

"Oh, I suppose they are yours, Mr. Smart," she said carelessly. "Will you come in now and make yourself quite at home?"

"Perhaps I'd better wait for a day or two," said I, wavering. "Your headache, you know. I can wait just as well as"—

"Oh, no! Since you've gone to all the trouble I suppose you ought to have something for your pains."

"Pains?" I murmured, and I declare to heaven I limped as I followed her through the door into a tiny hall.

"You are a most unreasonable man," she said, throwing open a small door at the end of the hall. "I am terribly disappointed in you. You looked to be so nice and sensible and amiable."

"Oh, I'm not such a nincompoop as you might suspect, madame," said I testily, far from complimented.

"And now, Mr. Smart, will you be kind enough to explain this incomprehensible proceeding on your part?" she said, facing me sternly.

But I was dumb. I stood just inside the door of the most remarkable apartment it has ever been my good fortune to look upon. My senses reeled. Was I awake? Was this a part of the bleak, sinister, weather racked castle in which I was striving so hard to find a comfortable corner?

"Well?" she demanded relentlessly.

"By the Lord Harry!" I began, finding my tongue only to lose it again.

The room was completely furnished, bedecked and rendered habitable by a hundred and one articles that were mysteriously missing from my side of the castle. Rags, tapestries, curtains of the rarest quality; chairs, couches and cushions; tables, cabinets and chests that would have caused the eyes of the most conservative collector of antiques to bulge with—not wonder, but greed; stands, pedestals, brasses, bronzes, porcelains—but why enumerate? On the massive oaken center table stood the priceless silver vase we had missed on the second day of our occupancy, and it was filled with fresh yellow roses.

And so complete had been the rifling of my rooms by the devoted vandals in their efforts to make this lady cozy and comfortable that they did not overlook a silver framed photograph of my dear mother.

I tried to smile. "How—how cozy you are here," I said.

"You couldn't expect me to live in this awful place without some of the comforts and conveniences of life, Mr. Smart," she said defiantly.

"Certainly not," I said promptly. "I am sure that you will excuse me, however, if I gloat. I was afraid we had lost all these things. You've no idea how relieved I am to find them all safe and sound in my—in their proper place. I was beginning to distrust the Schmicks. Now I am convinced of their integrity."

"I suppose you mean to be sarcastic."

"Sarcasm at any price, madame, would be worse than useless, I am sure."

Crossing to the fireplace, I selected a lump of coal from the scuttle and examined it with great care. She watched me curiously.

"Do you recognize it?" she asked.

"I do," said I, looking up. "It has been in our family for generations. My favorite chunk, believe me! Still I part with it cheerfully." Thereupon I tossed it into the fire. "Don't be shocked. I shan't miss it. We have coals to burn, madame."

She looked at me soberly for a moment. There was something hurt and wistful in her dark eyes.

"Of course, Mr. Smart, I shall pay you for everything—down to the smallest trifle—when the time comes for me to leave this place. I have kept strict account of"—

She turned away, with a beaten droop of the proud little head, and again I was shamed.

"Madame," I said, with considerable feeling, "I have behaved like a downright rotter today. I do not know who you are nor why you are here, but I assure you it is of no real consequence if you will but condescend to overlook my insufferable"—

She turned toward me. The wistful, appealing look still lingered in her eyes. The soft red nether lip seemed a bit tremulous.

"I am an intruder," she interrupted, smiling faintly. "You have every right to put me out of your—your home, Mr. Smart. I have been very selfish and cattish and inconsiderate, Mr. Smart. You see, I'm a spoiled child. I've always had my own way in everything. You must look upon me as a very horrid, sneaking, conspiring person, and I—I really think you ought to turn me out."

She came a few steps nearer. Suddenly it was revealed to me that she was the loveliest woman I had ever seen in all my life.

I am afraid that I stared.

"Turn you out?" I cried. "Turn you out of this delightful room after you've had so much trouble getting it into shape? Never!"

"Oh, you don't know how I've imposed upon you!" she cried plaintively. "You don't know how I've robbed you and bothered you"—

"Yes, I do," said I promptly. "I know all about it. You've been stealing my coals, my milk, my ice, my potatoes, my servants, my sleep and"—here I gave a comprehensive sweep of my hand—"everything in sight. And you've made us walk on tiptoe to keep from waking the baby, and"— I stopped suddenly. "By the way, whose baby is it? Not yours, I'm sure."

To my surprise her eyes filled with tears.

"Yes; she is my baby, Mr. Smart," she said, turning away.

A SERVICEABLE FROCK FOR SPRING.

This frock is of severe design and will be found most useful for spring wear. Combining as it does the effect of a coat with the simplicity of a blouse it is just the thing for the first warm days. Silk poplin in navy blue was used for this with blouse closed in military fashion—novelty buttons in red and long close-fitting sleeves frilled at the hand with net pleatings. The severity of the high plain collar is also relieved by this means. The wide belt is embroidered in Oriental shades. A shaped tunic falls over a plain underskirt—both of generous width.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

When Nell ran away from the house on the day of their first real quarrel, she only thought of getting away by herself to reflect and to quiet the tumult of her angry thoughts before she had a chance to utter them. She lay long on the warm ground under the tree, her fingers clutching the fresh grass of the pasture. Gradually the anger subsided and she tried to follow the incident through and see what had caused all the dreadful trouble.

Had it been wise to tell her husband what that meddlesome woman had said about his being seen so much with Miss Rudolph? Yes, she felt that he should know that people were talking about their being so much together, and she had thought that a good way to let him know, but perhaps she was wrong.

This was to have been their afternoon together, and here she was, face down among the grass blades, alone. She wondered what he was doing. "I'll go and see," she decided, rising and smoothing out her dress. As she came in sight of the gate she saw Dick and Miss Rudolph leaving the house together. What could it mean? A fierce anger devastated her soul again. She entered the house and rushed up to the dainty white guest chamber. He would not look for her there.

"Look for me!" she reflected bitterly. "He will not miss me."

The gate clicked and she looked out. Dick had come back and was looking for her, evidently, for she heard him opening and closing doors and then he took the direction to the pasture that she had taken that afternoon.

Nell was utterly spent with the surge of emotions and felt that she must get some rest. "First I'll get his supper on the table; then I'll come up here and lie down. He'll know I'm in the house and can find me if he wants to."

She set cold meat, salad, a cake and some fruit on the table, then climbed to the guest chamber and lay down on the bed. The quiet and refreshing coolness of the room sent her off to sleep.

Dusk had fallen when Dick's entrance waked her. He wandered over the house. She lay quietly listening. Everything was still. Evidently he was eating his supper.

He did not think she was in the house; she had brought her hat upstairs. Then she heard him go out on the porch, and the aroma of his cigar floated up to the window. She wanted to go down to him, but seemed unable to move. A pale sickle of a moon and the evening star hung in the sky, looking serenely down on all the anguish and unrest of the world. Their beauty calmed her and she wiped her eyes and tucked her wet handkerchief under her pillow.

Dick had come in the house again; he was coming up the stairs. Her heart beat to suffocation. He rapped softly on the door, turned the knob and entered. "You here, Nell? I have looked everywhere for you. Where have you been? How could you stay away all our one afternoon?"

He had come to the bed and was stroking her hair. Nell remained still. "Are you very angry at me for my nasty speech? I am sorry, dear," he continued. She put out her hand and he bent over to kiss her. Her arm slid around his neck and he dropped to his knees by the bed.

After he had held her close in a loving silence he whispered, "Miss Rudolph is so unimportant it is a shame to lose our afternoon on her account."

Household Hints

LENTEN SALADS

Cheese Salad—Wash and crisp a tender head of lettuce, arrange for individual serving, sprinkle freely with grated cheese, dress with mayonnaise and garnish with sliced lemons.

Egg Salad—Cut two cold boiled potatoes into tiny cubes, pour over them two tablespoons hot vinegar into which has been melted a tablespoonful of butter; set away to become cold. Hard boil as many eggs as required, carefully remove yolks and chop whites very fine. Arrange bed of watercress on round plate, make nests of the chopped whites and in each place a yolk. Dress with mayonnaise and garnish with the potato cubes drained of the vinegar.

Nut Salad—Remove shells from a pound of English walnuts; blanch the meats, wipe dry and stand in cold place until needed. Then chop meats and mix with celery cut into small lengths; serve in lettuce leaf cups and dress with mayonnaise.

Oyster Salad—Prepare a dressing in the proportions of two tablespoons salad oil to four tablespoons vinegar, one teaspoon each of salt and sugar and half teaspoon each of pepper and freshly made mustard. Plump oysters in their own liquid, then drain and set away until cold. Shred one-third as much tender lettuce as there are oysters. When oysters are cold, chop them a little, mix with lettuce, pour over dressing and serve at once.

Fish Salad—Pour juice of two lemons over 1½ pints cold, cooked fish, broken into flakes; stir lightly. Arrange crisp lettuce leaves or endives so as to form a bed on a round plate; lay fish upon it and over top put a few capers and some fillets of anchovy. Dress with mayonnaise and garnish with sliced lemons.

Lobster Salad—Drop a large lobster into boiling water, slightly salted; boil rapidly twenty minutes, then remove at once from fire. When quite cold disjoint, crack claws, twist off head and split body lengthwise. Tear meat into shreds with two forks, saving the coral separate. Sprinkle with salt, pepper and vinegar; mix and form into little mounds on lettuce leaves. Dress with salad dressing and garnish with the coral put through a potato ricer.

Shrimp Salad—Turn contents of *can of shrimps into dish; remove in*testinal vein and set on ice to become thoroughly chilled. Serve in lettuce cups on bed of cracked ice. Dress with French salad dressing and garnish with minced capers.

Sardine Salad—Remove sardines from box, drain off all oil and pull off loose skin. Wash crisp, white part of a bunch of celery, cut half of it into two-inch lengths and fringe it by drawing half of the stalk of each piece several times through coarse needle stuck in a cork, then lay in a cold place or in ice water to cool. Cut remainder of celery into half-inch lengths and heap in center of flat salad dish. Arrange sardines over and around it, garnish with the fringed celery and dress with mayonnaise.

WORTH KNOWING

That soiled, faded carpet or rug can be made bright and clean at home by use of the following: From druggist get an ounce each of ether and chloroform. Add a cup of salt, ten-cent bottle of household ammonia; put in a wide-mouthed bottle and cork. Add two tablespoons of mixture to two gallons water (hot) into which has been shaved a bar of white naphtha soap. Scrub carpet with a stiff brush, using only the foam of water. Rinse with clean damp cloth. You will be delighted as well as surprised with the result.

Pasteboard boxes that crackers come in are fine to keep doughnuts or cookies in, as they will not dry out; can be used to bake fruit cake in, as the oiled paper and stiff outside keep the cake from burning.

To remove cream spots from linen, touch the spot lightly with ammonia, then iron over blotting paper and all traces of grease will disappear.

To hull walnuts, take a board about twenty inches long; bore a hole about the size of a hulled walnut at one end of it. Then take a hammer and pound the walnut through. A quick and cleanly way to hull walnuts.

Animal Jingles FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

What Are You Like?

Here is a thing to think about,
It's funny, but it's true;
Some children are like animals;
I wonder now, are you?
Do you delight to sit up late?
And do you like to prowl
Around when you should be in bed?
If so, you're like an Owl.

OR

Maybe when you're put to bed,
Without a light at all,
And all the folks are off downstairs,
You always loudly call;
And then because you are so scared,
You cry, "I want a drink!"
If this is what you do, you are A "Fraidy-Calf," I think.

RUNAWAY JUNE

BY GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER AND LILLIAN CHESTER

TWELFTH EPISODE.

The Spirit of the Marsh.

CHAPTER I.

A STEAM yawl, with black smoke pouring from her stovepipe, suddenly stopped its churning halfway across New York bay as the principal passenger, a long nosed woman with high arched brows, recognized through a wabbly jointed telescope the leaders in a procession of five speedy motorboats which swept rapidly toward her.

"Turn around quick!" the woman ordered as the first motorboat bore down, and she dashed a cinder from her beady eye. "Here comes the runaway bride!"

"I'm turning her now, ma'am," reported a short, thick individual whose round face was one consecutive smudge. "Don't you hear our engines stopping?"

"There she goes!" screeched Honoria Blye as the long, narrow steel gray boat flashed past, bearing, besides its driver, a beautiful young girl in a yachting costume, protected as much as possible from the flying spray in the arm of a tall man with a soft felt hat and a loosely knotted cravat.

"Why, she isn't with my husband!" cried Honoria Blye.

"No'm," confessed Bill Wolf, putting a fresh smudge on his round face as the cinder laden smoke rolled down; "not now." His perplexity cleared. He spied the second boat. "There he comes!"

"Gilbert!" screamed the woman as the second boat shot by, driven by a heavy man with a round head, and thick lidded eyes and carrying as its passenger a dark, handsome man with a black Vandyke, whose whole attention was fixed on the beautiful girl in the forward boat. "Gilly!" The dark, handsome man paid no attention. "You viper!" she shrieked; then she whirled to Bill Wolf. "Why don't you turn this around and chase them?"

"We're turning, ma'am," reported Bill Wolf, looking anxiously in at the engineer. "Don't you hear the engine reversing?"

"That's the creature who corrupted my husband!" shrieked Honoria. "He was with Gilbert the night he took his trunk away! You beast!" she screamed, and then she caught sight of the occupants in the fourth boat, a little chauffeur with blazing eyes and the tiniest of mustaches and a stiff woman, who bent eagerly forward.

"The maid of the runaway bride!" explained the justly famous detective, Bill Wolf. "Do you notice that we're turning now, ma'am?"

"Ned Warner, the deserted groom!" announced Honoria Blye as the fifth boat darted past. Ned held binoculars to his eyes, and they were focused alternately on beautiful June Warner in the arm of the artist and upon the closely pursuing Gilbert Blye. With him were a plump and placid small man, who drove with unwelcome creases in his brow, and a generously plump young woman, who was half hysterical.

"We're turned, ma'am," said Bill Wolf, clutching Honoria Blye by the elbow. "Don't you see the Federal building?"

On the dock there stood a watchman who consisted of an overcoat and cap, and silently, motionlessly hour by hour he looked out toward the bay. A swift motorboat, slender pointed, steel gray, dashed up, and from it the artist quickly lifted beautiful June Warner. The overcoat and cap moved not a muscle, but from far off Ned Warner, in the fifth boat of that strange regatta, through his powerful binoculars saw that landing, saw June cling to her newly found protector, saw, from the bend of his head, that the artist's eyes were filled with appreciation for the beauty of the fair little runaway bride. Straight up the dock they ran to the street and hailed a passing taxi and whirled away.

A keen little racer dashed up, spraying the water in a glittering translucent sheet as it curved into the slip. From it sprang the black Vandyked Gilbert Blye in time to see the taxicab whirl away with beautiful June. Through his powerful binoculars Ned Warner saw Blye gesticulating with anger, saw the heavy, round headed Edwards climb clumsily upon the dock and stamp his foot.

A third boat, a trim, lithe little cutter. From it scrambled the white mustached Orin Cunningham. Through his powerful binoculars Ned Warner saw Cunningham, too, give way to a fit of fury, and Ned finally gritted his teeth and clinched his fists as he saw these scoundrelly pursuers of his lovely bride race up the dock. They hailed a passing taxi and whirled away up the street.

A fourth boat. A little French chauffeur with a tiny mustache and a stiff woman with high cheek bones, who bent and unbent painfully as she was pulled to the dock.

"Hey!" The overcoat and cap at last had moved, rapidly, violently. They pounced between Henri and Marie. "You're pinched!"

"Pinched, monsieur? Impossible!" protested Henri in astonishment. "For what is it that we are pinched? Behold the boat! We have returned it." Marie started to run away.

"Hooray!" On his side Henri jerked and, laughing gayly, sprinted after Marie. Up on the street, in the shelter of a warehouse, stood a touring car. As he ran Henri reached in his pocket for a key. Behind them came pounding the overcoat and cap, blowing a shrill watchman's whistle through the slit in the collar. The fugitive from justice, easily outdistancing the heavy rubber boots, gained the car. With a bow which had in it all the grace and gallantry which could have been displayed had he used much more time Henri assisted Marie to her seat. He sprang in beside her. He inserted his key. He pressed the starting button. Silence! Bah! The motor was cold!

"You're under arrest!" And an iron-like middle finger thumped Henri on the shoulder. A policeman had arrived.

"Arrest, M. Officer?" cried Henri. "Impossible." And he made another effort to start his engine. "Look, the boat we have"—

"Do you know Officer Dowd?" asked Marie.

"Do you know Officer Moran?"

"Can't say as I know Moran."

"Do you know Officer O'Toole?' And she beamed high up into the solemn policeman's face.

"O'Toole? O'Toole? East side?"

"Listen, M. Officer, eh?" broke in Henri.

Marie had furtively kicked him on the shins.

"We took the boat, yes, but you will comprehend, monsieur"—

"Get it? He says he took the boat!" This was from the cap and the overcoat.

"Take 'em along!" rumbled the cap and overcoat.

"I guess I'll have to take you," the officer said regretfully. "Will you walk or will you ride? It's only up a couple of blocks."

"Walk!" exclaimed Henri in astonishment. "Never!" He rushed to the front of his car and cranked it. Off they went to the police station.

Patent Leathers

Don't ask any shoe man to guarantee a patent leather shoe He cannot honestly do it

Patent leather makes a beautiful shoe, but the wear it gives depends upon how you wear it.

If you wear it out of a warm room into the cold air, or if you put it on while the shoe is cold it will crack.

Patent leather is just like the varnish on your furniture or the paint on your auto—it must be handled carefully.

WE DO NOT GUARANTEE PATENT LEATHER.

THE BABY SAVING EXHIBIT ARRIVES

SOCIETIES CO-OPERATE

Heads of Committees Are Named to Take Charge of Various Departments—Mayor Calkins to Make Opening Address.

Matters connected with the coming exhibition of the Philadelphia Child Federation's "Baby Saving Show," which is to be open here during the month of April, are moving forward with a rush and a large attendance is looked for. The show, which was shipped here from Camden, arrived today and is being set up in the store at 216 Park avenue secured through the courtesy of Charles W. McCutcheon, who has kindly loaned the place to the committee for the use of the show.

The exhibit here will open at p. m., on Thursday, and will be open daily thereafter from 2 to 10 p. m. Mayor Leighton Calkins will make a speech at the opening. Every social or charitable organization in the city is co-operating in one way or another. Mrs. Frank D. Warren is chairman of the committee on patronesses; William M. Wherry, Jr. is chairman of the committee on publicity, and Dr. B. Van D. Hedges is chairman of the committee on literature. Mrs. Percy H. Stewart is chairman of the committee on demonstrations, and has arranged for a corps of nurses and others to be at every session of the show to assist, while Percy H. Stewart is chairman of the executive committee.

As showing the interest that is being taken in the show, a prominent life insurance company has agreed to distribute tickets through its agents, while several of the stores in town are wrapping a handbill advertising the show into each package they send out.

MUSICAL SERVICE BY FIRST BAPTIST CHOIR

A recital of Lenten music will be given in the First Baptist church Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. Dudley Buck's cantata, "The Story of the Cross;" Gounod's chorus, "By Babylon's Wave,' and selections from Maunder's "Penitence, Pardon and Peace" will be sung by the quartet and chorus choir of the church.

Intrumental numbers will be rendered by Miss Mildred Dilling, of New York, harpist; Miss Florence Wohlfert, violinist, and Howard M. Case, organist and director. The soloists of the choir are Mrs. Edith Hallett Frank, soprano; Miss Leontine de Ahna, contralto; George H. Smith, tenor, and William Holmes, baritone. The public is cordially invited to attend this service.

CONFERENCE APPOINTMENTS EXPECTED THIS AFTERNOON

Although Bishop Theodore S. Henderson and his cabinet have been closeted all morning, those in attendance at the Methodist Episcopal Conference in session in St. Luke's church, Newark, do not expect the announcement of appointments before late this afternoon. Statistical reports were made to the Conference this morning, showing that the expenses were $137.55, of this amount $60.50 being paid by St. Luke's church; and $77.05 being contributed in a special collection yesterday.

Last night the Conference unanimously adopted a resolution urging President Wilson to lend his aid to the submission of a constitutional amendment which will prohibit the liquor traffic in the country.

SLIGHT ACCIDENT.

An automobile owned and driven by Sol Rosenthal, of Netherwood, hit an Arlington avenue trolley car at Fourth and Sycamore streets this morning. The mixup was purely an accident and no damage was done.

BOARD TO EXTEND EASTER VACATION

Borough School Authorities Grant Request of Their Teachers.

COMMENCEMENT DATE

Overcrowding of Saengerbund Hall is Discussed—Science Department Receives a Picture — Warrants Are Ordered Paid.

The North Plainfield Board of Education last night decided to extend the time for the Easter vacation from April 6 to April 12, upon the request of many of the teachers who feel the need of a longer vacation at this time of the year. The board will therefore add four days to the calendar in June in order to get the State appropriation and the commencement will be held June 24 instead of June 18.

It was reported that two teachers, Miss Isabelle Williams and Miss Eva Dvorken, have asked for leave of absence until April 19, because of ill health. Miss Dvorken has been absent from school since February 23. The board authorized the employment of substitute teachers.

Supervising Principal D. Fred Aungst reported the attendance for March as 1,220 against 1,389 during the same month last year. He also stated that Principal Earley had presented the science department with a framed picture of Louis Agassiz.

Warrants amounting to $4,371.02 were ordered paid and the custodian's report showed a balance of $54,545 in the general fund and $187.53 in the manual training fund. The supply committee was authorized to expend not more than $10 for new music for the High School commencement. The board sent a request to the Borough Council for the installation of a conduit on Harrison avenue to take care of the surplus surface water. Thomas E. Mundy made application for the position of janitor of the new Harrison School, and Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., invited the members to attend the exercises on April 9 at Reform Hall in celebration of Lee's surrender at Appomattox. This was accepted.

The attention of the board was called to the overcrowding of Saengerbund Hall on the occasion of school entertainments and basketball games. The board stated that the hall was leased for athletic purposes only and it was not responsible for what occurred at other entertainments.

On motion of Judd Stuart, it was decided to display the American flag at half-mast at the schools on April 14 in commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the death of President Lincoln. Last night's meeting marked the retirement of H. A. Woodruff and Francis I. Sill.

Succeeds Arthur B. Jones as Head of Public Recreation Committee.

ENCOURAGING REPORTS

Committee Votes to Join the Federation of Child Welfare—Defer Question of Engaging Supervisor and Assistant.

Plans for the year, together with a resume of last year's work and the election of officers comprised the important business transacted at the annual meeting of the Public Recreation Committee, held last night at the Public Library. The various reports were presented showing a marked increase in the interest and attendance in the various activities conducted by the committee all of which have far exceeded the greatest expectations of those in charge of the work.

The question of engaging a supervisor and assistant for the coming year was deferred until it is ascertained just what the total income of the Committee will be. It is not known at present what appropriation the Common Council will make for the recreation work, although it is hoped that it will be as large as last year.

It was agreed that the results of the work are proving satisfactory and that much good is being accomplished in providing amusement, as well as education, to the hundreds of patrons of the activities introduced by the Committee. Efforts were made to persuade Arthur B. Jones to continue as chairman of the Committee but owing to many other duties he declined, and Henry Crofut White, of North Plainfield, consented to take the office. These officers were elected:

Chairman, Henry Crofut White; vice-chairmen, Arthur B. Jones and G. Stuart Simons; secretary, Walter H. P. Veysey; treasurer, William M. Sandford. The Committee voted to join the Federation of Child Welfare organization of Plainfield and vicinity and do all in its power to further the interest of this work.

GASOLINE GAVE OUT; THIEVES LEFT AUTO

Shortage of gasoline led auto thieves to abandon a 1915 six-cylinder Franklin touring car in front of the home of Lawrence Wallace in Scotch Plains Sunday night, the machine being found early yesterday morning by Ralph Venizia, of that place. The automobile was standing at one side of the road and would probably not have attracted any unusual attention had it not been for the presence of a big placard tied to a stone in front of the car reading: "Telephone Allentown police."

These three words led to the unravelling of a mystery that had been troubling the Pennsylvania authorities for seventy-two hours and may eventually lead to the running down of a band of plunderers who have been operating on a big scale in that section. Marshal Logan, of the Fanwood police, communicated with the Allentown authorities and learned that the machine had been stolen from Dr. Robert T. Klotz and had been missing for three days. Detectives in the meantime had instituted a country-wide search for the machine and Dr. Klotz had offered a reward of $100 for its return.

Yesterday afternoon Chief Bernard and a corps of detectives from Allentown went to Scotch Plains with Dr. Klotz and took charge of the automobile. The physician, following an investigation, paid over the reward to Logan and Venizia.

According to Chief Bernard this is the first machine that has been recovered out of a large number stolen in that section. The thieves had smeared the license tag with grease to make the numerals indistinguishable and the initials of the owner had been sandpapered off the door.

MOTORCYCLE RIDE PROVED EXPENSIVE

Dunhamil Says, "It's Cheaper to Express Machine Than Bring it out Yourself."

Hearing the robins chirp about his boarding place on Central avenue one day last week, Peter Duhamiel, of the Saurer motor truck shop, decided good weather had arrived and sent to his former home at Providence, R. I., for his motorcycle, put away last fall. It arrived on the steamboat pier Saturday and in company with his brother Daniel, of West Fourth street, Duhamiel went into New York Sunday to bring it out to Plainfield.

The riding was good and the machine was hitting about twenty-five an hour through Roselle Park when a traffic "cop" suddenly loomed up ahead. A few questions and a few minutes sufficed to make Peter Duhamiel understand that as the owner and driver of the machine he was under arrest. He was allowed to go on his own recognizance for appearance before Justice Kelley yesterday afternoon, at which time he was fined $25. The court consoled him by remarking if it had been anybody but a Plainfielder they would have hung him for the same offense.

Adding the time he lost with carfare and the fine, Duhamiel advises his friends it is easier to get a motorcycle shipped out from New York at a saving over expressage of $26.75.

HUNT FOR CLERK WAXING WARM

With Miss Tanzer's Confession Search for Safford Begins in Earnest.

EXONERATES OSBORNE

Central Figure in $50,000 Suit Admits She Was in Plainfield—New Developments in Case Now Being Awaited.

Expected revelations were made by Miss Rae Tanzer in a sworn statement before United States District Attorney Marshall in New York yesterday afternoon, among other things declaring that James W. Osborne was not Oliver Osborne, who visited the Kensington Hotel in this city with her on October 18, 1914, and who, she had alleged, promised to marry her after ten weeks of constant courtship. She admitted that she "had named the wrong man" when she brought a civil suit for $50,000 for breech of promise against James W. Osborne. Miss Tanzer claims that she "made an honest mistake," in identifying J. W. Osborne as Oliver Osborne during the hearing last Thursday.

Interest now centers about the present whereabouts of Frank Safford, formerly a clerk in Hotel Kensington, who positively adentified J. W. Osborne as the man who accompanied Miss Tanzer on her visit to Plainfield in October. He is being sought today by detectives in the government service. The letter received by District Attorney Marshall from a woman at Watervliet, N. Y., stating that an F. D. Safford, answering the description of the witness in the Tanzer suit, had deserted her some years ago, is also being investigated.

The Watervliet woman says that at one time Safford was employed by the Goerke Company, of Newark, a department store. In Newark it was learned that Safford worked for the Goerke firm as a floor walker about twelve years ago. He remained in Newark only six months, but made many acquaintances. He went to Newark from Philadelphia, where he had worked in department stores for many years. After he had been floor-walker in the Newark store for some time Rudolph J. Goerke promoted him to the position of assistant superintendent.

He later went back to Philadelphia and was employed for a time by Gilt Brothers. He then went into the patent medicine business and later into the liquor business. Mr Goerke said today that he remembered Safford and had always liked and admired him. It is said that Safford was married in Newark.

After the examination in New York Thursday, at which William J. Kitchen, proprietor of the Kensington Hotel, and former employer of Safford, was a witness, the latter returned to the Mountain Spring House at Greenwood Lake, where he had been employed, according to the Federal detectives. He packed up his belongings and went away leaving word, Sheriff Willis DeGraw, of Orange county, says, that he was going to Paterson.

LOSES SUIT AGAINST WELSH FARM DAIRY

According to a decision rendered by Judge James J. Connolly, of Elizabeth yesterday, Arthur R. Phillips, of Grandview avenue, could not recover in the suit brought by him against the Welsh Farms Dairy, Inc., for $5,000 damages under the Employers' Liability Act. The case was heard in the Court of Common Pleas during the present term and decision was reserved at its conclusion.

Phillips was employed by the defendant company as manager and while in the performance of his duties collided with a milk box, receiving a severe injury to the knee. He alleged that complications set in which caused permanent disability. He sued under the liability act for half pay for four hundred weeks. The defendants maintained in the suit that the permanent part of Phillips' injury was not due to his collision with a milk box but came from an en entirely foreign source.

In handing down the decision, Judge Connolly explained that Phillips could not recover as he did not file a notice of his injury with the company within the time required by law.

MASTERS WILL DISCUSS STRIKE

ACTION LONG PENDING

Direct Result of Incident That Happened Last Week—Claim Apprentice is Not Given a Fair Show—Two Masters Stand Pat.

"I didn't raise my boy to be a plumber." Mothers of between thirty and forty-boy apprentices are singing this parody today following action taken by a majority of the local members of the Journeymen's Union, yesterday. A disagreement between the Master Builders' Association and Journeymen Plumbers and Steam Fitters' Union early last week is the cause for a general "lockout" today, and unless the opposing factions mediate within the next twenty-four hours some interesting developments are anticipated. The masters will meet in the Chamber of Commerce rooms in the Babcock building, tonight.

One of the by-laws in the journeymen's constitution, providing that an apprentice shall be with a master plumber for four years before he is "allowed to handle tools," and then be examined before he is "allowed to handle tools," at $2.25 a day, is said to be the cause for the feeling that has arisen.

President C. W. Krausse, of the Master Builders' Association, when interviewed by a Daily Press reporter, today, said that the trouble had arisen over the fact that Den J. Galbraith, a local master, violated the by-laws. Men in his shop immediately put themselves on record as "lockouts," and this afternoon, according to President Krausse, journeymen employed by all masters with the exception of Arthur Neuman and A. M. Griffen, were "out."

It is said that Galbraith sent a two-year apprentice out on a job, thus taking the place of a journeyman, and this was a violation of rules. It is alleged that the Master Builders' Association has neglected to take any action in response to a notification sent by the journeymen and has been inclined to lineup with the plumbing concern.

Although an early settlement of the trouble is looked for, it is said that both sides have taken firm stands and it will be exceedingly hard to effect a compromise. The masters think the by-law restriction is too severe and not in line with the welfare of the apprentice boys who actually want to become journeymen.

JOSEPH A. HUBBARD OBSERVES BIRTHDAY

Well Known Citizen Was Eighty-five Years Old Yesterday.

Joseph A. Hubbard, formerly tax assessor of Plainfield for forty years, celebrated the eighty-fifth anniversary of his birthday yesterday at the home of his son, Frank J. Hubbard, on West Fifth street. During the day Mr. Hubbard received many congratulations personally and through postal cards. Mr. Hubbard was born at Scott, N. Y., coming to Plainfield in 1855. He was tax assessor here from 1868 to 1908.

Before coming to Plainfield, Mr. Hubbard learned the carpenter's trade with his father and in 1850 he and his brother engaged in business in Allegany county, N. Y., where they remained until Mr. Hubbard removed to this city. The last building erected by Mr. Hubbard was the old Seventh-day Baptist church.

A few years later Mr. Hubbard formed a partnership with J. D. Spicer in the sash and blind business, the mill being at Madison avenue and West Third street. The firm dissolved in 1897. Mr. Hubbard is treasurer of the Seventh-day Baptist Memorial Fund, a director of the First National Bank and for forty years has been a trustee of the Seventh-day Baptist church. He has two sons, Frank J. Hubbard, a civil engineer and member of the Board of Education, and William C. Hubbard, who is engaged in the electrical business.

TWO MORE GRASS FIRES.

Grass fires continued to keep the local fire department busy and hardly a day goes by without anywhere from one to six calls being received. The record since yesterday noon is two. One was at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon for a blaze in the Netherwood section and another was at 5:17 for a second one on upper North avenue near the pumping station. Both were put out before any damage was done.

ITALIAN TROOPS ORDERED TO MOVE

En Route to Tyrolese Frontier Where Austrian Forces Are Gathering.

VON KLUCK DEPOSED

Will Be Succeeded by Prince Eitel Friedrich—Situation in Portugal Said to Be Grave—British Warships Attacked by Bombs.

Geneva, March 30—Italian military headquarters, it is reported here, has ordered several regiments stationed near the Swiss frontier, with bases at Como, Varese and Brescia, to move toward the Tyrolese frontier, where the Austrian troops have been concentrating during the past fortnight.

London, March 30—Gen. vonKluck, the German commander who led the advance into France, according to travelers from Berlin, was wounded while recklessly inspecting trenches at the most dangerous point on the line after a stormy interview with Emperor William, says an American despatch to the "Express."

The opinion is expressed in Berlin that as the result of the incident the Emperor will intrust the command of vonKluck's army to Prince Eitel-Friedrich.

A despatch from Constantinople says that the following official statement was given out by the Turkish office today: "One of our seaplanes has dropped bombs on a British warship cruising outside the Dardanelles."

Paris, March 30—The French war office gave out the following statement this afternoon:

"Yesterday was calm on practically all the front. A German aviator threw bombs upon Rheims. Two persons were wounded. One projectile fell on the facade of the cathedral. A well directed fire from our artillery forced the enemy to evacuate in disorder the village of Heudicourt, northeast of St. Mihiel."

The situation in Portugal is grave, according to a despatch from Madrid, published in the Journal. The municipal Councils of 94 cities have protested against the establishment of a dictatorship while only 17 have given their official approval of the course which has been followed by the Government. Mobs in the principal cities have assailed bakeries in consequence of the increased prices of flour.

Berlin, March 30 (by wireless)—The following statement was given out at the German headquarters today:

"Western theatre—Only artillery duels and engagements between Sappers occurred yesterday.

"Eastern theatre—According to reports from Prince Joachim of Prussia, who was on the scene, the East Prusian Landstrum behaved brilliantly in the battles for the possession of auroggen which ended in German occupation of that city. We took 1,000 prisoners. The Russians suffered heavy losses at Krasnopol, about 2,000 men being killed. Our booty taken in that district in battle up to last night amounts to 3,000 prisoners, seven machine guns, one canon and several ammunition carts.

"On the Szkwa, near Klimki, two Russian officers and 600 men were taken prisoners in an unsuccessful attack by the Rusians.

"In the region of Olazyny, on the left bank of the Omulew, two Russian night attacks were repulsed. Attempts by the Russians to cross the lower Bzura River failed.

Washington, March 30—President Wilson said today, that it is an impossibility for the German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich to leave Newport News for New York and keep within the three-mile limit of American waters. Shoal waters would force the ship out to sea, ten miles at some places. The suggestion which gained circulation that it was the intention of Commander Heirichens to leave Newport News for New York under convoy of an American battleship was ridiculed.

Amsterdam, March 30—It is reported that 60,000 German troops, chiefly cavalry, have passed through Tohgres, in the Belgian Province of Limbourg, en route to the Carpathians. Tongres is little more than ten miles north of Liège.

DOES NOT BELIEVE REPORT.

Washington, March 30—If France, Italy and Germany have recognized formally the new government in Hayti, thus embarrassing the plans of the United States with reference to the black republic, President Wilson knows nothing of such. He told callers today that he did not believe such action had been taken, refusing further to discuss the matter in the absence of formal notification.

The subject was, "What Christianity Means to Christians." The Messrs. Ramsey, Gibson, Capers Montgomery and McMullen made addresses. Mr. Gibson lead the choir girls' chorus and congregation in singing two very popular "Billy" Sunday hymns, "Brighten the Corner" and "If Your Heart Keeps Right." Mr. Gibson also sang several beautiful tenor solos. This was the first of a series of evangelistic services which Mr. Ramsey, the pastor, is arranging.

THE MAN WHO LAUGHS.

The Reason He Does So From the Physical Point of View.

Laughter is an involuntary response of certain muscles to a communication from nerves controlling their action. We laugh because we receive an impression through our sensory nerves that causes a demonstration from the muscles which express mirth. The vigor or heartiness of laughter depends upon the susceptibility of the brain to what is received through the sensory nerves.

They get the impression in three ways—from something we see, feel or hear—and send it along to the nerve center. From there it is sent along other nerves connected with certain muscles or glands and excites them to activity.

The nerves are like so many electric wires, and the sensory nerves act as a battery, by means of which the electric currents of life are transmitted. The muscles have the power to express the state of gladness, indicated by laughter, according to the positiveness of the impressions passed along the nerves which operate them. You laugh less heartily the second time you hear a funny story because the impression is less positive. — Rocky Mountain News.

MARKED GROWTH OF FEDERATION

Annual Reports of Missionary Societies Show Much Progress During Year.

THE SEASON'S PROGRAM

Interesting Resume of Activities of Women Who Are Working in the Interest of Foreign and Home Missions.

The year just completed marks the close of the third year of the federation's service. During the year there have been fewer business meetings than formerly—but perhaps, during these times of stress, when our hands and hearts have been overfull, the concentrating of the forces and organization of the federation in its meetings for worship has been wise. Under the influences, and as a result of the labors of the two preceding years, the work has gone on quietly under the care of the two standing committees of the federation, directed by their efficient chairmen, following on the same lines as heretofore. The increased attendance at many meetings—particularly those arranged for prayer—and the spirit of interest and devotion in those meetings testify to the good results of former years' work.

The enrollment of Warren chapel in the list of churches represented in the federation, while rightly belonging to the past year, has been a sign of the growth of the federation; and the co-operation of the societies of that church, through its membership in the two standing committees records its interest and helpful work.

There has been one business meeting of the federation during the year, seven general meetings and two meetings of the executive committee. Postals have been sent out for all the general meetings, to all the churches in the federation, and to the churches in the towns east and west, from Westfield to Somerville.

At the last annual meeting a recommendation that the wording of Resolution IV be changed, was considered, but the matter was left over until the next meeting. Accordingly, a meeting was called by the president on April 1, where, after due deliberations the suggested change was adopted, and the method of choosing the chairmen of the two standing committees was changed from appointive to elective.

At this meeting, the very kind offer of Miss Elizabeth Chadbourne to give a lecture under the auspices of the federation on April 9, entitled "The Twentieth Century Woman and the Bible," was announced and her offer acepted with thanks. Those who heard Miss Chadbourne will recall her plea for a more intimate and consistent knowledge of the word of God and the plea for the ordering of the life and conduct of the Twentieth Century woman on its teachings. That there were three needful things to uplift this woman to a place of higher usefulness—to know the Bible, to meditate on the Bible, and prayer.

Following the custom of the two preceding years, and in accordance with the plan laid out by the Home Missions committee, of which Miss Julia J. Noll was chairman, a most interesting and devotional observance of Home Missions Week was held by the Federation the week of November 15 to 21. Under the subject, "Social Force of Christian Missions," a program for daily prayer at home that "All social forces may come under the leadership of Christ," was arranged.

On Wednesday morning, at the Y. M. C. A. Hall, Mrs. Whiton presiding, a prayer meeting was held, which was splendidly attended. To quote one much interested—"everyone felt it was good to have been there." At this meting reports were made by persons representing the different phases of social service in Plainfield. The work of the Rescue Mission was given by Mr. LeMatty; the Open-Air School by Dr. Clara DeHart Krans; the Italian Mission by Mrs. Poinier, and the night school by Mrs. Wardner. Mrs. D. H. Rowland made a most interesting address on "The Home."

Thursday afternoon, November 19, a general interdenominational meeting was held in Trinity Reformed church. Mrs. Rice presided. It was most unfortunate that, owing to a severe rain storm, so few attended this meeting to hear the fine and forceful address by Mrs. Ida Vose Woodbury. Her subject was "The Test of Democracy." This service was dignified by the presence and participation of the pastor of Trinity church and the assistance of other clergymen.

At the Children's Rally in Y. M. C. A. Hall on Friday afternoon, an attempt was made to have the children representing the various Sunday-schools of our churches attend in a body, sitting under the Sunday-school banners, with an older person in charge. The meeting was well attended; the children—old and young—showing a lively appreciation of, and interest in, the pictures explained by Mr. Harris, and in the Indian baskets, blankets and headgear he had brought to exhibit.

For the first time and in compliance with the resolution by the federation on March 21, 1914, "That the Day of Prayer for Foreign Missions be assumed by the Federation, as is the Day of Prayer for Home Missions," a very impressive service of prayer and devotion was held in the parish house of the Church of the Holy Cross, North Plainfield, on Thursday, January 21. An attendance of one hundred women attested the interest the subject held for so many and the very devotional and spiritual character of the meeting was most inspiring. This meeting was unique in its way, and the federation can do no better work than the promotion of just such meetings.

On February 25 the Interdenominational Day of Prayer for Home Missions was observed by a meeting in Temple Baptist church. This meeting also was very well attended. The subject, "Our National Heritage," provided a program for especially interesting and impressive readings and prayer. The large number present could not but share the earnestness of the leaders.

The general meeting arranged by the Foreign Missionary committee and held in the Crescent Avenue church on Tuesday, March 2, brought to a close the public work for the year. Mrs. Sherwood Eddy, who had just returned from a missionary tour in Eastern lands, was the speaker, and told of her wonderful experiences in China, likening the changes there, through the introduction of Christian teaching, to miracles and justifying the title of her address, "Miracles in Modern China." When we hear of these changes Christianity has brought about, how can we doubt the beneficience of Foreign Missions, or question the command, "Go ye out into all the world, etc." In connection with Mrs. Eddy's visit to Plainfield, it is interesting to record that she refused absolutely to accept a $25 check that the federation usually gives to its speakers. She also refused travelling expenses. Thereupon, at Mrs. Eddy's request, it was suggested that the check be sent to the first Christian college for women at Nanking, China. This college, called the Jin Ling Union College for Women, is interdenominational. Jin Ling is the old and sacred Chinese name for Nanking.

In February, the president, Mrs. Rice, appointed the nomipating committee. It is composed as follows:

Mrs. Daniel Rapalje, chairman, Trinity Reformed church; Mrs. E. J. Lee, Monroe Avenue M. E. church; Mrs. E. P. Suffern, Congregational church; Mrs. H. A. Pope, First Presbyterian church; Mrs. E. Vicars Stevenson, Grace P. E. church; Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman, Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

Also the following names of the auditing committee: Mrs. G. H. Batchelor, First Baptist church; Mrs. F. L. Greene, Hope chapel.

The secretary wishes to thank the officers of the federation for their courtesy and assistance; the chairmen of the standing committees for their consideration in so promptly and fully furnishing the matter for notices, and the members of the committees for publishing the same in their several churches. The members of the press have very kindly published notices from time to time and the secretary takes pleasure in acknowledging their courtesy. The services of a typist have been employed occasionally, and the secretary gratefully records her appreciations of this provision of the federation.

Respectfully submitted,
EMMA W. TITUS, Secretary.
Plainfield, N. J., March 22, 1915.

The treasurer reports total receipts, $169.49; total expenses, $128; balance on hand March 22, 1915, $41.49.

GERMAN CIVIL COURTS.

Mode of Procedure Where Commercial Cases Are Tried.

The "handelsgericht," or commercial court, is presided over by one judge and two laymen known as "handelsrichter"—commercial judges nominated by commercial bodies and appointed by the government. Any German is eligible who is registered as a merchant, thirty years old, and otherwise qualified as specially provided by law. Only commercial cases are sent to this department, upon motion of either party. I witnessed a trial between merchants and was much pleased with the speedy method of determining the case.

Instead of submitting technical business questions to a jury, who in all probability never heard of the like before, and then offering the testimony of experts on each side of the case, which often has a tendency to confuse the jury rather than to enlighten them, the German commercial judges possess personal experience in business and skill in affairs of commerce of the greatest value in arriving at correct conclusions. Besides, the procedure, as a rule, is brief and to the point and causes little delay to the litigants. So far as I could observe, this system worked very satisfactorily. —Fred H. Peterson in Case and Comment.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Thickness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray or dry, scraggly and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of mess.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.—Adv.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a Glass of Salts if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Troubles You.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.—Adv.

FORMER PLAINFIELDER DIES AT PROVIDENCE, R. I.

James Owens, a former resident of this city, died Monday at Providence, R. I., following a five days' illness with pneumonia. He was forty-nine years old and was a native of Hampton, Hunterdon county, although he lived for many years at Raritan. He was at one time a keeper at the New Jersey State prison at Trenton. Mr. Owens left Plainfield to go to Providence, where he had a foreman's position in one of the large carpet manufacturers. He was a cousin to Councilor John P. Owens, of East Second street.

Mr. Owens is survived by two sisters, Mrs. William Case and Miss Nora Owens, of Lee place. The body has been brought to Mrs. Case's home and the funeral will be held in St. Mary's church tomorrow morning at 8:45. Burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

A LILY FAIR ON EASTER DAY

DANCING IN CHURCH.

Forms a Part of the Easter Services In the Cathedral of Seville.

This cathedral at Seville has the distinction of being the only church in Christendom where dancing forms any part of any ceremony or service. Here a dance called the "Dance of the Seises," is performed before the high altar during holy week. It is in imitation of the dance of the Israelites before the Ark of the Covenant, and even in Spain is of very ancient origin. Imagine the cathedral on such an occasion crowded with people, seated and standing. In front of all the others are several rows of priests and church dignitaries, all in gorgeous vestments, who inclose a fair sized open place before the high altar. A piece of carpet covers the marble floor, on either side of which stands a row of boys from eight to twelve years of age, dressed like Spanish gentlemen of the middle ages, with white stockings and a large plume in the hat. At a signal from a priest the soft music of violins breaks the profound silence of the church and the boys proceed to execute several pretty and graceful figures. Later they join in a gentle and harmonious song, which in the obscurity of the vast cathedral sounds like a choir of angels, and finally they accompany dance and song with their castanets.

Two centuries and over ago an archbishop of Seville desired to put an end to this ceremony, thinking it unbecoming the church and the Master in heaven. But the people of Seville thought otherwise and were determined not to give it up without a struggle. The case was finally appealed to Rome. The pope of that day, thinking to appease the people of Seville and at the same time put an end to the dancing, gave his permission for the ceremony to be continued on condition that the dance should be given up as soon as the suits, which the boys then had, were worn out. What resulted? The suits have never been worn out. From time to time they have been skillfully repaired with a piece here and a piece there, and now, after two centuries, the suits are still as good as new, and the dance is still given.

NATURE herself gives to humanity her choicest treasures when she clothes the world with grass and flowers at Eastertide. This awakening brings a promise of beauty to last for many months. All mankind hails with joy the dawning of the Easter morn. New hopes arise in the deep, hidden springs of the heart, new joys lend brightness to the eye and color to the cheek, and new love radiates the entire being, working its wondrous miracles upon whomsoever it descends. The highest type of love is the unselfish, sacrificing variety, and to attain this unalloyed quality we must give.

Plainfield, N. J., March 30, 1915.

A LAW-BURDENED PEOPLE.

When it was announced in 191 that Congress, during the fourteen years previous to that time, had created 17,380 laws, an enterprisin arithmetician calculated that "a citizen would have to stop work an read studiously fourteen or fifteen hours a day every day in the year to know all the laws that might affect him."

According to a count made in the Library of Congress more recently, our Federal and State legislature passed 62,014 statutes during the five years from 1909 to 1913 inclusive. Even greater than this multiplicity of laws was the vast mass of decisions of courts of last resort Federal and State, which, during the same five years, reached the enormous total of 65,379 and now fill 6" volumes.

And yet ignorance of the law—in a thousand volumes—does not excuse. In our day of statute making by the rapid-fire process Thomas Jefferson would have found greater reason than ever for declaring that the country is governed best that is governed least and for opposing multiplicity of laws. Not the least discouraging feature of it all is the certainty that our statesmen of the "ultra-progressive" variety may countless new laws still up their sleeves, not a few of them revolutionary invasions of the citizen's rights.

If our laws are legion now, what is to be expected when, in times to come, women are sent to legislative bodies by their balloting sisters and enthusiastically apply themselves to the fascinating business of piling up the statutes? Their efforts to make man over and thrust into him a thousand virtues by means of the policeman's club seemed to be ominously foreshadowed by Mrs. Pankhurst's confession that women want the ballot in order to "make men chaste." It may be confidently expected that women more than men will become addicted to the habit of making new laws aimed at every evil or inconvenience in sight, thus adding enormously to the great mass of statutes which—without previous discussion and criticism of the proper kind—have been enacted in haste only to be repealed or to become forgotten dead letter.

HARD WORKED OFFICIALS.

Governor Fielder with his signature last week made into law an act abolishing the deputy clerkship of the Supreme Court, a $3,600 office. In these days of promised economy on the part of the Republicans, the people naturally expect such legislation, but the surprising part of the act under discussion is that it was passed at the earnest behest of Eugene Cowell, a Democrat, who held the job. After drawing his salary for a couple of years, Mr. Cowell decided that it hurt his conscience to so do, for he did nothing to earn the money, his principal duty being to sign papers in the absence of the clerk, who was enjoying a sinecure at $6,000 a year.

Now the head of the department is very much upset because he will have to be on hand all of the time and sign papers which formerly were taken care of by the deputy. He is even reported to have protested that by the abolition of the office the Legislature and Governor have made it imperative that he stay home from the Panama-Pacific Exposition. This he considers a real hardship, especially as the Democrats are taking good care of the faithful from this State in the handsome building which has been erected on the Exposition grounds.

All of this has caused the New Brunswick Times to aptly inquire "Whats the use of drawing a $6,000 salary from the State if you haven't a deputy to do your work, so you can enjoy yourself on the $6,000?" We suppose that he will resign this nice little plum so that he can go West and also will not have his private practice of the law interfered with in the process of drawing his pay. And then again, we suppose he will not. $6,000 a year is a whole lot of money in these hard times, and some people want it so bad that they are willing to earn it if they are forced to.

It must be admitted that the local "movie" war is adding to the gayety of the city. Three houses all showing the same picture on the same day certainly creates an unusual situation.

One of the redeeming features of the war is the fact that the Russians have changed the name of Przemysl to Peremysl, and have authorized its pronunciation the same way it is spelled.

BALLOTS POURING IN AS IF FAIRY QUEEN AIDED CONTESTANTS

Another Counting Tonight May Show More Changes in Standing of Entrants in Press Race—Last Week for Special Prizes.

First Prize.
$100.00 Diamond Solitaire Ring.

Second Prize.
Merchandise Certificate, good for $25.00 in trade at Woodhull & Martin Co., 163 East Front street, and $15.00 in gold.

Third Prize.
$35.00 Solid Gold Wrist Watch.

SPECIAL NOTICE!

The newspaper ballots, those cut from the paper, must be voted before 8 p. m., Saturday, April 3rd, to be counted. This is in accordance with the rules of the contest which states that subscription ballots only will be counted or accepted during the last two weeks of the contest.

Tonight is counting night again and the ballot box will be opened at 8 p. m. and the count for Thursday's vote exhibit will be made. Many times in the past, the attention of candidates and their friends has been called to the necessity of trimming ballots cut from the Press along the border line, also that these ballots must not be thrown into the ballot box unless pinned or tied together. Up to date the Contest Department has trimmed and collected scattered votes, but the task is so great and so much time is lost in so doing, that from this time on, all loose ballots and untrimmed ballots will be thrown out uncounted. It is much easier for candidates and their friends to attend to these details than the Contest Department and if the above is not carried out it no doubt will result in a loss of votes to candidates.

Ballots Pouring In.

From the way the many candidates for the special prizes and the free tours across the continent, offered by the Press, continue to accumulate ballots, one is almost led to believe that they belong to that favored class whose interest and destiny are watched over by some fairy godmother.

Wonderful things have been done by fairy godmothers in ages past. To the uninitiated it does not require a great stretch of fancy to ascribe the success of many of the candidates to the enchantment of some fair queen.

Those who are initiated in the mysteries of the case, however, realize that the cause of the candidates wonderful accomplishments must be sought elsewhere than in fairyland. The explanation is quite simple and practical, indeed. It is simply a matter of the appreciation of time and a thorough understanding of the most effective way to utilize it.

Everything indicates that there are few, if any, people who understand better the value of a moment and how to turn it to profitable account than do the fair contestants for the Press' Free Transcontinental Tours.

Shake-ups in Standing.

Yesterday's vote standing showed indications of a shake-up in some districts. Positions were shifted, leaders deposed, unknowns have climbed to a high standing and this announcement told the story of progress and enthusiasm as well as determination to retain their position, which determination will not be greater than that of the deposed leaders to regain the honored places.

The welcome cry of "Glad-U-Kum" that permeates the Tour Contest territory this week will be changed to "Glad-U-Won" on Saturday, April 3rd, when the special prize period will come to an end.

Seemingly all days look alike to the vote getting spirit.

Perhaps it is because "the time is soon to be called and then the victor will claim the spoils.

"But the winner won't claim that trip without a vast amount of activity," remarked one of the contestants yesterday. "She will have to go some, and ALL the way to win."

Candidates Must Hustle.

Only votes issued on paid-in-advance subscriptions turned in between midnight, Wednesday, March 17, and 10 p. m., April 3, will count for the special prizes. No ballots cut from the Press will count for these prizes, but will be accepted and will count for the tours.

BARNUM AND BAILEY'S CIRCUS OPENS THURSDAY

The Barnum and Bailey Circus will inaugurate the season of 1915 at Madison Square Garden, New York, Thursday evening. The management of this great amusement enterprise will present a program of wonderful performances that will uphold, in every respect, the title of "The Greatest Show on Earth." From a standpoint of magnitude it will eclipse anything of its kind ever shown in New York city or any other part of the civilized world.

The big, new spectacular pageant, "Lalla Rookh," in which twelve hundred characters take part, will be a fitting introduction to the wonderful performances to follow. The circus proper, presented in three rings, two stages, the great hippodrome oval and in the dome of the enormous building, will disclose a wonderful array of arenic talent.

The entire world has been scoured by the Barnum and Bailey agents, so that this year more sensational novelties will be shown than ever before. Chief among these are "The Five Riding Hannafords," three women and two men, whose wonderful feats in horsemanship has never been equalled; "The Paldrens," sensational balancing, pyramiding and head jumping on the tops of burning lamps; Barnum and Bailey Posing Horses, wonderful living equine statues, grouped into beautiful tableaux and shown on revolving pedestals; Madam Bradna's Flying Horse; Bird Milman's dancing on the tight wire; Mlle. Adgie and her group of wonderfully educated African lions; four troupes of Chinese acrobats; "Pallenberg's Wonder Bears," which ride on bicycles, skate on rollers and do acrobatic stunts just like human beings; Ce-Dora, most daring girl in the world, in her nerve-racking motorcycle riding in the Golden Globe; 15-minute Champion Wild West, a condensed version of the big frontier show, which usually follows the circus engagement at the Garden, will be introduced in the regular Barnum and Bailey program by thirty champions of the West. Barnum and Bailey's new innovation in animal training, the first and only lady elephant trainers. They present their wonderful troupes of War Elephants at every performance.

Residents of Plainfield and vicinity must take advantage of the New York engagement in order to see the circus this year, as no exhibition will be given in New Jersey.

CHECKERBOARD TAFFETA IN A MILITARY STYLE.

The woman who desires a silk frock smart yet simple could not do better than copy this model of checkerboard taffeta in black and white. The ripple skirt is bordered in 1830 style with a quilling of ribbon in scalloped design. The bodice opens over a vest of pale blue crepe and the two belts, one dropping loosely, are a smart detail of trimming.

A few cents for a Press want ad and some one who needs the very article that lies rotting in your garret will call and pay you for it.

You are better off—new owner is pleased—and the article itself is contributing to the reduction of the high cost of living.

The departure of the cook or maid does not prostrate the lady who knows the efficiency of Press want ads.

SPORT FORUM

Dear Sir: After reading the article published in the sporting page of a local paper by Daniel F. McNamee, captain of the Plainfield High School basketball team, charging me with breaking an agreement with the P. H. S. manager regarding the playing of the third and deciding game for the city championship, I wish to emphatically deny ever making such an agreement with Mr. Zelmas. This statement comes as a great surprise as the school manager refused to make arrangements for this game when asked to before the second match which was played in the Y. M. C. A. gym and won by the association team, tying up the series.

Several days before this game took place I saw Mr. Zelmas and also called him several times on the telephone, asking him to make arrangements for the third contest. He continually put me off by saying, "There may not be any third game and all arrangements would be useless." Since the school members have seen fit to charge me with breaking an agreement I might likewise return the same charge by stating that Mr. Zelmas said, whether in earnest or fun, I do not know, that the third game, if necessary, would be staged on a neutral court. He denies this, and as his word is as good as mine, nothing can be gained by wrangling forever on that subject.

In the article published yesterday by the P. H. S. leader, he admits that the association team has a just claim as city champions. If that is the case, and P. H. S. was the challenger, as is also admitted, why should the Y. M. C. A. management sit down with folded hands and allow the manager of the Ninth street institution to dictate the terms of the third game? P. H. S. should have been the one to take that position, but instead proclaimed that it was "a toss up or nothing."

Now that I have presented my side of the argument, done only in self defense, I trust that it may be the ending of this affair which has been far from pleasant to me and all of the association team and officials. Thanking you for the space allotted me, I remain,

Yours in sport,
F. O. DUNNING, Jr.
Manager Plainfield Y. M. C. A. basketball team.

Sporting Editor:

The writer is trying to promote a baseball league composed of leading manufacturing concerns in Northern New Jersey to be called "Manufacturer's Basball League." So far we have entered the following teams: Star Electric Company, of Newark; Singer Mfg. Co., of Elizabeth, and Babcock & Wilcox, of Bayonne. Entries pending: Splitdorf Electric Co., Newark, and Raritan Copper Works, Perth Amboy.

We are anxious to interest some concern in your city and we appeal to you to help us in this matter. Can you give us the names of concerns who you think would be interested, and who have ball teams that can put up a first class attraction and having home grounds, on which they can play Saturdays or Sundays?

Hoping that we will receive a favorable answer, to allow us to communicate with the interested teams, early enough to notify them of the next meeting to be held at the Burkely Hotel in Elizabeth next Friday evening, April 2, at 8.30, and thanking you for your kind consideration, we remain

Yours very truly,
Star Electric Co.,
MARK W. STOLL.

"CHINK" GIRLS TO LINEUP AGAINST MALE PERFORMERS

If the sale of tickets is taken as a criterion, the attendance at the Chi Gamma Chi versus St. Joseph Boys' Club basketball game on Friday night, April 9, at the Columbus Club, will be unusually large. The girls have been practicing regularly and expect to put up a fine fight although the male members of the club say they will have no difficulty in defeating the suffragettes, even though crippled. At the conclusion of the game dancing will be enjoyed by those present.

The two teams will probably line-up as follows:

Chi Gamma Chi	S. Joseph's
"Jack" Daly	Moulton
Forward.
"Mac" McCullough	McDonough
Forward.
"Mary" McCullough	Denny
Center.
"Pete" McGinnes	Bryniarski
Guard.
"Frank" Newman	Carty
Guard.

ALL OFF FOR ELIZABETH.

The Eagle bowlers are scheduled to play the T. A. B. five, of Elizabeth, at that place tonight. The Elizabeth pinners won the game in this city and the Eagles are out for revenge. A special trolley will carry the team and rooteers, leaving the trolley station at 6:45 o'clock.

BOROUGH MATCHES.

The first matches of the week in the borough bowling tourney will be played tonight.

PARK CLUB JUNIORS WANT ANOTHER CRACK AT ELKS

The second series of matches between the Junior bowling teams of the Park and Elks' Clubs, will take place on the latter's alleys Thursday night and dancing will follow the match. A large crowd from both clubs is expected and many ladies will undoubtedly be present for the excitement. The "Bills" have won five out of the six games played to date, but the Park pinners asked for another series because in the last match they had two substitutes in and the Elks easily won three games.

Both teams will have their regular lineups Thursday and Chauncey Stout will play in place of Charles Woolston, who is on the sick list.

ART VOORHEES WON SIX ROLLS FROM WALTER VAIL

"Art" Voorhees, of the borough, who is a contestant in the Borough One Man Bowling Tournament, now being held on Gates' Somerset street alleys, and Walter "Quaker" Vail, a member of the Elks' Senior team, played a series of games on the borough lanes, last night, Voorhees taking six out of the first nine games rolled. Vail won the first, third and eighth games, and lost out on several close ones.

Vail's first win was 174 to 169, but his opponent came back in the next game and won by a single pin, the counts being 157 to 156. The sixth game was the best of all. Voorhees getting a 245 and Vail making it an even 200. The Elk pinner's last win came when he hit the pins for 209 against his opponent's 163. The scores follow:

PATERSON SERIES WILL CLOSE Y. M. H. A. SEASON

The Y. M. H. A. basketball team, of this city, will take a trip to Paterson Thursday night and meet the Y. M. H. A team of that place. These teams have not met yet this season and a good game is looked for. The trip will be made by automobile and a large number of "rooters" will accompany the team. "Hymie" Abrams, who played guard on the team until a week ago, will not play again this year and his place will be taken by Reimer, of New York. Those who will probably play are Rosenson and Canter, forwards; Hirsch, center, and Schwartz and Reimer, guards.

A return game with Paterson is being arranged by Manager Oliner for next Tuesday night in Columbus Club. This will be the final game of the season for the local Y. M. H. A. team.

ANCHOR PINNERS WON FROM WASHINGTONS

First and Last Games of Last Night's Match Go to Local Pinners.

The Anchor team of the Masonic Bowling League, won two games from Washington, last night, losing the middle roll. The scores of the first game were 819 to 700 in favor of the local team, but in the second, Washington reversed the count and made it 819 to 774.

In the deciding game the Anchor pinners rolled at their best and made three good scores. They were: Mason, 209; Vail, 200, and Cose, 229.

LEMONADE AT BALL GAMES; GOODBYE BALL PLAYERS

Funds were appropriated by the Girls' Athletic Association of the North Plainfield High School, at a meeting held yesterday afternoon, for medals for the members of the championship basketball team. They will be in the form of basketballs and will be of gold. There will be seven purchased. Those who will receive them are the Misses Marjorie Burtis, captain; Lillian Spencer, manager; Elsie Debele, Rose Cooper, Lucy Douglas, Bertha Keller and Theresa McCullough.

All of the members of the squad, including the Misses Madeline Blair, business manager; Marguerite Barkalew and Adelaide Ricketts, will be awarded insignias by the association. At the meeting it was also voted that the girls' association should have a lemonade stand at Hyde Oval for the home games of the baseball team and the receipts will be placed in the fund for the new gym.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

The most wonderful achievement yet in photo drama, George Kleine's marvelous production of "Quo Vadis," adapted from Henry Sienkiewicz's novel of the same title and made by the famous Italian company, the Cines, will be the attraction at the Plainfield Theatre tomorrow and Thursday afternoon and night. This glorious series of pictures makes up a complete evening's entertainment and visualizes all the principal episodes of the famous novel from which it was taken. It embraces romance, tragedy, and history, and is the most veracious and instructive photo drama before the public. Every student of history and the Bible should enjoy it and glean the values so admirably illustrated of the causes that brought about the fall of Rome and the rise of Christianity under the most hostile and pagan opposition.

Another big feature picture at the Plainfield Theatre this week will be "The Sign of the Cross," which is scheduled for Friday and Saturday. It will be shown at this playhouse at popular prices, something that has not been done since the film was released. In addition to "The Ghost Breakers," today's five-part photo-play, the first episode of "The Black Box," the thrilling detective serial film will be displayed at all performances. If you wish to follow a picture that will hold you intensely interested from week to week make certain to see the initial installment today.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The famous Charles Chaplin, who has not only set Plainfield, but all America laughing heartily, will again be at Proctor's Theatre today. He will be featured in another of those two-reel comedies like "The Champion," which was shown Saturday, and "In the Park." Today's scream will be different than its predecessors and it is guaranteed to entangle Mr. Chaplin in even more ludicrous situations than those which made the people howl Saturday and yesterday.

Beside the Chaplin picture, the five part World Film photo-play "Miliss," will be on today's bill. It pleased large audiences yesterday afternoon and last night. Tomorrow the picturization of Jack London's "Burning Daylight" is to be the special offering and on Thursday George Randolph Chester's "The Making of Bobby Burnit."

The Proctor program always includes five high class vaudeville acts, giving the patrons the greatest value for the money there is in the city. The bill today is made up of five "Komical Kops," a comedy singing and talking offering with a special set. David Irwin and Joseph Herg, the two popular minstrel boys in a talking and singing novelty, "The Musical Chef," an absolutely original comedy musical act; Gilbert and Barrett, two feminine comediennes with song and chatter, and Brown and McCormick, novelty soft shoe and acrobatic dancing.

BEST BONEHEAD PLAY AS TOLD BY BANCROFT.

"Take it from me," said Frank Bancroft, secretary of the Cincinnati Reds, while some of the athletes were discussing famous bonehead plays recently, "the old timers pulled some bones that had all you youngsters blocked off the map. Best I recollect right now was sprung by Miah Murray when he was catching for me at Worcester about thirty-five years ago. With a runner on first, Miah steamed back to the stand and made a magnificent catch of a foul fly.

PACES CORBETT'S WHITE HOPE IN AN AUTO

Fights may come and fights may go, but Billy Shannon's San Rafael training camp will go on forever. The camp that has made many a boxer famous is not to be barred and locked just because the professional game in California was swamped under a host of votes. Shannon thinks there are plenty of ambitious chaps who still want to don the gloves, and he will keep open house for them.

Just now he has in tow Tom Cowler, otherwise and better known as Jim Corbett's white hope. When Corbett started on his southern vaudeville tour he left Cowler in charge of Shannon and gave his novice strict orders to follow Billy's instructions.

Accordingly, Shannon has been indulging himself as a manager. Shannon, it should be explained, recently purchased an automobile, and now that he is proficient in the operation, he is pacing Cowler in his daily runs.

"Great stuff," says Shannon. "I can make him go just as fast or as slow as I want to. Besides, I know just what is happening all the time, and it doesn't wear me out."

HE IS A REAL CHAMPION.

Kid Williams Should Be Popular Idol, but He Isn't.

Considering his great work in the ring and since winning the bantamweight championship, Kid Williams has made remarkably few friends. It is hard to account for this. According to all precedent, the Baltimore viking should have the fistic world at his feet, for he is the only champion who is doing any real work worth mentioning.

In the ring Williams takes all sorts of chances. He has more fighting ability to the square inch than any other boxer of today of any degree or class. When he jumps through the ropes he seems to forget that he has a title to lose. Instead of playing safe, the one object is to land a crusher with the very least delay possible. And the number of times he succeeds is really remarkable when it is considered that he is a member of the lightest class.

If Williams were merely a crude slugger his reckless way of risking his title would be less worthy of note. But he is a clever boxer when he cares to play the game that way. Terry McGovern, Battling Nelson, Ad Wolgast and others of that type, who are constantly referred to as ideal champions, were hard fighters, but they knew no other way of milling.

Had they been adepts at the hit and get away style they might not have been so willing to make a fight of all their bouts. Williams, having two courses to choose from, deserves all the more credit.

BLUEJACKET'S FREAK RECORD

Brooklyn Feds' Twirler Gets Credit For Win Without Pitching Ball.

Jim Bluejacket, the Indian twirler of the Brooklyn Federals, is said to be the only pitcher in baseball history who ever got credit for a victory without pitching a ball.

It happened late last summer when the Brookfeds were playing the Pittsburgh Rebels. Bluejacket was ordered to the mound as a relief twirler in the ninth inning when his own club was behind. The Rebels had two out when Bluejacket took up his duties. Steve Yerkes, the Pittsburgh second baseman, was on first. Bluejacket saw him taking a long lead and heaved the ball to first. Yerkes was caught, making it three out. During their session at the bat the Brookfeds pounded out enough runs to win the game.

Bluejacket got credit for the victory, in keeping with the rules, as his club was behind when he went into the box.

On Easter Morn

On Easter morn
The softened winds to every quickened ear
Breathe music sweet, telling the time of year.
All nature sings, and in glad antiphon,
Blent with the organ's tone,
The voice of man in praise to heaven is borne.

With April's fairest offerings we adorn
Our altars, embleming eternal spring
O'er winter triumphing,
And good o'er evil, joyousness o'er gloom—
Yea, life o'er death, Christ risen from the tomb
On Easter morn.

Before the First Easter Day

On Palm Sunday each year the minds of millions of Christians the world over are occupied with thoughts of a scene in Jerusalem.

On the eastern spur of the Mount of Olives lies the little town of Bethany, a few furlongs away from Jerusalem. On the memorable morning of his entrance into the city Jesus secured near Bethany the donkey upon which he made his memorable journey to Jerusalem. The occasion was the feast of the Passover, and pilgrims from Galilee and eastern Judea, the localities in which his ministry had been performed, accompanied him upon the journey. As they beheld him riding on an ass (the royal beast in the days of David) the hopes of the multitude were suddenly revived. Quickly the news of his coming spread through the long lines of pilgrims. Those ahead tore palm branches from the trees by the wayside, while others spread their garments and cloaks along the way on which he was to pass, while they all joined in a triumphant song:

Hosanna to the son of David!
Blessed is he who cometh in the name of the Lord!
Hosanna in the highest!

Slowly the procession came around the southern end of the Mount of Olives, with the gorge of the Kedron to the south, until the wonderful city of Jerusalem burst into view. Then, descending into the valley, Jesus entered the city through this gate in the midst of a cheering multitude of people, who waved their palm branches before him. Just as the sun was setting behind the hills he found his way to the temple. He sought not a waiting throne, but a quiet place for worship. Then in the hush of the evening, refusing to give any encouragement to the selfish material hopes of the populace, he quietly returned to his humble home in Bethany.

The gate, as we see it today, is entirely sealed. Many hundred years after Christ had passed through it the city fell into the hands of the Turks, and it was their belief and fear that our Lord Jesus was about to return and re-enter the city through this gate. It was not their will that he do this, and they believed that by sealing it up in this manner his coming would be prevented, and so it remains to this day, the Sealed Golden gate, the most remarkable and interesting Biblical landmark in the world.

CHAPTER VIII.

"The count—my husband."

MY face fell.

She couldn't have been a day over twenty-two. But she had a baby!

Facing me once more, she said:

"Doubtless you are very much puzzled by my presence in this gloomy old castle. You have been asking yourself a thousand questions about me, and you have been shocked by my outrageous impositions upon your good nature. I am here, Mr. Smart, because it is the last place in the world where my husband would be likely to look for me."

"Your husband? Look for you?"

"Yes. I shall be quite frank with you. My husband and I have separated. A provisional divorce was granted, however, just seven months ago. The final decree cannot be issued for one year."

"But why should you hide from him?"

"The—the court gave him the custody of our child during the probationary year. I—I have run away with her. They are looking for me everywhere. That is why I came here. Do you understand?"

I was stunned. "Then, I take it, the court granted him the divorce and not you?" I said, experiencing a sudden chill about the heart. "You were deprived of the child, I see. Dear me!"

"You are mistaken," she said, a flash in her eyes. "It was an Austrian court. The count—my husband, I should say—is an Austrian subject. His interests must be protected." She said this with a sneer on her pretty lips. "You see, my father, knowing him now for what he really is, has refused to pay over to him something like a million dollars, still due for the marriage settlement. The count contends that it is a just and legal debt, and the court supports him to this extent. The child is to be his until the debt is cleared up, or something to that effect. I really don't understand the legal complications involved. Perhaps it were better if I did."

"I see," said I, scornful in spite of myself. "One of those happy international marriages where a bride is thrown in for good measure with a couple of millions. Won't we ever learn?"

"That's it precisely," she said, with the utmost calmness and candor. "American dollars and an American girl in exchange for a title, a lot of debts and a ruined life."

"And they always turn out just this way. What a lot of blithering fools we have in the land of the free and the home of the knave!"

"My father objected to the whole arrangement from the first, so you must not speak of him as a knave," she protested. "He doesn't like counts and such things."

"I am not asking for pity."

"I don't see that it helps matters. I can hardly substitute the word 'brave' for the one I used," said I, trying to conceal my disgust.

"Please don't misunderstand me, Mr. Smart," she said haughtily. "I am not asking for pity. I made my bed, and I shall lie in it. The only thing I ask of you is—well, kindness."

She seemed to falter again, and once more I was at her feet, figuratively speaking.

"You are in distress, in dread of something, madame," I cried. "Consider me your friend."

She shook her head ruefully. "You poor man! You don't know what you are in for, I fear. Wait till I have told you everything. Three weeks ago I laid myself liable to imprisonment and heaven knows what else by abducting my little girl. That is really what it comes to—abduction. The court has ordered my arrest, and all sorts of police persons are searching high and low for me. Now don't you see your peril? If they find me here you will be in a dreadful predicament. You will be charged with criminal complicity, or whatever it is called, and—Oh, it will be frightfully unpleasant for you, Mr. Smart!"

My expression must have convicted me. She couldn't help seeing the dismay in my face. So she went on quite humbly:

"Of course you have but to act at once and all may be well for you. I—I will go if you—if you command me to"—

I struck my knee forcibly. "What do you take me for, madame? Hang the consequences! If you feel that you are safe here—that is, comparatively safe—stay!"

"It will be terrible if you get into trouble with the law," she murmured in distress. "I—I really don't know what might happen to you. Indeed, I do not."

Suddenly a horrible thought struck me with stunning force.

"Don't tell me that your—your husband is the man who owned this castle up to a week ago," I cried. "Count James Hohendahl?"

She shook her head. "No. He is not the man." Seeing that I waited for her to go on, she resumed: "I know Count James quite well, however. He is my husband's closest friend."

"Good heaven," said I, in quick alarm. "That complicates matters, doesn't it? He may come here at any time."

"It isn't likely, Mr. Smart. To be perfectly honest with you, I waited until I heard you had bought the castle before coming here myself. We were in hiding at the house of a friend in Linz up to a week ago."

"May I inquire, madame," said I, stiffly, "how you came to select my abode as your hiding place?"

"Oh, I have forgotten to tell you that we lived here one whole summer just after we were married. Count Hohendahl let us have the castle for our—our honeymoon. He was here a great deal of the time. All sorts of horrid, nasty, mobbish people were here to help us enjoy our honeymoon. I shall never forget that dreadful summer. My only friends were the Schmicks. You see they were in the family ages and ages before I was born."

"The family? What family?"

"The Rothhoefen family. Haven't they told you that my great-grandmother was a Rothhoefen? No? Well she was. I belong to the third generation of American born descendants. Doesn't it simplify matters, knowing this?"

"Immensely," said I, in something of a daze.

"And so I came here, Mr. Smart, where hundreds of my ancestors spent their honeymoons, most of them perhaps as unhappily as I, and where I knew a fellow countryman was to live for awhile in order to get a plot for a new story. You see, I thought I might be a great help to you in the shape of suggestion."

She smiled very warmly, and I thought it was a very neat way of putting it. Naturally it would be quite impossible to put her out after hearing that she had already put herself out to some extent in order to assist me.

"I can supply the villain for your story if you need one, and I can give you oceans of ideas about noblemen. I am sorry that I can't give you a nice, sweet heroine. People hate heroines after they are married and live unhappily. You—

"The public taste is changing," I interrupted quickly. "Unhappy marriages are so common nowadays that the women who go into 'em are always heroines. People like to read about suffering and anguish among the rich, too. Besides, you are a countess. That puts you near the first rank among heroines. Don't you think it would be proper at this point to tell me who you are?"

She regarded me steadfastly for a moment, and then shook her head.

"I'd rather not tell you my name, Mr. Smart. It really can't matter, you know. I've thought it all out very carefully, and I've decided that it is not best for you to know. You see if you don't know who it is you are sheltering the courts can't hold you to account. You will be quite innocent of deliberately contriving to defeat the law.

"No, I shall not tell you my name, nor my husband's, nor my father's. If you'd like to know, however, I will tell you my baby's name. She's two years old and I think she'll like you to call her Rosemary."

By this time I was quite hypnotized by this charming, confident trespasser upon my physical—and I was about to say my moral estate. Never have I known a more complacent violator of all the proprieties of law and order as she appeared to be. She was a revelation—more than that, she was an inspiration.

What an exceedingly courageous, independent, fascinating little buccaneer she was!

"Rosemary," I repeated. "And what am I to call you?"

"Even my enemies call me countess," she said coldly.

"Oh," said I, more respectfully. "I see. When am I to have the pleasure of meeting the less particular Rosemary?"

"I didn't mean to be horrid," she said plaintively. "Please overlook it, Mr. Smart. If you are very, very quiet I think you may see her now. She is asleep."

"I may frighten her if she awakes," I said in haste, remembering my antipathy to babies.

Nevertheless I was led through a couple of bare, unfurnished rooms into a sunny, perfectly adorable nursery. A nursemaid—English, at a glance—arose from her seat in the window and held a cautious finger to her lips. In the middle of a bed that would have accommodated an entire family, was the sleeping Rosemary—a tiny, rosy cheeked, yellow haired atom bounded on four sides by yards of mattress.

I stood over her timorously and stared. The countess put one knee upon the mattress and, leaning far over, kissed a little paw. I blinked, like a confounded booby.

Then we stole out of the room.

"Isn't she adorable?" asked the countess when we were at a safe distance.

"They all are," I said grudgingly, "when they're asleep."

"You are horrid!"

"By the way," I said sternly, "how does that bedstead happen to be a yard or so lower than any other bed in this entire castle? All the rest of them are so high one has to get into them from a chair."

"Oh," she said complacently, "it was too high for Blake to manage conveniently, so I had Rudolph saw the legs off short."

One of my very finest antique bedsteads! But I didn't even groan a single groan.

"You will let me stay on, won't you, Mr. Smart?" she said when we were at the fireplace again. "I am really so helpless, you know."

I offered her everything that the castle afforded in the way of loyalty and luxury.

"And we'll have a telephone in the main hall before the end of a week," I concluded beamingly.

Her face clouded. "Oh, I'd much rather have it in my hallway, if you don't mind. You see, I can't very well go downstairs every time I want to use the phone, and it will be a nuisance sending for me when I'm wanted."

This was rather high handed, I thought.

"But if no one knows you're here it seems to me you're not likely to be called."

"You never can tell," she said mysteriously.

I promised to put the instrument in her hall and not to have an extension to my rooms for fear of creating suspicion. Also the electric bell system was to be put in just as she wanted it to be and a lot of other things that do not seem to come to mind at this moment.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Nell, don't you want to go over to the Ellsons?" asked Dick one bright moonlight night. "We've got to keep friendly with her on the doctor's account, you know."

"If I must return that call, by all means let me do it under convoy; I don't feel equal to facing her alone." Nell looked as if bracing herself for a fiery ordeal.

"I intend to bring up the subject of my walking with Miss Rudolph, and air my views," continued Dick belligerently.

"Don't you really think it would be easier to stop walking with her than to try to convert the gossiping population to your way of thinking?" asked Nell persuasively.

"No," said Dick decidedly, "there isn't anything that makes me more determined to continue my innocent courtesies to that girl than the knowledge that those old cats are smirking over the affair and putting a dubious interpretation on everything."

"You forget, Dick, that you have more than yourself to consider."

"Look here, Nell, do you mean to say you are such a pigmy soul that you are not willing to have me go and come with that girl in broad daylight, when it would necessitate positive rudeness to her to avoid it?" Dick laid his hands on Nell's shoulders and looked earnestly in her face. "Has that woman made you distrust me, dear?"

"Of course not," said Nell, looking down, "but it is not pleasant to have such women pitying me and blaming you, and no one has a right to drag a girl's name into gossip that might hurt her reputation in order to show defiance to a village code." Nell looked earnestly into his eyes.

"She doesn't care for their idle chatter; she said so; so that's all right."

"No, I think you should care for her reputation all the more in that case." Nell was using this chance to say all that was in her heart, hoping in this way to end the gossip and her own uneasiness.

"I guess you are speaking one word for her and two for yourself." Dick dropped his hands at his side and turned away. "If you really are disturbed by so simple a thing as that I am disappointed in you; that's all. I will tell Miss Rudolph that you are afraid to have me with her and we will have to discontinue our walks back and forth from meals."

"Dick!" Nell's voice was full of deep emotion. He turned and looked at her.

"We have had one quarrel over that girl. Let us understand each other. I do not want you to do one thing to please me that is irksome to you. I am not afraid to trust you. I suggested that you do nothing to cause trouble, for I really thought that was the simplest solution of the problem. If you do not think so, I withdraw my suggestion. You are free to do as you please. I shall never trouble you about the matter."

"Of course, I never really thought you cared about such a trifle and I hope you will learn to care as little for those shallow souls whose only pleasure is to watch other people and put the worst construction on all they say and do. I mean to do what my best judgment tells me is right and let them go hang." He kissed her and held her close in his arms. "Come, get your things on; it's nearly eight o'clock."

"Let's stop and ask the Parsons to go with us. In so goodly a company I shall feel safe from the darts of the enemy," said Nell, pinning on her hat.

Household Hints

LENTEN FISH DISHES

Broiled Sardines — Remove fish carefully from can, scrape off as much as possible of the skin. Heat a tablespoon of butter in a frying pan and cook fish in it, turning them so that both sides may be slightly browned. Season with salt, cayenne and a little lemon juice. Lay each sardine on a strip of buttered toast. Serve hot.

Salmon Loaf — Scald two-thirds cup of milk, mince one can salmon, add one-half cup bread crumbs, one tablespoon chopped parsley, salt and pepper; add also two eggs well beaten, then pour in milk a little at a time so as not to get mixture too soft. Steam or bake one hour.

Fish Cakes—Cook three slices of bacon in frying pan, but do not brown; add one teaspoon salt and boiling water to three cups raw potatoes, sliced, and cook until tender, drain and mash. Add one can fish flakes, two tablespoons butter, pepper and a little hot milk; beat all thoroughly, shape into cakes, dip in flour, fry in bacon fat.

Crab Salad—Two cups crab meat, remove bone; two cups diced celery, season with salt and pepper; mix with a good salad dressing.

Deviled Smoked Halibut — One-fourth pound smoked halibut, two tablespoons butter, one tablespoon chopped mustard pickle, one tablespoon vinegar, one tablespoon tomato catsup, one-half teaspoon mustard, salt and pepper. Blend all the seasoning and heat in a bowl set in hot water. When hot spread crackers with mixture, lay a strip of halibut on each, and place in oven or on broiler for two or three minutes before serving.

MOVING DAY HINTS

Wrap dishes well with newspapers and pack in tubs or barrels or boxes—never in baskets.

Remove mirrors from dressers, buffets, sideboards, etc.

Empty all drawers or fill with pillows or something light, and lock.

If you have a kitchen cabinet or a cupboard, remove the upper part from the lower, as it is much easier handled.

Roll all your rugs or carpets on a wooden rod and tie them so they will not unroll.

Do not crowd everything into one small room or do not have them scattered all over the house, but arrange them without crowding in the rooms nearest the door through which they will be carried.

Have everything done before the van arrives.

LEFT OVER PIE CRUST

Cheese Straws—Roll crust thin, sprinkle with grated cheese, fold half over, roll again, cut in strips, bake a light brown, serve piled in log cabin design.

Fruit Tarts—Roll pie crust, cut in rounds, turn edges up and crimp, fill with preserves or jam, bake and serve with spoonful of whipped cream on each.

A "REACHING POLE"

One of the new inventions is a long "reaching pole," which has many uses in the home.

It is made with a claw at the end, which acts as a hand in getting at high and inaccessible places.

It can be fitted with a cloth and used to clean the tops of moldings; it will lift pictures off the moldings, or put them up again; it will place shades in position, take down portieres, etc.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

What Are You Like?

Can you think of an animal
That's any way like you?
Perhaps you growl when you are cross
I wonder if you do!
Or do you growl when mother says,
"Come, let me comb your hair";
For if you do, I am afraid
You're very like a Bear.

OR

Maybe you're the kind of child
Who's always looking out
For little things that people say
To get provoked about.
If you are always "bristling up"
Like this, I should incline
To think that you're a great deal like
A little Porcupine.

RUNAWAY JUNE

BY GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER AND LILLIAN CHESTER

Copyright, 1915, by Serial Publication Corporation

CHAPTER II.

A FURTIVE eyed butler with a young face on the withered and stooped body of an old man admitted the runaway bride and her escort into a magnificent studio hung with rare tapestries, embellished with exquisite paintings, fitted with quaint furniture and objects of art from all over the world. And here June Warner was introduced by Artist Durban to his wife, a bright eyed woman of great charm. She received June with almost gushing cordiality.

"The Spirit of the Marshes," laughed Durban, and it was with a professional eye that he this time surveyed the beautiful girl. "It was an utterly impossible adventure, my dear." He stood before an elaborately carved Florentine table, while the ladies sat in the inglenook, in the flare of the grateful fire. His eyes still glowed with the excitement of the morning, and he laughed. "First time I've had a chance to use the revolvers you make me carry when I go out for the marsh sunrise. I was busy sketching, trying to catch that wonderful scarlet of the sun and the mist—you know, my dear—when suddenly I heard a piercing scream. It could come but from one direction—the hut. Immense! A real adventure! I folded my easel, drew my revolvers and told Jimmy to push through the reeds for life or death. Before we could reach the hut there were shrieks upon shrieks in a young girl's voice, then shots, one after another. Wonderful!" He shook back his long hair and laughed, and his wife paled. June trembled and grew faint with the memory of it, and her eyes distended with a recurrence of her terror. "As we burst through the tall marsh rushes I saw on the island this beautiful creature held by a gigantic murderer. A woman with a beautiful silk shawl over her rough clothing was running toward the hut. Another murderous thief was lying on the ground. Down the channel from the open water there came two speed boats, one driven by a man with a mustache, in evening clothes and a silk hat, and the other, driven by a round headed man, carried a dark, handsome fellow with a black Vandyke, who stood up shooting two revolvers. I fired in the air. The gigantic murderer dropped this beautiful creature, and she ran shrieking to my boat, in terror not only of the desperate bandit, but of the men in the boats. Jimmy threw on full speed, and away we darted, hotly pursued by an entire bay full of shouting, gesticulating people. It was marvelous! I have never enjoyed such a morning!"

"You poor dear!" The artist's wife was instantly contrite. "You must be tired and cold and half famished and frightened to death. And you're all wet!" She raised June by the hand.

Mrs. Durban's bright eyes sparkled back at him as she led June away to her own rooms, where she selected a negligee for her beautiful charge.

* * * * * * *

In a richly furnished office which contained no hint of business except for its telephone and the long rows of push buttons sat Gilbert Blye and Orin Cunningham and T. J. Edwards in earnest conference. Cunningham still in his evening clothes, Edwards still with his pajamas buttoned inside his coat and the carpet slippers on his feet. Button after button the black Vandyked man pushed, and one after another silent, stealthily moving, non communicative men came in and with grave faces received their instructions and departed.

"Your names," he demanded.

"Voila!" agreeably returned Henri. "I am—ugh!" And he lifted his foot sharply. Marie had kicked him on the shins.

"He is Jules Lefon," snapped Marie.

"Non! Non! Non!" indignantly objected Henri, and there ensued a vigorous argument.

"And I am Rose Hesper," calmly finished Marie.

"What's the charge?" asked the desk sergeant.

"Swiping a boat." This hoarse information came from the overcoat and cap.

"I don't know about the Frenchman," whispered the phenomenally long policeman in the sergeant's red ear, "but the girl seems to be all right. She knows Officer Dowd on the east side and Moran and O'Toole and that bunch."

"Oh!" The information seemed to have some weight. The officer raised heavily from his wide chair and waddled through the door just back of him. He was gone long, silent minutes, but when he came back his brow was knotted into what seemed permanent corrugations. "So you're a friend of Dowd and Moran and O'Toole and that bunch!" he thundered at the luckless Marie. "Well, I telephoned 'em all, and not a one of 'em knows any Rose Hesper! Lock 'em up!"

"But, monsieur, it is all a mistake!" cried the pseudo Jules Lefon. "Mademoiselle is no—"

Crack! That kick on the shin was distinctly audible throughout the little room, but it had its effect. Henri at last had the hint, and he shut his lips tightly together beneath his tiny mustache as he and Marie, to the intense gratification of the overcoat and cap, were led away and locked in their respective cells.

In the dainty rose and white drawing room which Ned and June Warner had fitted up to be their nest Ned sat in consultation with June's father and mother and Bobbie Blethering and June's bosom friend, Iris, and the three detectives. On the floor by Mrs. Moore's feet lay June's handsome collie, Bouncer, but at the first mention of his mistress' name he was up and barking loudly.

"Your wife's dog?" said the chief of Ned's detective force, and Ned nodded. "We'll take him."

Off in the bay a steam yawl, its stovepipe cold, was being towed majestically in by a rowboat, at the oars of which sat a thin whiskered fisherman and a boy with cracked knuckles and a short, thick man, whose face was one continuous rotary smudge. This man was Bill Wolf, and through his smudge were already streaking rivulets of honest toil. On board the yawl and urging her crew with helpful voices and gesture was Honoria Blye, cinders in her high arched brows, cinders in her darkened hair and cinders in her disposition.

How cheerful was the blazing fire as June reclined in the inglenook, a cup of hot coffee on a taboret by her side and a comfortable drowsiness stealing over her! She did not know how pretty she was in the filmy negligee, but Bennett and Vivian Durban did as they sat at the little studio table, which was their favorite breakfast place, and turned pleased eyes upon their beautiful guest.

Their pleasure in June, however, was scarcely equal to the charming picture of domesticity which they afforded June. It was such pleasant companionship that she had expected to enjoy with Ned, just they two alone. But that tete-a-tete breakfast was yet to come. How long must it be to the end of that separation which had begun on their wedding day, begun only a few fleeting hours after their marriage? The happiness had lasted only through the going away amid a shower of rice and through those first blissful moments alone in the Pullman drawing room, surrounded by their white ribboned luggage.

In the richly furnished office one after another of the silent, grave faced, stealthily moving men came in and gave their low voiced reports to the eager Cunningham, the confident Blye, the impatient Edwards. At last one of the men brought in a fellow who bore a young face on the stooped and withered figure of an old man. This fellow approached the table furtive eyed on Blye's invitation, and they all mumbled together for awhile in low voices. He put something in his pocket as he went out, and he left the three men laughing. They rose to go. They had finished their office work.

A butler brought in the mail to the Durbans as they finished their breakfast. Durban walked out toward the garden. He seemed anxious to conceal something. His wife followed. Durban opened a long envelope with an expectant smile and took from it a folded document.

"My dear" his voice vibrated with pleasure—"can't keep my secret. Tomorrow is the fourth anniversary of our wedding, and here is my gift in commemoration of that happy event."

Her eyes shining, the woman took the document and opened it.

"A deed to this house!" she cried.

"And all that it contains," laughed her husband, "everything, including myself."

There was an exclamation of delight. The woman kissed him again and again and called him a dear boy and a good boy and the best husband in the world. June, who had awakened and followed them, drew back, so they would not know that she had heard, but she was glad for once to have been an unwitting eavesdropper, glad to have shared in this joyous moment.

LOCAL HEBREWS CONDUCT SERVICE

IMPRESSIVE PROGRAM

Addresses Made to Thirty-one Jewish Inmates — Passover Meals Served by Local Women—History of Matzoth.

One of the most impressive demonstrations ever conducted in the New Jersey State Reformatory at Rahway, took place there yesterday, under the auspices of a committee of workers affiliated with Temple Sholem, of this city. The local delegation was in charge of Rabbi H. L. Martin, who delivered an address to the thirty-nine Hebrew inmates of the institution. Yesterday marked the commencement of the Jewish Passover commemorating the deliverance from Egypt of the Jews. The nature of the festival was explained to the inmates by Rabbi Martin in a touching address, during which he frequently alluded to the ultimate reward for those who are law abiding citizens and Godfearing men. The festival will be celebrated for eight days. The first two and the last two days of the period only are regarded as holy days, and the intermediate days are generally observed as of special significance. Following the visit of the local religious body to the reformatory a general change was in evidence among the Hebrews and it is anticipated that the officials of the State institution will invite other speakers to deliver addresses to the boys.

One of the features of the local delegations visit to Rahway was the serving of Passover meals prepared under the direction of Mrs. Adolph Tepper and Mrs. Martin, wife of the rabbi. Other speakers were Jacob Tepper, vice-president of Temple Sholen; Louis Levin, of this city, and Arthur Rose, of Fanwood.

In his speech to the juvenile audience Rabbi Martin emphasized the need of living "Within the law" and caused a pledge to be taken by the inmates in which they vowed to "go straight" and never return to the institution as prisoners when their terms once expired. Rabbi Martin's reception was an enthusiastic one and it is not unlikely that he will make other visits there in the near future.

The Passover observance is a universal one and those of that faith in Plainfield are participating. It is the first festival of the Jewish ecclesiastical year, beginning on the fourteenth day of the first month, which is designated as Nisan. It was one of the three great festivals on which, during the existence of the Temple at Jerusalem, the Jewish people gathered at Jerusalem, coming from all the surrounding country and bringing their offerings to the Temple.

During the continuance of the festival all bread and all other leavened articles of food are banished from the home of the orthodox Jew. The use of such food is absolutely forbidden, and observant Jews will not permit any leaven of any description in their habitations during the festival. The place of bread is taken by the matzoth, or unleavened cakes, which were served at the reformatory by the local women yesterday. They were made by Jewish bakers, in accordance with an ancient ritual and under the watchful care of the orthodox rabbis.

SURPRISE SHOWER FOR MISS HELEN RAY

Pleasing Affair Arranged for Retiring Member of Boro School Faculty.

Miss Helen K. Ray, instructor of English in the North Plainfield High School, was given a surprise shower by her pupils and friends at the home of Miss Marian Doughty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Doughty, of Jackson avenue, last night. The affair was a complete surprise to Miss Ray who had accepted an invitation for the evening with several other borough teachers. There were about sixty present in all and a most interesting program, arranged by Miss Doughty, was enjoyed.

During the evening Elmer French, of the senior class, presented Miss Ray with a beautiful three-piece coffee set. Parlor games were enjoyed and Joseph Olear sang several pleasing vocal solos, including "I Hear You Calling Me." Miss Marian Doughty also sang vocal solos. Refreshments were served.

The color scheme was green and gold ferns and daffodils being the decorations. Miss Marian Doughty was assisted in receiving the guests by her sister, Miss Ellen Doughty. Miss Ray is engaged to marry Robert Milholland, of New Haven, Conn., and the wedding will take place next fall.

REV. C. S. GILLESPIE GOES TO GRACE M. E.

Pastoral appointments made by Bishop Theodore S. Henderson at the close of the fifty-eighth annual gathering of the Newark Methodist Episcopal Conference, in St. Luke's church, Newark, yesterday, indicate that many changes will be in order in the Elizabeth, Newark, Jersey City and Paterson districts. Rev. C. C. Cain, of the Grace M. E. church, of North Plainfield, goes to Verona, and Rev. C. S. Gillespie has been appointed to succeed him. Rev. R. E. Marshall goes to Scotch Plains as a supply, and Rev. J. F. Shaw and Rev. Wesley Martin goes to Westfield. Rev. F. J. Hubach is continued as superintendent of the Elizabeth district, and Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First Methodist, and Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, of Monroe Avenue church, also were returned.

Woman suffrage, yesterday afternoon, received the support of the Conference when a resolution favoring votes for women was introduced by Rev. Charles S. Kemble, formerly of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, but now of Rahway, and passed after an amendment had been made by Rev. James H. MacDonald, of the Conference church. Not only did the Conference favor the "cause," but it also voted to support the constitutional amendment when it came before the people at the polls next September.

VERDICT OF NO CAUSE FOR ACTION IN DISTRICT COURT

In the District Court, this morning, Judge Walter L. Hetfield returned a verdict of no cause for action in the suit brought by John Gaskill, of Fanwood, against Peter Ritter for $75 damages. According to the plaintiff's counsel, V. W. Nash, Jr., his client bought a horse from Ritter while under the impression that the equine was sound "except that it was blind" and alleges that when Gaskill got it home he found it to be unfit for work.

Councilman Francis J. Blatz represented Ritter and showed to the satisfaction of the court that the deal was consummated as under the terms represented by the buyer.

CAVALRY PLATOON ORGANIZED HERE

PLANS ARE OUTLINED

Twenty Men Sign Muster Roll and Are Accepted for Enlistment—Major Bryant and Lieut. Borden Explain Details of Organization.

Excellent progress was made toward the organization of a platoon of cavalry to be attached to Troop D, First Squadron, N. G. N. J., at a preliminary meeting at the Queen City Hotel last night. Out of the large number of men who responded to the invitation to join the cavalry about twenty signed the muster roll and were accepted after a physical examination was made by Captain O'Gorman Quimby, of Newark. All of the men were most enthusiastic over the proposition and there seems to be no doubt but that thirty men, the required number, will be enlisted.

Major W. A. Bryant, of Newark and Lieut. Borden, acting captain of Troop D, together with Captain Quimby were present, and after Daniel Runkle, of this city, who heads the committee which has taken the initiative in the movement, outlined the plans of the organization, Major Bryant and Lieut. Borden addressed the men going somewhat more into detail. It was explained that the Government will furnish the entire equipment, except horses, and these have been arranged for in this city. The enlistment is for three years.

It is hoped to have the organization in such shape that it can take part in the summer outing of the cavalry and also go to Sea Girt for the customary practice. Mr. Runkle stated that Captain Charles A. Peterson, of Co. K, of this city, had kindly offered the use of the local armory or any of its equipment. The plan is to have at least two drills a week. It also explained that the actual expense per member will not exceed $50 a year.

The following signed the muster roll last night and were accepted:

Daniel Runkle, A. W. Andrews, E. W. Jeffcott, Lewis A. Williams, Jacob L. Van Deventer, John A. Hall, A. Mellick Tweedy, James H. Brewster, W. L. Righter, Joseph N. Van Deventer, Percy A. Ransome, R. H. Cox, Sherman B. Joost, J. M. Charles, Brown Rolston, Joseph Grandi, Donald A. McGee, J. Hartley Melrick, Joseph Rex Schoonmaker and D. Ogden Rogers. Another meeting will be held within a week or so to complete the details of organization.

BOY'S LEG FRACTURED WHEN HE STRUCK AUTO

While playing with a group of companions on East Second street, near Johnston avenue, this morning, nine-year-old "Tulley" Phillips, of 912 East Second street, ran out from behind a trolley car and struck an automobile at the side of the road, hitting his leg against the step with sufficient force to fracture a bone. He was taken to his home where temporary relief was administered by Dr. Hedges and he was later removed to Muhlenberg Hospital. At that institution the fracture proved to be only a slight one.

The automobile is owned by W. J. Hudson, of 1003 Watchung avenue, but no blame for the accident is attached to him. The car was standing on the right side at a dead stop and heedlessness on the part of the victim was responsible for his injuries. Mr. Hudson reported the matter to the police.

FANWOOD SCHOOL WORK LET TO LOCAL MAN

Contracts for the new public school to be erected in the Jerusalem road section of Fanwood under the direction of the Board of Education of that place, were awarded last night, after the committee had considered the bids which had been submitted last week. William H. Dennick, of this city, receives the general contract, his bid for the work amounting to $11,785. This contract does not include either heating or ventilating, the contract for which will be let during the course of the coming week.

Work on the building will be started immediately, and it is expected that it will be finished about the first of August. It is highly probable that Mr. Dennick will sublet a number of the contracts for the several types of work which the general contract includes.

PLUMBERS FAIL TO ADJUST DIFFERENCES

Matter Has Now Been Referred to Board of Arbitration for Settlement.

Despite the fact that the Master Plumbers' Association held a meeting in the Chamber of Commerce rooms last night to get at the bottom of the trouble brewing between the masters and the journeymen, President C. W. Krausse announced to a Daily Press reporter today that the situation remains exactly the same as it was outlined in the Daily Press yesterday. Considerable discussion was aroused over the points at issue but no satisfactory conclusion could be arrived at by the masters and the board of arbitration.

It was decided to refer the matter to the Board of Arbitration which is composed of three masters and three journeymen, and it is anticipated that an agreement will be arrived at soon. Until that time between thirty and forty journeymen will remain "out." The masters maintain that Den. J. Galbraith's shop should be put back on the "fair" list. The trouble arose over the alleged sending of two apprentices from this shop to "handle tools" on a local job and the journeymen claim that they have been done an injustice.

It was stated yesterday that Arthur Neumann and A. M. Griffen were the only two shops not included in the "lockout." In an interview this morning Mr. Neumann said:

"The question at issue does not demand that a boy has to serve four years before being allowed to handle tools, contrary to the accepted theory. I, personally, am in favor of permitting an apprentice, after he has served three years, to work independently on any job where journeymen plumbers are employed but the vital point is this: "Is it fair to either the master plumbers or the journeymen plumbers to employ a man who has served seven years and who has twice made application for membership—once to the tinners union, failing to pass their examinations, and then to the plumbers' union, again being turned down for incompetency" Had the board of arbitration been notified as is expedient in such cases the matter could have been settled and the "lockout" avoided.

These will be given on an entirely separate floor as arrangements have been made to have the billiard and bowling hall reserved exclusively for this purpose.

The Irish dances will be conducted by Martin Regan, whose familiarity with them and ability in directing is so well and favorably known in Plainfield and vicinity.

BELGIANS' NEEDS TO BE PRESENTED

Dean McClenahan and Captain Lucy to Speak at High School Tonight.

APPEAL TO HUMANITY

Great Scope of Relief Work Being Carried on by Americans to Save Millions of People will be Explained by the Speakers.

Under the auspices of the State Committee of the Commission for Relief in Belgium, of New York, the first general mass meeting will be held at the Plainfield High School auditorium at 8:15 o'clock tonight. Dean Howard McClenahan, of Princeton University, and Captain J. F. Lucey, of the relief commission, will present some of the vital facts in regard to conditions in Belgium and the sufferings of its people, which it is believed will arouse new interest. Both Dean McClenahan and Captain Lucey have very recently visited Belgium and studied conditions there thoroughly. The Dean aroused great enthusiasm with his recent speeches in the State of Ohio where he made addresses before the Commercial Club, of Cincinnati, and addressed a great mass meeting at Columbus.

The dire needs of Belgium can but insufficiently be recorded because of their immensity. The Belgian people, numbering 7,000,000, are fed wholly through the efforts of the Commission for Relief in Belgium. The Belgians themselves have contributed from their own resources a great share of the monies already expended for food. The rest must come from the charity of the world mainly from the charity of the people of the United States. Although the responses have been noble, the needs continue to grow and more must be given if the Belgians are kept from starvation. In round figures, the requirements are about 90,000 tons of food per month and the cost of this immense quantity of food-stuff is about nine millions of dollars.

Dean McClenahan and Captain Lucey will present the case of the needy Belgians in a manner to appeal to the humanity of the State of New Jersey and particularly to the people of Plainfield. An immense crowd is expected and the capacity of the High School Auditorium will undoubtedly be taxed to its limit.

DETECTIVES SEARCH FOR AUTO THIEVES

Important Clues Said to Have Been Found at Scotch Plains.

Allntown (Pa.) detectives are today working in Scotch Plains in an effort to reveal further clues which may lead to the identity of the automobile thief who abandoned his quarry on the front lawn of Larry Wallace's house in that place Sunday night, after his supply of gasoline had given out. A number of Scotch Plains residents were interviewed by detectives this morning and it is said that information of a valuable nature was unearthed.

The machine belonged to Dr. Robert T. Klotz, of Allentown, and was stolen three days prior to the time it was found in Scotch Plains. It is said that a trio of men were included in the "deal" and first attracted attention in Scotch Plains when they were standing at the Park avenue trolley crossing in Scotch Plains at 10 o'clock Monday morning. One of the trio walked into the store of Frank Anson and related a hard luck story in an effort to secure a $3 loan on an overcoat. He said his friends and himself were returning from a visit with relatives in Paterson when their automobile broke down and had to be abandoned. They said they needed money to get to Philadelphia, but Mr. Anson did not "fall" for the tale and they approached a number of other young men of the village. They were last seen boarding a Main Line trolley car going in the direction of Plainfield.

ARREST SPY IN PARIS

French Authorities Think They Have Man Who Set La Touraine On Fire—Allied Fleet Bombards Turkish Villages.

London, March 31—Continuing their warfare on merchant vessels, the German submarines have torpedoed three more British ships, according to reports received here today.

The Ellerman liner Flaminian has been torpedoed and sunk off the Sicilly Islands by a German submarine. The Flaminian, a vessel of 3,500 tons, bound from Glasgow to Cape Town, South Africa, went to the bottom on Monday, but the first news of her loss came today, when the crew of 39 men were landed at Hollyhead. The vessel was carrying a general cargo.

The S. S. Crown, of Castile, 4,500 tons, is reported to have been torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine off Sicilly Islands.

The British liner City of Cambridge arrived in Liverpool today, badly damaged as the result of an attack made upon the vessel by a German submarine Sunday evening.

Paris, March 31—Accused of attempting to blow up the French liner La Tourraine, Raymond S. Swoboda, an alleged German spy, has been arrested in Paris and is now held in close confinement at Havre. French officials declare that Swoboda's arrest will clear up the mystery of the fire on La Tourraine on her recent voyage from New York to Havre. According to officials, the fire originated from an explosion in the baggage of a first-class passenger.

"On the afternoon of March 30 a warship of the flotilla of the second lightship squadron perceived a German submarine navigating on the surface off Dieppe. The warship pursued the submarine and forced it to submerge; then it bombarded the perscope and manoeuvred to approach the enemy's boat. The warship passed above the submarine at the moment its perscope disappeared and reported that immediately following, a large sheet of oil appeared at that spot."

This afternoon's communique issued by the French war office said that there was nothing new to report since the statement of last night.

Petrograd, March 31—The following official report on operations in the Caucasus was issued today:

"There have been artillery engagements of considerable violence in the Coastal districts on the Black Sea. Our troops acting on the offensive from Ortscha and Ardantusch have occupied Artwin, driving the Turks southward. Our left wing on the Sarikamisch front is now engaged. On other fronts there have been unimportant artillery duels."

"The allied fleet has renewed its bombardment of the Turkish villages, firing over the outer forts defending the Dardanelles. The enemies airmen are reconnoitering daily."

"Western theatre—West of Pont A Mousson, French attacks near and east of Regnieville and in Pristwald, Pa Pretre forest, were repulsed yesterday. Enemy's losses heavy. The engagement continues in only one place in western part of Priestwald.

"The enemy's aviators, yesterday, threw bombs on the Belgian towns of Bruges, Ghisteles and Courtral, without doing military damage. At Courtral, bombs fell near the hospital. One Belgian was killed and one wounded.

"Eastern theatre—The Russian frontier district north of the Memel was cleared of enemies. The Russians, who were beaten near Tauroggen, retreated in the direction of Skadwilje."

NUMEROUS GRASS FIRES KEEP FIREMEN BUSY

Grass fires are getting to be quite common these days and Assistant Fire Chief Joseph Maier being of the opinion that they are started with malicious intent, has called the matter to the attention of the police.

On Monday there were three grass fires. One was in the field along side of the residence of John W. Case, on Grove street; another was in the rear of the residence of Frank Broshart, on Front street, and the other near the home of J. Travis Sutphen, on South avenue. Fire headquarters was notified of all three fires.

The first fire was put out by Chief Maier and Fireman Peter Benson, who went to the scene with fire chemicals in a wagon hired from the Scandell livery; the second by Firemen E. R. Scalley and C. T. Voorhees, who took chemicals to the scene in the automobile of Mr. Voorhees and the last by Firemen Harry Shugars and Herman Pfeister, who contented themselves with conquering the blaze by using clubs.

FORESTERS ENJOY A FEAST OF GOOD THINGS

After the regular weekly meeting of Court Dunellen, No. 1,123, L. O. F., held Monday evening in W. G. Holton Hall, about twenty members retired to Trewin's restaurant, where the balance of the evening was spent in partaking of oyster stews and fries that Caterer Trewin knows so well how to prepare, and having a general good time. Several stories were told in which interesting incidents of the early days of the order and the borough were the basis. Editor George W. Day, of the Weekly Call, told one of these stories and suffice it to say that Mr. Day upheld the reputation which he made for himself at the borough anniversary exercises on the evening of March 22nd.

Lewis T. Titsworth and ex-Councilman Sanford Staples, former residents of Dunellen, but now of Plainfield, were among the number of outsiders who were present in Trewin's, as were Henry Vogel, of Middlesex borough, and John M. Dayton and Colonel Magnus Johnson, of New Market.

CUSTER OPERATOR QUITS KEYBOARD

Telegrapher Who Flashed Massacre Retires From Game.

ON DUTY TWENTY-ONE HOURS

Carnahan Sent Eighty Thousand Words In Two Shifts, and Receipts of His Office In Two Days Were $3,000. Newspaper Man Gave Carnahan Fifty Dollar Bill For Extra Work.

John M. Carnahan, the telegraph operator who sent out from Bismarck, N. D., one of the biggest stories the world ever read—the story of the Custer massacre on the Little Big Horn in July, 1876—has just retired on a pension and is planning to spend the rest of his days in Oklahoma on his Kay county farm, where he will raise chickens, pigs and other domestics.

For seventeen years Carnahan was at the frontier station of Bismarck and when he left there it was for Missoula, Mont., where he lived for twenty-four years. Previous to being stationed at Bismarck he was at La Crosse, Wis., and so after fifty years as an operator Carnahan will draw a pension, and Oklahoma will have within its boundaries another veteran who helped make the history of the early days of the Indian west.

The Bismarck garrison, including many friends of Carnahan, was in the Custer expedition. The operator and the post surgeon rode out from the post with the expedition when it started in June, 1876, to punish the Sioux Indians. They went twelve miles with the Seventh cavalry and then returned with the last [illegible] Custer ever sent. It was addressed to President Grant and told of the plans for the expedition.

On the night of July 5 the steamer Far West came down the river and tied up at Bismarck when most people were in bed. The Far West brought the wounded from Reno's command and the official dispatches which told of the complete annihilation of Custer's outfit.

Flashed Word of Massacre.

Carnahan was called from his bed and found on his desk in the telegraph office a carpetbag full of official reports of the fight and its results. He sized up the job, and his first wire action was to flash the word east that the massacre had occurred. Then he settled down to the transmission of the official story to the department of war at Washington. For twenty one hours he did not leave the key. Coffee and sandwiches were handed him now and then during the long shift, and a wet towel was kept on his forehead. With the reports finished he fell into bed and for three hours slept the sleep of exhaustion; then he got up and returned to the key.

For two days the eastern papers had been clamoring for detailed news of the massacre, but Carnahan could not leave his official work, and until now there was no one to send it. He started in, however, and sent all he could find out to New York, Chicago and St. Paul papers. He sent as much story as he had strength to get and prepare, and that was the way the details of the disaster were sent out.

Carnahan had sent 80,000 words in the two shifts, and the receipts of his office in those two days were $3,000.

As fast as they could arrive special correspondents hurried to Bismarck to get the intimate details of the big story. O'Kelly, a New York man, was the first big one on the ground, and Carnahan sent for twelve hours more on his stuff. There were 22,000 words, and the tolls on the special dispatch were $1,320. O'Kelly gave Carnahan $50 for his extra work, and the veteran operator still has that $50 bill.

Carnahan is the man who handled the official correspondence between President Grant and General Custer which preceded the Little Big Horn expedition and which has always been supposed to have caused the resentment which drove Custer to recklessness on the fatal ride. But that is a story Carnahan has never told.

During the fifty-three years at the telegraph key many thrilling stories have passed through his hands, especially during the early days of his career, when he was on the border between the north and south during the civil war.

BIRD SCARES PEACH MEN.

Sparrow-like Visitor Has Jersey Growers Up In Arms.

The perennial rumor that the peach crop is about to be destroyed cropped up in Egg Harbor, N. J., when employees in the large orchards of Charles F. Stuckel discovered a small, reddish brown bird on the trees.

With its small, stout, broad bill the bird, which is about the size of a sparrow, was attacking the buds ferociously, much in the manner in which a woodpecker works its way in search of worms. According to the Stuckel folk, this particular bird has a capacity of about 6,000 buds an hour.

Several of the birds were shot and sent to the state agricultural experiment station at New Brunswick to determine whether they are protected by law. Meanwhile the farmers are taking down their shotguns to save their peach crop.

NEW BRUNSWICK'S SURVEY.

Evidently the survey made of New Brunswick municipal affairs, which Mayor Scott of that city told Plainfielders about last week opens up a sore topic in the Middlesex county seat, and the Home News of that city thinks that the Mayor has been telling tales away from home. Here is what it says about the matter:

The city has heard much during the past year or two concerning a mystic survey of local departments made under the direction of Mayor Scott and financed by a number of his friends. We say much has been heard—and yet the plain truth is that much has been hinted at, but little heard of the results of the survey.

There have been all sorts of intimations of awful conditions uncovered by the surveyors, and their report has been made the basis for a number of platform talks in this city in which municipal waste was the chief theme.

As the survey was privately financed, the public has had no ground for demanding that the report be published. But if this survey is to be made the excuse for dissertations on the part of the mayor or anyone else in addressing audiences in other cities than New Brunswick—then the public is well within its rights if it asks for its publication.

We notice with some amaze that New Brunswick's mayor told a Plainfield audience the other night how backward New Brunswick has been and trotted out the local survey in support of his remarks. No—not by giving details of the work done here, but in hints of great waste and general inefficiency. Perhaps this was necessary in order to save Plainfield, but where does the mayor's home town "get off at?"

No one in Plainfield expects the survey here to disclose conditions which might generally be expected in New Brunswick. This city has always been well governed, by men of intelligence and with splendid business training, and the whole object of the Taxpayers' Organization, provided they get the money to do the work, is to see if some ways cannot be found to reduce the expense of conducting the city. We do not believe that any great and unnecessary extravagances will be disclosed, if the work is done, but as in the case of modernly conducted businesses, it is wise to sometimes investigate ourselves, and see if we cannot cut down running expenses.

Considerable criticism of the manner in which the auto apparatus in the local fire department are piloted has been heard recently, objection being to the rate of speed maintained in bringing the heavy machine back to headquarters after fires. The unusual number of grass fires during the past few weeks have given the drivers considerable practice in running the machines and several of the firemen appear to be afflicted with a speed mania. A city official in commenting on the subject said that one of the vehicles flashed by him at a thirty-mile-an-hour clip the other day and he was under the impression that it was going to a fire in the center portion of the town. He was later informed that the apparatus was being taken back to headquarters after a grass fire had been put out near Randolph road. The practise of "taking a corner on two wheels" and trying to outdo Barney Oldfied is interesting enough to view from a roof top, but it falls far short of being a step in the promotion of "safety first."

It is to be hoped that none of our readers will miss the excellent opportunity which will be offered tonight to learn the story of Belgium first hand. With such men as Dean McClenahan and Captain Lucey, both speaking from the same platform, local residents are indeed given a rare and unusual treat. The High School auditorium should be crowded.

REDUCTION OF FORTS ONE OF DARDANELLES WAR'S EVENTS

Southwesterly Entrance Equipped With Krupp Guns Said to Be Most Powerful Ever Made.

Fortifications Have Been Successfully Passed on Three Occasions; Were Recently Made Stronger.

THE reduction of the forts at the entrance to the Dardanelles was the first step to clear the sea route to Constantinople and the Black sea, opening a way for Russia to forward her vast stores of grain to the allies. At the Aegean entrance to the Dardanelles are forts of Kum-Kaleh, on the Asiatic side, and Sedd-el-Bahr, on the European side.

These are two old castles transformed into new fortifications armed with Krupp guns of 15, 24 and 28 centimeter caliber. Since the war began they have been still further protected by earthworks and modern guns. The strait at this point is about three miles wide. It then grows larger and suddenly much smaller, until at a point about fifteen miles from the entrance it is reduced to a width of one mile. A small island here further obstructs the channel.

Guarded by Krupp Guns.

Around this narrowest point there are nine fortifications on the European side, the largest of which is Kilid Bahr, which before the war had twenty-one Krupp guns of 21 and 35 centimeter caliber. On the Asiatic side are three well armed forts, the largest being at Kaleh Kalessi, with twelve Krupp guns of 35 centimeter caliber.

Evidently the allied fleets met their greatest resistance at this point. The Queen Elizabeth, which can throw from her fifteen inch guns a projectile weighing a ton a distance well over twenty miles, if not nearer thirty.

Greatest Difficulty Overcome.

"When Nagara point is passed," says Sir Edwin Pears, "the greatest difficulty in reaching Constantinople is overcome. It has often been suggested that troops could be landed in the gulf of Saros, to the north of the peninsula, which is the northern boundary of the Dardanelles and which at one place—and this behind the strong forts of Kilid Bahr—is not more than four miles wide. The object of such a landing would be to take such forts in the rear. A similar proposal has been made in reference to the forts on the Asiatic side. A strong body of troops disembarked at Bessika bay might capture the Asiatic forts.

"All difficulties would not have been surmounted when the fleets had passed Gallipoli, at the northern end of the Dardanelles, for during the last three months the Germans have erected batteries on Marmora island, forty miles from Gallipoli and 100 from Constantinople, as well as on the southern Asiatic end of the Bosporus and even at Prinkipo."

Although war vessels were barred from entering the Dardanelles, the fortifications have been successfully passed on three occasions. The first was when Captain William Bainbridge, in October, 1800, sailed boldly through the strait in the United States frigate George Washington and anchored before the city of Constantinople on a friendly mission in spite of the fact that the forts tried to stop him. The second occasion was when a British fleet, under Sir John Duckworth, in 1807, made the run of the strait. Unfavorable head winds kept Sir John from Constantinople, and he was compelled to make the passage of the straits a second time under a heavy fire.

Again, on Feb. 15, 1878, when the fall of Constantinople to the Russians was supposed to be imminent another British fleet steamed through the Dardanelles. This time it went through without opposition, but against the protests of the Turkish government, the admiral in charge having orders to steam through "with or without permission."

position of the forts is strong, and as they are situated on the high banks of the strait they would be able to hold up a large naval force without much danger to themselves. An attack from the high hills on the land side has been regarded as more feasible. To prevent this a continuous line of fortifications has been built, closing the peninsula off from the European side. These fortifications all have been built under the supervision of German military authorities and are well armed with the newest guns. An attacking fleet would have the disadvantage of having to proceed one by one past this point.

Beyond here the Dardanelles becomes wider, finally opening out just beyond the town of Gallipoli, from which the European peninsula is named, into the sea of Marmora, at the farther end of which lies Constantinople and the Golden Horn, connected by a much shorter strait, the Bosporus, with the Black sea.

The Dardanelles guards the approach to Constantinople from the Mediterranean as the Bosporus guards the approach from the Black sea. The two castles at the entrance to the Dardanelles were built in the path taken by Xerxes and Alexander by Mohammed II. in 1462, but have been often remodeled.

As Viewed by an Expert.

"Both the Dardanelles and the Bosporus resemble winding river valleys, but the shores of the former are flatter than those of the latter, and where the Gallipoli peninsula sinks to under 500 feet and narrows to less than four miles, the Bulair fortifications, joined by a continuous parapet and ditch, stretch completely across the isthmus from the Gulf of Saros to the Hellespont. The heights in front are crowned with redoubts, and Bulair itself is protected by smaller works.

"The strait is also fortified at each end and in the center. The south entrance, [illegible] the north entrance to the Bosp[illegible] heavily fortified on both sides, [illegible] five miles of narrows in the [illegible] from Kilid Bahr to Maidos and from Kale-Sultanie to Na-

BOY SCOUTS ENJOY A SURPRISE LUNCHEON

Parents of the boys in Troop 5 of the Boy Scouts, gave a surprise luncheon to the scouts in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church, last night, the menu consisting of frankfurters and rolls, cake and cocoa. There were about fifty boys present including the membership of Troop 5 and other troops awaiting examination before the Court of Honor for merit badge examinations and for promotion to the first class rank.

E. L. Lodge, candidate for assistant scoutmastership of the troop, gave an illustrated lecture on certain features of the work. A guest of honor was W. A. W. Thompson, one of Thompson Seton's original American Boy Scouts, now studying mechanical engineering in Stevens. Walter Franklin, of Troop 7, was promoted to a first-class scout and the court passed on merit badge tests T. S. P. Fitch, on bird study, and Edwin Addis on signalling and surveying.

MINSTREL FAVORITE BACK TO RENEW ACQUAINTANCES

"Dave" Irwin, who made hundreds of friends in this city seven years ago when the Primrose minstrel troupe spent five weeks here breaking in a new show, is re-newing acquaintances about town. Mr. Irwin arrived Monday in company with his partner, Joseph Herzog, for a three days' booking at Proctor's Theatre, and when his old friends discovered who it was he was given an enthusiastic reception. He was a guest at dinner last night at the home of David C. Smalley, of East Front street, and tonight will be accorded a "welcome home" by the members of the Timbo Social Club.

Mr. Irwin was one of the principal soloists with the Primrose troupe seven years ago and since that time has been all over the world in the course of his profession. He is a genial, whole-souled fellow, and declared yesterday that the best five weeks he ever had in his life were those spent here while rehearsing. His new act with Mr. Herzog is a singing number, ending up with a comedy "scream" burlesque on the conductoring of a train, Mr. Irwin standing in the orchestra while taking "tickets" and giving orders to the supposed passengers.

MRS. ANNA SCHIERHOLTZ DIES IN FORTY-FOURTH YEAR

Mrs. Anna C. Schierholtz, widow of Edward Schierholtz, died last night in Muhlenberg Hospital following a long illness. She was forty-four years old and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Kaeding, of Wilson avenue, the borough. Beside her parents she is survived by one sister, Mrs. William Eakins, of Manson place, and two brothers, Fred and Augustus Kaeding; also one daughter, Miss Anna Schierholtz. Mrs. Schierholtz's husband died several years ago just as he alighted from a trolley car at the Muhlenberg Hospital grounds, intending to enter the institution as a patient. Mrs. Schierholtz also had a son who was accidentally killed about ten years ago. The boy entered the store of Col. A. G. Perry, on Harrison avenue, just as a gun the latter was cleaning was accidentally discharged.

The arrangements for the funeral have not yet been completed.

PLAINFIELDERS OUGHT TO CONSIDER PLAINFIELD FIRST

A city must progress, it must be guided by its optimists, and must approve of enterprises; it must value constructive men more than destructive ones, must have a clear idea of the demands of the future city growth and live up to its ideals.

One of the most essential elements of progress is enterprise. The enterprise of the business men of Plainfield is dependent upon the support of the residents of the city. In the same measure that they co-operate in the support of Plainfield's stores they will share in the prosperity that will be the result of this co-operative effort.

The duty of Plainfield's people to themselves and their obligation to their city, calls upon them to PATRONIZE PLAINFIELD MERCHANTS, CRAFTSMEN and MECHANICS.

They are not asked to make any sacrifice, either of money or quality in order to do this. Rather are they presented with the opportunity of making financial saving and gaining at advantage in quality of the goods purchased.

The old fallacy that it is now necessary to go to the stores of other cities in order to get the best goods at the lowest prices has long been dissipated.

The merchants of Plainfield have proved conclusively that the stores of Plainfield are not surpassed in any respect by mail order houses of the stores of larger cities and that the question of buying outside the city is attended by loss to the purchaser in more ways than one.

The man who has home pride enough to PATRONIZE PLAINFIELD MERCHANTS, CRAFTSMEN and MECHANICS, gets the most for his money. It is easy to be convinced of this fact by visiting local stores. The advertising columns of the local papers will direct you to the most advantageous buying. PATRONIZE PLAINFIELD MERCHANTS, CRAFTSMEN and MECHANICS.

Roscoe Blanchard, manager of the Plainfield High School football team for the season of 1915, has just completed his schedule of twelve games. Easton, Passaic, Montclair and South Side High School have never been met by Plainfield High School before.

Oct. 16—Westfield at Westfield.

FRESHIES HAD LITTLE RESPECT FOR SENIORS

The Freshmen girls' basketball team of the Plainfield High School defeated the Senior girls' team, yesterday afternoon, by the score of 23 to 19. The Freshmen team led practically all the time, but by so small a margin that the game was either teams until the final whistle blew. Three time in the second half the Senior team tied the score, but they were never able to take the lead.

SOPHOMORE GIRLS HUNG ONE ON THE JUNIORS

The Sophomore girls' basketball team defeated the Junior class team of the Plainfield High School, yesterday afternoon, by the score of 28 to 21. The Sophomore team got the jump on its opponents and piled up the score in easy fashion. Miss Crane caged ten field goals and four foul goals, and Miss Palmer caged four foul goals. The best the Juniors could do was to cage one field goal and one foul goal. These points were scored by Miss Good. The score at the end of the first half was 18 to 14 in the Sophomores favor.

HOPE OBTAINS FIELD.

The management of the Hope chapel baseball team has secured a lease on the field at Clinton avenue and Second street, directly behind the Pond factory. All home games will be played on this field, which will be fixed up before the first contest. Practice for candidates for the team will be held at that place next Saturday afternoon.

RANDOLPH TO REPORT.

Cliff Randolph, of this city, will report for practice with the Perth Amboy team next Sunday. He will alternate with Jack Clifford for Perth Amboy on the mound this season.

COLD WEATHER INTERFERES WITH N. P. H. S. PRACTICE

If the weather of yesterday and today keeps up the first game of baseball for the North Plainfield High School crew will probably have to be postponed as the players would ruin themselves for the season playing in such weather as this. No practice was held yesterday afternoon and the Canton game is only three days off.

Ernest Stahl will be sent in the box for mound work in this game by Captain Smalley and the boroughleader and coach is still hoping for a reinforcement in the pitchers squad. The borough team will play one of the hardest schedules ever made up this year and with only one twirler it will be hard going but the "Canucks" are still plugging and hoping for better days.

MISS CRANE CAPTAIN; MISS PALMER MANAGER

The girls' basketball team of the Plainfield High School held a meeting yesterday afternoon and elected Miss Dorothy Crane captain of the team for next year, and Miss Elsa Palmer manager.

Miss Crane is at present a sophomore in the High School and has played on the team for two years. Miss Palmer is also a sophomore.

PECKINPAUGH'S START.

Lively Shortstop Headed For Minors When Chance Bought Him.

Roger Peckinpaugh is one Yankee who owes a debt of gratitude to Frank Chance. The Cleveland club had just about decided that Peckinpaugh would not do for them and was preparing to send him to the minor leagues in 1913, when Chance came along and offered Lelivelt and Stump in exchange for him. Joe Birmingham accepted the offer with avidity.

If Peckinpaugh had gone back to the minors it is doubtful if he would have been able to get back to the major league again, for a man must win his way upward with bat rather than with glove. Peckinpaugh is a brilliant fielder, but a light hitter in any company.

The fielding averages show him just behind McBride, and his task was a hard one on account of the weakness of Fritz Maisel, who covered little ground to his left. Peckinpaugh's batting average was only .223, but this does not show his usefulness, for he drove in more runs than any man on his team and stood fourteenth in the American league in this respect. The club got its money's worth out of Peckinpaugh last season, for he played in 157 games and did not miss an inning.

JONES TO TRY "COMEBACK."

Once Great Outfielder Will Go In as Pinch Hitter.

St. Louis fans may see Fielder Jones, manager of the Terriers, in a "comeback" role this season. If Jones can get into condition he intends to act as pinch hitter in some of the close games during the coming campaign. This was announced recently by the Terrier boss.

"I can still pickle that old pill," said Jones, "and if I can get into condition I will be in there as a pinch hitter this season." Jones, when in his prime as a member of the Chicago White Sox, was one of the best batters in the American league.

DREW MAY HANG UP HIS SHOES

IS NO LONGER ENTHUSIASTIC

Working Five Hours Each Day In University of Southern California Studying Law, Clerking and Writing In Addition to Duties of Track Manager Keep Great Athlete Busy.

Howard P. Drew, the fastest amateur sprinter in the world, for the first time in his career as an athlete is beginning to find the sport irksome.

Heretofore Drew has found the work of preparing himself for sprint races in which he has made an international name for himself, pleasant, but the speedy colored lad admits that the outlook for a session of training and competing during the spring and coming summer months doesn't measure up to the standard of fun it once did.

The plain truth is that Drew has grown from a mere lad to something of a busy young man with many and varied interests, which are beginning to crowd him for time and interest as well.

Drew writes to a New York friend: "To tell you the truth, I'm getting tired of the game (running). I feel that I have done well in the last three years But, on the other hand, look at all the hard luck I have run into.

"There was the breakdown at Stockholm. I have been timed 9:4-5 seconds for the hundred seventeen times on all kinds of tracks in different parts of the country, but not once have I been lucky enough to have the combination of a fast track, good competition and perfect air conditions.

"You know as well as I do that it's ridiculous for men to pick out a day and time me or any other sprinter to do 9:3-5 seconds. The same sprinter that will do it one day will fall just enough short of it on another to be timed a whole fifth slower. A day lost with a sprinter is a day forever gone, and with most of us days are few. If I was not in college I believe that I would hang up my shoes right now."

Besides five hours' work each day at the University of Southern California, Drew is taking a full course in the law school, and, added to this, he is swinging the job as assistant manager of the University of Southern California track team. Then Drew makes his living clerking and writing, and it's little wonder that his enthusiasm is beginning to lag a bit.

TO TAKE TEAM TO AUSTRALIA

J. S. Barnes, Aberdeen Boss, Says Baseball Is Popular There.

Declaring that he will take a couple of teams of major league ball players to Australia next fall, or at least the year later, J. S. Barnes, owner of the Aberdeen club of the Northwestern league, told a Portland scribe recently that the island continent soon will be noted for star players.

"Baseball is making a go of it in Australia," said Barnes. "I was over there some time ago and found that the cricketers were realizing it.

"To stop the inroads of the baseball players the cricketers formed a big association and manipulated it so that cricket was allotted for the warm months and baseball for the winter time. Few persons attended the ball games, for it was cold when they were played.

"There is no way the cricketers can stop the popularity of baseball in Australia, and tours of that island will make money."

BOSTON'S PITCHING STAFF.

Red Sox Have Wonderful Array of Twirling Talent For Next Season.

No wonder, Bill Carrigan says, the Boston Red Sox under his management will walk away with the American league pennant! Just glance at the pitching staff—Joe Wood, Ray Collins, Dutch Leonard, Foster, Shore, Gregg and Ruth! The Red Sox will also have a new boxman named Scott, who won twenty-six and lost ten games with Saginaw in the Southern Michigan association last year.

The only doubtful position is second base, which will be covered regularly by Janvrin. Hoblitzell, Gardner and Scott are the other infield regulars, with the old reliables, Lewis, Speaker and Hooper, in the outfield. Carrigan, Cady and Thomas will do the backstopping. Looks like a real ball club!

AMATEUR BASEBALL PLAYER.

Nonprofessional League Definition Says He Must Receive No Money.

No player of any club in any city will be eligible who is under contract or reserve by mutual agreement by the national commission—National, American, Federal or any Class AA league—or who is playing a regular schedule of games for money.

No player of any club in any city will be eligible who accepts or receives in any form whatsoever any stipulated weekly salary for services rendered any club.

No player of any club in any city will be eligible who plays ball for a livelihood.

CONROY CHOSEN CAPTAIN OF N. P. H. S. BASKETBALL

Harold Conroy, of the freshman class of North Plainfield High School, was elected captain of next year's basketball team at a meeting of the basketball squad held yesterday afternoon. The election was a unanimous one, the members of the team feeling that "Connie" was the one for the job.

He has three more years in school and will undoubtedly make a fine leader. While in the lower grades he took up the game and last year was a substitute on the championship team. In the season that has just passed he showed up very well. A manager for next year will be elected by the athletic association at the end of school.

Columbia Is Hard Pressed For Good Rowing Material

Photos by American Press Association.

COLUMBIA must develop almost a brand new crew for the Poughkeepsie regatta next June. To do this Coach Rice has the Blue and White squad out on the water every good afternoon, even though it's hard to convince the young oarsmen, with icy winds blowing at them, that rowing is a midsummer sport. This early practice on the water is necessary because Columbia is hard pressed for material this season. Only two members of the 1914 championship crew—Captain Sanborn and Gratton—are available this year. Six other oarsmen must be developed and another crew formed from a varsity squad that now numbers but nineteen. It is a tough problem for a coach to select sixteen oarsmen from nineteen candidates. But what this year's Columbia squad lacks in numbers it more than makes good with spirit and determination. That's why they've pulled industriously at a rowing machine indoors for more than three months and are now starting their training season on the river despite high winds and rough water. The Columbia squad goes to its Poughkeepsie quarters about June 1 to put on the finishing touches for the big race. Just now the Columbia varsity is boated like this: No. 1, Simonds; No. 2, Donoho; No. 3, Cryonenberg; No. 4, Surycon; No. 5, Tichborne; No. 6, Bratton; No. 7, Sanborn (captain); No. 8, Myers. Photos show Columbia crew out for spin on Hudson and Captain Sanborn.

OSCAR VITT MOST VALUABLE UTILITY MAN IN LEAGUE, SAYS HUGH JENNINGS

Oscar Vitt.

"Oscar Vitt is the most valuable utility player in the American league," remarked Hugh Jennings a few days ago. "He is the most valuable because he can play three positions in the infield. He is also an excellent outfielder and can field with the best of them. Vitt lacks the class to gain a regular position because he cannot hit."

"ART" THORN TOOK FIVE OUT OF SIX CONTESTS

"Art" Thorn won five out of six games played in the borough bowling tourney last night, losing one to George Howe and taking three from M. Ferrero. The scores follows:

A. Thorn	167	187	198
G. Howe	141	130	144
M. Ferrero	143	177	150
E. Squires	183	173	124
M. Ferrero	141	115	120
A. Thorn	177	147	191

After the one-man matches were played, George Gates and George Howe took part in a roll-off for second prize in the two-man tourney, which was held several months ago, without their partners. Howe won two straight. The scores follow.

ASPIRANTS DOUBLE TOUR CHANCES BY EXTRA SPECIAL PRIZE RACE

Leaders in Special Vote Hunt Which Ends Saturday Will Be Nearer Panama Trip Because of Efforts—Anxiety as Contest Nears End.

First Prize.
Second Prize.
Merchandise Certificate, good for $25.00 in trade at Woodhull & Martin Co., 163 East Front street, and $15.00 in gold.
Third Prize.
$35.00 Solid Gold Wrist Watch, bought from and on exhibition at Reliable Jewelry Shop, 245 West Front Street.

SPECIAL NOTICE:

The newspaper ballots, those cut from the paper, must be voted before 8 p. m., Saturday, April 3rd, to be counted. This is in accordance with the rules of the contest which states that subscription ballots only will be counted or accepted during the last two weeks of the contest.

Tomorrow another revised vote standing of candidates will be shown and there will also appear a standing showing the gains made by all candidates in the race for the Special Prizes. Only three days remain of the Special Contest, and candidates should put forth their best efforts between now and 10 p. m. Saturday, gathering in the subscriptions, upon which votes will be issued to count toward the above prizes.

The race for the extra prizes to be won April 3rd is reaching a feverish stage, and for the next three days the contestants will be as busy as bees gathering in all of the subscriptions that have been promised them.

All are striving for the honor of making the greatest gain during the period between March 17th at midnight and April 3rd at 10 p. m., for this means that the fortunate ones will be awarded the three prizes.

Some splendid gains have been made since March 17th, and during the coming three days more records will be broken for vote-getting, and all indications point toward a record-breaking vote for the extra prizes.

Whoever wins will have to poll an enormous vote, as many of the candidates are making an effort to win. And why not?

Trying for these extra prizes just doubles your chances of going across the continent, and you are not a loser even if you do not win it; you have the same chance for the regular district trip as you had before.

Are You Well Equipped?

It is essential that you start right. You have been assured of help by the contest manager of the Press. All that can be fairly given is at your command. A full supply of subscription blanks, cards and prospectuses can be had for the asking.

Have your pencil and notebook at hand and make your determination to win evident to those whom you get to help you. Your earnestness will be reflected in the greater activity of those whose help you seek and your success doubly assured.

If you follow these suggestions your vote will surprise both you and your friends shortly.

Every person, no matter where situated, may vote for his or her favorite candidate who may be entered from any district, simply by remitting to the Contest Department, the amount of a subscription to the Press, and the number of votes allowed the candidate will be credited to her.

For information of all concerned, we publish the subscription rate and schedule of votes:

Subscription Rate and Vote Schedule

		Votes Allowed
Daily Edition.	Price.	Old	New
Three months...	$ 1.25	135	270
Six months	2.50	310	620
One year	5.00	825	1,650
Two years	10.00	1,825	3,650

No subscription will be taken for a longer period than two years.

You can never tell by the noise or the whistle how fast the train is going, nor is the "honk-honk" of a buzz wagon in any way indicative of its speed. The smallest autos sometimes have the loudest horns.

Quiet Workers Make Showing.

The number of votes deposited by heretofore unheard-of candidates for free tours demonstrates that in the contest there are many quiet but persistent workers who have been secretly testing their strength and the support they would be liable to receive before coming out in the open and declaring themselves as trip aspirants. They have demonstrated that there is only one quality essential to success—persistency.

This is only a little sermon on the dangers of idleness, as no candidate has really become discouraged. Of course there is a certain alternate hope and fear which affects the candidates in every contest. Always the eternal question, "Will I win?"

Prizes on Exhibition.

The jewelry prizes are on display at the above stores, and every person is invited to look them over; they are beauties, both of them.

Mr. Vail is willing to repurchase the diamond ring offered as first prize from the winner any time within one year for $90 cash.

Candidates Must Hustle.

Only votes issued on paid-in-advance subscriptions turned in between midnight, Wednesday, March 17, and 10 p. m., April 3, will count for the special prizes. No ballots cut from the Press will count for these prizes, but will be accepted and will count for the tours.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

One of the largest and most pretentious vaudeville acts that has been presented in this city is "The Sierra Sunbeams," an idyl of the hills, which comes to Proctor's Theatre tomorrow as the feature of the bi-weekly change of bill. The production has a cast of ten people, headed by Pauline Barry, Edward Perry, Frank Richards and Nick Murphy, and an assisting chorus of six girls. It has electrical effects by the New York Stage Lighting Company, customs by Adler, of New York, and special scenery by Senor Velentini, the famous European artist. The offering is a tableaux musical comedy far more meritorious than many of those seen on Broadway.

Other numbers on the bill beginning tomorrow include a comedy sketch, "Joe's Vacation," presented by a high class company; Dunn and Stevens in a novelty comedy and singing skit with clever imitations of birds and animals; Maude D'Lora, the "posturing beauty" in an absolutely original contortion act, and Arthur Milton, the talking musician who is king of the one-string violin, playing classical and rag-time selections on this extremely difficult instrument.

The feature photo-play at Proctor's Theatre today is Jack London's famous story, "Burning Daylight." For tomorrow the management has announced "The Making of Bobby Burnit," the camera conception of George Randolph Chester's well-known series of tales.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

An impressive feature film production of unusual importance and power is the Famous Players-Paramount five part adaption of Wilson Barrett's supreme dramatic triumph, "The Sign of the Cross," which opens at the Plainfield Theatre, Friday of this week, for a run of two days.

The subject is an elaboration of the version of Wilson Barrett's wonderful popular drama which has stirred the emotion of every civilized race throughout the world for many years. Comparison at least as regards settings and scenic effects, must necessarily be instituted between this and other plays previously produced dealing with the same characters and period, and it must be truthfully said that the value of the present production is greatly enhanced by such a comparison, and while it loses nothing in its elaboration of detail, it has the advantage of a story which has firmly established itself in the favor of the public.

Today's attraction at the Plainfield Theatre, and also tomorrow, will be the superb photo-production of "Quo Vadis" from the novel of the same name. It has been brought to this city by Manager Shannon to be shown at popular prices for the first time since it was released and indications point to crowded houses at all performances.

The first episode of the new serial film, "The Black Box," was presented at the theatre yesterday and if the initial portion is any criterion, the succeeding episodes will be eagerly awaited by a highly expectant public.

of Nearly-All-Silk

Saying "nearly-all-silk" does not do these stockings justice. They are much better than this desciption of them implies. There is one thread of highly mercerized cotton to nine threads of pure silk.

This small proportion of cotton is twisted with the silk to add wearing quality to the stockings.

So, you see, "nearly-all-silk" is really an advantage in durability without losing any of the desirable beauty of silk.

The wholesalers are selling these stockings to stores which are selling them for $1 to $1.50 pair.

These which we are offering are the makers' surplus on hand, which we bought at a price that will enable us to offer them at 65c a pair.

Not only black and white, but the popular shoe top and evening shades will be found in the lot. There are even extra-width stockings in black and white, but not in all sizes.

CHAPTER IX.

I Discuss Matrimony

AT 12 the next day I climbed the tortuous stairs leading to the countess' apartments. She opened the door herself.

"I neglected to mention yesterday that I am expecting a houseful of guests in a day or two," I said after she had given me a very cordial greeting.

"Guests?" she cried in dismay. "Oh, dear; can't you put them off?"

"I have hopes that they won't be able to stand the workmen banging around all day," I confessed, somewhat guiltily.

"Women in the party?

"Two I believe. Both married and qualified to express opinions."

"They will be sure to nose me out," she said ruefully. "Women are dreadful nosers."

"Don't worry," I said. "We'll get a lot of new padlocks for the doors downstairs, and you'll be as safe as can be if you'll only keep quiet."

"But I don't see why I should be made to mope here all day and all night like a sick cat, holding my hand over Rosemary's mouth when she wants to cry and muzzling poor Jinko so that he"—

"My dear countess," I interrupted sternly, "you should not forget that these other guests of mine are invited here."

"But I was here first," she argued. "It is most annoying."

"I believe you said yesterday that you are in the habit of having your own way." She nodded her head. "Well, I am afraid you'll have to come down from your high horse—at least temporarily."

"Oh, I see! You—you mean to be very firm and domineering with me."

"You must try to see things from my point of"—

"Please don't say that!" she flared. "I'm so tired of hearing those words. For the last three years I've been commanded to see things from some one else's point of view, and I'm sick of the expression."

"For heaven's sake don't put me in the same boat with your husband!"

She regarded me somewhat frigidly for a moment longer, and then a slow, witching smile crept into her eyes.

"I shan't," she promised and laughed outright. "Do forgive me, Mr. Smart. I'll try to be nice and sensible, and I will be as still as a mouse all the time they're here. But you must promise to come up every day and give me the gossip."

We fell into a discussion of present and future needs; of ways and means for keeping my friends utterly in the dark concerning her presence in the abandoned east wing.

"I've been trying to recall all of the notable marriages we had in New York three years ago," said I, after she had most engagingly reduced me to a state of subjection in the matter of three or four moot questions that came up for settlement. "You don't seem to fit in with any of the international affairs I can bring to mind."

"You promised you wouldn't bother about that, Mr. Smart," she said severely.

"Of course you were married in New York?"

"In a very nice church just off Fifth avenue, if that will help you any," she said. "The usual crowd inside the church and the usual mob outside all fighting for a glimpse of me in my wedding shroud and for a chance to see a real Hungarian nobleman. It really was a very magnificent wedding, Mr. Smart." She seemed to be unduly proud of the spectacular sacrifice.

A knitted brow revealed the obfuscated condition of my brain. I was thinking very intently, not to say remotely.

"Don't you read the newspapers?" she cried impatiently. She actually resented by ignorance.

"Religiously," I said, stung to revolt. "But I make it a point never to read the criminal news."

"Criminal news?" she gasped. "What do you mean?"

"It is merely my way of saying that I put marriages of that character in the category of crime."

"Oh!" she cried, staring at me with unbelieving eyes.

"Every time a sweet, lovely American girl is delivered into the hands of a foreign bounder who happens to possess a title that needs fixing I call the transaction a crime. You did not love this pusillanimous count, nor did he care a hang for you. You were too young in the ways of the world to have any feeling for him, and he was too old to have any for you. The whole hateful business therefore resolved itself into a case of give and take—and he took everything. He took you and your father's millions and now you are both back where you began. Some one deliberately committed a crime, and as it wasn't you or the count—who levied his legitimate toll—it must have been the person who planned the conspiracy. I take it, of course, that the whole affair was arranged behind your back, so to speak."

Her face was quite pale. Her eyes did not leave mine during the long and crazy diatribe, of which I was already beginning to feel heartily ashamed, and there was a dark, ominous fire in them that should have warned me.

She arose from her chair. It seemed to me she was taller than before.

"If nothing else came to me out of this transaction," she said levelly, "at least a certain amount of dignity was acquired. Pray remember that I am no longer the unsophisticated girl you so graciously describe. I am a woman, Mr. Smart."

"True," said I, senselessly dogged, "a woman with the power to think for yourself. That is my point. If the same situation arose at your present age I fancy you'd be able to select a husband without assistance, and I venture to say you wouldn't pick up the first dissolute nobleman that came your way. No, my dear countess, you were not to blame. You thought, as your parents did, that marriage with a count would make a real countess of you. What rot! You are a simple, lovable American girl, and that's all there ever can be to it. To the end of your days you will be an American."

We were both standing now. She was still measuring me with somewhat incredulous eyes, rather more tolerant than resentful.

"Do you expect me to agree with you, Mr. Smart?" she asked.

"I do," said I promptly. "You of all people should be able to testify that my views are absolutely right."

"They are right," she said simply. "Still you are pretty much of a brute to insult me with them."

"I most sincerely crave your pardon if it isn't too late!" I cried, abject once more. (I don't know what gets into me once in awhile.)

"Please, please don't say anything more about it. I daresay you've done me a lot of good. Perhaps I shall see things a little more clearly. To be perfectly honest with you, I went into this marriage with my eyes wide open, but I was only one fool among many. Dozens of other girls in my set were crazy to marry him. I—I haven't told you that he is extremely good looking. And he was—was adorable in those days."

"Stranger things have happened than that you should patch up your difficulties and go back to live with your husband."

She uttered a little cry of revulsion.

"How dare you suggest such a thing! How dare you speak to me in that way! You—I ought to order you out of this room and never—never"—

My luminous smile checked the outburst.

"Splendid!" I cried. "You convince me that it can never happen."

"You spoke of him as my husband," she said, going back to my remark. "He is not my husband. Please be good enough to remember that."

"It will be easy, I assure you. May I therefore venture the hope that if you ever decide to marry again you'll give some deserving American a chance to make you his queen?"

"I shall never marry, Mr. Smart," she said with decision. "Never, never again will I get into a mess that is so hard to get out of. I can say this to you because I've heard you are a bachelor. You can't take offense."

"I fondly hope to die a bachelor," said I with humility.

"God bless you!" she cried, bursting into a merry laugh, and I knew that a truce had been declared for the time being at least. "And now let us talk sense. Have you carefully considered the consequences if you are found out, Mr. Smart?"

"Found out?"

"If you are caught shielding a fugitive from justice. It occurred to me last night that the safest thing for you to do, Mr. Smart, is to—to get out yourself." I stared. She went on hurriedly, "Can't you go away for a month's visit or"—

"Well, upon my soul!" I gasped. "Would you turn me out of my own house? This beats anything I've"—

"I was only thinking of your peace of mind and your—your safety," she cried unhappily. "Truly, truly I was."

"Well, I prefer to stay here and do what little I can to shield you and Rosemary," said I sullenly.

"I'll not say anything horrid again, Mr. Smart," she said quite meekly. (I take this occasion to repeat that I've never seen any one in all my life so pretty as she.) Her moist red lip trembled slightly, like a censured child's.

With an abrupt change of manner she began to pace the floor, distractedly beating her clinched hands against her bosom. Twice I heard her murmur, "Oh, God!"

This startling exposition of feeling gave me a most uncanny shock.

And now I was witness to the pain she suffered; now I heard her cry out against the husband that had hurt her so pitilessly. I turned my head away, vastly moved. Presently she moved over to the window. A covert glance revealed her standing there, looking not down at the Danube that seemed so far away, but up at the blue sky that seemed so near.

The sound of dry, suppressed sobs came to my ears. It was too much for me. I stealthily quit my position by the mantelpiece and tiptoed toward the door, bent on leaving her alone. Halfway there I hesitated, stopped and then deliberately returned to the fireplace, where I noisily shuffled a fresh supply of coals into the grate. It would be heartless, even unmannerly, to leave her without letting her know that I was heartily ashamed of myself and completely in sympathy with her. Wisely, however, I resolved to let her have her cry out. Some one a great deal more farseeing than I let the world into a most important secret when he advised man to take that course when in doubt.

For a long while I waited for her to regain control of herself, rather dreading the apology she would feel called upon to make for her abrupt reversion to the first principles of her sex. The sobs ceased entirely. I experienced the sharp joy of relaxation. Her dainty lace handkerchief found employment. First she would dab it cautiously in one eye, then the other, after which she would scrutinize its crumpled surface with most extraordinary interest. At least a dozen times she repeated this puzzling operation. What in the world was she looking for? To this day that strange, sly peeking on her part remains a mystery to me.

She turned swiftly upon me and beckoned with her little forefinger. Greatly concerned, I sprang toward her. Was she preparing to swoon? What in heaven's name was I to do if she took it into her pretty head to do such a thing as that?

"Look!" she cried, pointing upward through the window. "Isn't she lovely?"

I stopped short in my tracks and stared at her in blank amazement. What a stupefying creature she was!

She beckoned again impatiently. I obeyed with alacrity. Obtaining a rather clear view of her eyes, I was considerably surprised to find no trace of departed tears. Her cheek was as smooth and creamy white as it had been before the deluge. Her eyelids were dry and orderly, and her nose had not been blown once to my recollection. Truly, it was a marvelous recovery. I still wonder.

The cause of her excitement was visible at a glance. A trim nursemaid stood in the small gallery which circled the top of the turret, just above and to the right of us. She held in her arms the pink hooded, pink coated Rosemary, made snug against the chill winds of her lofty parade ground.

Catching the nurse's eye, she signaled for her to bring the child down to us. Rosemary took to me at once. A most embarrassing thing happened. On seeing me she held out her chubby arms and shouted "da-da!" at the top of her infantile lungs.

I flushed, and the countess shrieked with laughter. It wouldn't have been so bad if the nurse had known her place. If there is one thing in this world that I hate with fervor it is an ill mannered, poorly trained servant. A grinning nursemaid is the worst of all.

"Ha, ha!" I laughed bravely. "She—she evidently thinks I look like the count. He is very handsome, you say."

"Oh, that isn't it!" cried the countess, taking Rosemary in her arms and directing me to a spot on her rosy cheek. "Kiss right there, Mr. Smart. There! Wasn't it a nice kiss, honey bunch? If you are a very, very nice little girl the kind gentleman will kiss you on the other cheek some day. She calls every man she meets da-da," explained the radiant young mother.

"Oh," said I, rather crestfallen.

"Would you like to hold her, Mr. Smart? She's such a darling to hold."

"No—no, thank you," I cried, backing off.

"Oh, you will come to it, never fear," she said gayly as she restored Rosemary to the nurse's arms. "Won't he, Blake?"

"He will, my lady," said Blake with conviction. I noticed this time that Blake's smile wasn't half bad.

At dinner that evening I asked Poopendyke point blank if he could call to mind a marriage in New York society that might fit the principals in this puzzling case.

"I'm sorry, sir, but but I can't do it. I promised her this morning I wouldn't let it be dragged out of me with redhot tongs."

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Hello! I'm glad to see you. I just got in. Now we'll have a jolly evening." Dr. Ellson shook hands cordially with the Mortons and Parsons. "This is the right sort of neighborliness. I'm suffering for a game of cards."

"Anna!" he called up the stairs, "you're wanted down here."

The card tables were drawn out. "What shall we play?" asked the host.

"Anything but whist," said Mrs. Parsons. "I've too much to say to start in on that game. You see Roger threatens to banish me as soon as the weather gets hot, and——"

"Oh, Jo! It would take more than a game of whist to stop your talking," laughed Mr. Parsons. "Such an unnatural hush will fall on the place when she's gone. I'm blest if I know what I am to do. You must all receive me into your houses or I'll never be able to stand it."

"We'll do that all right."

"Shall we make the game pedro?" asked the doctor.

"You see, Roger threatens to send me away when the weather gets hot," Mrs. Parsons was saying when Mrs. Ellson entered.

"What's this about temporary widowers?" she asked, after the greetings had been said.

"I've been trying to get Anna to go home on a visit, she suffered so with the heat last summer, but she will not hear of it," said the doctor.

"No, the doctor is too anxious. I don't believe in giving husbands vacations; they deteriorate when not under discipline, and then you must begin all over again with their education. It wastes too much time. Don't you think so?" She turned to Mrs. Morton.

"Oh, I could not be happy away from Dick, no matter how perfect the weather," said Nell quietly.

"You are wise to stay. He would have too good a time if you left him," said Mrs. Ellson, dealing cards deliberately and looking steadily at Dick. "If you went you would surely want to take Miss Rudolph with you."

"What's this? What's this?" said Parsons, pricking up his ears.

"Oh, haven't you noticed now devoted these dear people are? You have only to see the soulful glances the young lady casts upon him to understand his danger." Mrs. Ellson's glance took in Nell's mounting color.

"I hope you are not troubled about my perilous situation," said Dick, looking at his cards with a half smile on his lips. "I have a charm that protects me from all such evil," and he smiled at Nell.

"So you would have us believe; but take my word for it, Mrs. Morton, they bear watching, these men."

"Come, Anna, close the closet door. Don't display the family skeletons to the neighbors," said the doctor in a stage whisper.

"Doctors usually have a liberal supply of skeletons; it's rather in their line, eh, Doc?" Parsons grinned at him across the table.

"Oh, surely, but I object to having them at the feast, that's all."

"It's rather a point of village etiquet to keep the skeletons well aired, isn't it?" suggested Dick, chuckling over his hand.

"You see, he's fresh from the city and is afraid we pioneers will forget the fact," chaffed the host.

"Yes, I'm so fresh from the city that I feel it an infringement of my right to the pursuit of happiness to have my every act reported on, properly labeled with an imaginary motive supposed to fit it, and filed for future reference," said Dick.

"Don't be hard on the ladies," said the doctor, looking at his wife. "How would they occupy their time if they were not tabulating the fact that A spoke to Mrs. B at ten-fifteen, and tipped his hat to Miss C at fifteen minutes past the hour?"

"These ladies would be much wiser if they hid their heads in the sand and announced there was nothing to see." There was a scornful quiver of Mrs. Ellson's nostrils as she covered her husband's card and took the trick.

"What people object to is diseased optics that see double," retorted the doctor.

"Well, I shall be perfectly easy in my mind over my future happiness while I am gone this summer, but I would have a much larger share of present happiness if I could stay here," said Mrs. Parsons, and the subject was dropped.

Household Hints

UP-TO-DATE RECIPES

Sham Omelet—Break five salted crackers into two good cups of milk; soak well, then cook and, when boiling, stir in two beaten eggs, stirring until well folded into milk. Then let stand, cooking just a little, and fold over again. Thus perhaps two or three times. (Don't forget salt and pepper to taste.) Serve on buttered toast.

Rutabagas With Lamb—Rutabagas are plentiful now and sell at one cent a pound; they weigh from one to six pounds each. Take two pounds of lamb, wash and put to boil with water to cover. After a few minutes of boiling skim and add salt to taste. Now peel and cut the rutabagas into pieces half inch wide, one inch long, and put in with lamb; put over slow fire till both are well done. There should be only a little gravy left.

Herring Salad—Boil eight large potatoes, let cool, cut in dice. Cut up two onions fine, two hard-boiled eggs, four large or six small sour pickles, six sour apples in dices. Have six salted herring. Let herring lie in water over night, then pick bones out and cut fish in small pieces. Dressing: One teaspoon salt, one tablespoon sugar, one-half cup melted butter, one-half dessertspoon pepper, vinegar to taste. Mix together and pour over all.

Apple Pudding—For a very tasty apple pudding take a deep dish, butter it generously and cover the bottom with a layer of peeled and sliced apples, sprinkle liberally with sugar and cinnamon and dot with bits of butter. Put in another layer of apples and seasoning and continue until dish is full. Cover with piecrust and bake until the apples are soft and the pastry is browned. Eaten hot with good cream it is delicious.

UP-TO-DATE RECIPES

Egg Patties—Beat eggs light and add crushed cracker crumbs till it forms a thick paste, then thin with a little milk. Season with finely cut onion, pepper and salt. Fry in butter, like pancakes. Very good and something different.

Russian Fish Pie—Cut fish from bones, cut into pieces half-inch square, add one chopped egg (hard-boiled), teaspoon parsley, one tablespoon white sauce, salt, pepper and lemon juice to taste. Mix two cups flour with one-half teaspoon salt, one teaspoon baking powder. Rub in one-half cup lard and add gradually cold water enough to make a stiff paste. Roll out in square of nine or ten inches. Place fish in center, fold each corner of pastry into center, so as to form an envelope. Brush top with beaten egg. Place in buttered pan. Bake forty minutes in moderate oven. A white sauce may be served if desired.

"Canadian Snow" Pudding—Thicken one pint boiling water with three tablespoons cornstarch, a little salt, one tablespoon sugar. Beat whites of two eggs stiff and stir in while hot; add two drops vanilla flavoring. Set away to get cold. Serve with sauce made with milk thickened with the yolks of two eggs, two tablespoons cornstarch, pinch of salt, plenty of sugar and two drops of pineapple flavoring.

Crispettes—Beat two eggs, add one cup brown sugar sifted with six teaspoons flour and one-eighth teaspoon salt. Beat. Add one cup chopped nuts. Drop by teaspoonfuls about three inches apart on greased paper. Bake in hot oven.

Burnt Sugar Cake — One cup granulated sugar; burn until very black, then add one-half cup cold water slowly. Cook until you have a thick syrup; enough for five or six cakes. Then take 1½ cups granulated sugar, sifted; half cup butter, yolks two eggs, one cup cold water, two cups flour. Beat thoroughly, add three or four teaspoons syrup or enough to make a light brown, one teaspoon vanilla, two-thirds cup flour, two teaspoons baking powder, and well-beaten whites of two eggs. Use any good icing.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

What Are You Like?

What animal are you most like?
Just stop and think of it;
Are you a child whom no one likes
To have around a bit?
And is your temper very quick,
Do you speak stingingly?
If so, I'd say that you are like
A surly Bumble-Bee.

OR

It may be you're the kind of child
That chatters all day through,
Till all your family and your friends
Are tired of hearing you.
If when they beg you to be still,
You keep on talking, I
Would say that you are very like
The chattering Magpie.

RUNAWAY JUNE

BY GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER AND LILLIAN CHESTER

Copyright, 1915, by Serial Publication Corporation

CHAPTER III

DOWN at the dock Ned Warner's detectives appeared, and Bouncer, picking up the trail at the landing, ran excitedly up to the street at the point where June and Bennett Durban had taken the taxi. Bouncer began to go round and round in widening circles, whining, his nose close to the ground. The trail was lost, as they had known that trail would be, and from here the detectives scattered, seeking everywhere in their own methods for a clew to the whereabouts of the runaway bride. As they left the vicinity a rowboat pulled slowly up to the dock, dragging behind it a steam yawl with frosty nib, on its stovepipe, and a very much begrimed lady with a long nose and high arched brows landed and went away without a word, pausing only to cast a look of withering scorn at the well known and justly famous private detective, Bill Wolf. That short, thick individual, with much puffing exertion, scrambled up and renewed the smudge on his face with a rotary motion of his sleeve and swore profusely; then he, too, stomped away.

Blye and Edwards and Cunningham in a luxurious limousine stopped at a house, where they were ushered into a gay parlor. A large blond woman came in to greet the callers, and to her Blye showed the picture in the watch. She laughed and nodded her head.

"It will be the easiest thing in the world from now on, Bennett," she informed him and showed him the box at the side of the big easel.

He stared at her in surprise.

"Good scheme," he granted, looking down at the brushes, and then he laughed. "However, I suppose I'll have them scattered all over the place again by tomorrow."

"Oh, no, Bennett," she returned. "I'd rather you'd keep them here, please. I don't like my house all cluttered up."

"I don't believe I can paint if I don't have to find my favorite brush behind something or other," he confessed. "Why, where's my good old chaise lounge?"

"I had it taken out. It was so very disreputable," Mrs. Durban was studying the room with haughty severity. "I want my house to represent me."

The young butler came in, dragging a tall stepladder.

"What are you going to do, Oscar?" inquired Durban sharply.

"I am to remove these tapestries, sir," he reported, setting his ladder up by the side of one of them.

"The dickens you are!" exclaimed Durban in surprise. "Get out!"

"It was madam's orders, sir."

"Oh!" Durban looked at his wife slowly.

"You may take them down, Oscar," said Mrs. Durban quietly, and both the artist and his wife were silent while the tapestries were removed.

"Vivi, I don't understand," puzzled her husband. "I don't see why you'd remove important things without consulting me." And he glanced at June, who had returned to the house to resume her nap. Her eyes were closed, although she was not sleeping.

The woman's chin went up.

"Bennett, dear, this is my house."

"Oh, yes, yes, to be sure!" He walked very quietly back to his big canvas and studied it for a long time without seeing it at all.

June was not only shocked, but filled with compassion. She understood as the man could not the reason for the astounding change in the woman. The sudden acquisition of property had transformed her entire nature, had given her a dizzy haughtiness, had twisted her view until she placed an utterly false valuation upon herself and upon everything around her. Money again! Always money!

Mrs. Durban's attitude had been made in her by centuries of feminine submission. The mothers who had gone before had built this warped and distorted ego. In all the ages gone the man had owned all and the woman nothing. She had been the creature of his fancy, the slave of his whim, the recipient of his bounty.

Officer Dowd walked into the police station just as the desk sergeant with the sausage shaped red mustache gave way to one with a blue eye and a blue chin, and the new incumbent greeted Officer Dowd with effusive cordiality.

"What's bringing you into my district? Or are you off duty?"

"Dan, you got a girl here by the name of Rose Hesper that claims to know me, and I just dropped in to mug her."

"You can look them all over if you've time," granted the sergeant, and Dowd walked back into the cell room. "Rose Hesper's in cell 5."

"Why, hello, Marie!" exclaimed Dowd. "What you in for?"

Marie looked up with a jerk.

"There's a little friend of mine here, too," she explained. "It was all a mistake. I'm in an awful hurry."

"Wait a minute." And Officer Dowd stalked out to the desk. "Well, Dan, you got the wrong parties," he announced. "What's against my friend, Rose Hesper?"

"Copping a motorboat last night," said the sergeant, looking at the blotter.

"Wrong party," returned Dowd promptly. "I was with Rose Hesper myself last night, her and her little friend, and we didn't leave the cafe till nearly daybreak."

The sergeant made an entry on the blotter.

"I'll tell that dock watchman it's an alibi."

"Will he stand for it?" Dowd asked.

"If he don't we'll push him off the dock," calmly stated the sergeant. "Joe, bring out 5 and 17."

"Where's your little friend?" asked Officer Dowd, waiting and glancing past a dejected looking little chauffeur with a tiny mustache who came through the cell room door.

"That's him," said Marie introduced Henri.

The big policeman and the little chauffeur glared at each other a moment, while the cheek bones of Marie grew red with pleasure.

Faint, Dazed, Scarce Knowing What She Did, June Slipped Out of the House.

Henri looked about him wistfully.

"I am happy that I have met you, M. Dowd." He bowed politely. "Now we go, Mlle. Marie."

Marie displayed her friendly smile to Henri and then to Officer Dowd.

"Won't you come with us?" she inquired.

"You'll come with me!" he blurted and grabbed her by the arm.

Bill Wolf called up Honoria Blye.

"I've him!" he triumphantly yelled. "Say, listen! I just done a fine piece of work. I sleuthed the other party's detectives. They got the girl's dog, and they've spotted your husband's limousine. Join me in front of the Blakely building and I'll lead you to them."

At the same moment Ned's detectives were telephoning the same information to the anxious group in the Warner apartments.

VOTES FOR WOMEN

Conducted by the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

Suffrage Booming.

During the past three weeks the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association has organized eighteen new branches, an average of one a day. The March meeting of the executive board of this association, held in Elizabeth on the 26th, was attended by sixty-eight delegates, representing forty-four cities and towns in eleven counties, and two hundred and sixty women were present at the afternoon conference which followed the business meeting. There are now almost two hundred suffrage organizations in the State, and by the first of June there will be at least a working committee in every town in the State.

Liquor Versus Church Interests.

The following resolution passed by the Conference of the Methodist church held in Atlantic City three weeks ago speaks for itself:

"Whereas, The Legislature of our State has passed a resolution submitting the question of an equal suffrage amendment to the State Constitution to be voted upon next September; and,

"Whereas, The New Jersey Liquor Dealers Protective Association has passed a resolution against woman suffrage, and pledged its members to do their utmost to defeat the proposed amendment, assigning no reason therefor;

"Resolved, By the New Jersey Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, that we hereby pledge our hearty and active support to the equal suffrage amendment proposition, and we will co-operate with these elect women in every way practicable.

"John Handley,
"Pennington Corson,
"J. Ward Gamble."

Contradictory Antis.

Speaking at a meeting in Unity church, Montclair, on Sunday, March 14, Mrs. G. D. Goodwin argued that women were too fine and spiritual to be allowed to come in contact with political "mire," while Miss Minnie Bronson argued that women were so buyable and debased that politics, bad enough now when only men voted, would "become abominable if women got the vote." You can take your choice, but you cannot accept both these statements.

What Will the Antis Do About This?

One of the most frequently repeated statements made in New Jersey by various anti-suffrage speakers has been that when women get the vote they will lose their dower rights. Why this claim was made no Suffragist ever understood, because this has not happened in equal States in the West, and it does not seem likely that any class of voters will be likely to have less protection under the law than a similar class of non-voters; but the Antis have paid no attention to arguments refuting the statement. Now Senator Rathbun, of Morris county, probably the most determined Anti in the New Jersey Senate, has introduced a bill which has passed both houses of the Legislature and been signed by the Governor, and will become law July 4, unless it is repealed in the meantime, reading, "The estates and interests of dower and right of dower and courtesy be and the same are abolished hereby." Senator Rathbun confidently predicts that the Suffragists are going to be defeated in the fall, so it is not from women voters that he designs to take the right of dower.

The Elizabeth Journal Sums Up the Case.

On March 27 the Elizabeth Daily Journal published the following editorial:

"The franchise and the 'right of franchise' does not depend upon the individual's ability to bear arms. If so, hundreds and thousands of men who vote would at once be disfranchised, for thousands are not fit, in any sense of the word, to bear arms.

"The franchise does not depend upon ownership of taxable property; if so, thousands of men would be disfranchised at once and thousands of women would be given the power to vote.

"The franchise does not depend upon the individual's ability to serve upon juries; if so, thousands would be disfranchised, for thousands now voters are not capable and are not allowed to sit upon juries.

"The franchise does not depend upon the individual's ability to serve in elective or appointive positions; for thousands who vote are not capable of being elevated to public office. The franchise does not depend upon the capacity or inclination of the individual to become interested in public affairs, for thousands who have the right do not have even enough interest in public affairs to vote. At the same time, thousands of intelligent, capable, deeply-interested women cannot vote. The franchise does not depend upon the literacy test; for thousands are allowed to vote who cannot even write their names in the poll books. At the same time, there are thousands of trained and highly educated women who are denied the ballot.

"The franchise or the right of franchise does not depend upon position as head of a family, the unit of society and of government; for thousands vote who are not married, and there are thousands of vagabonds registered on poll lists who are dependent upon society. At the same time there are thousands of women whom circumstances have put at the heads of families, yet they are denied the privilege. The franchise and the right of franchise should not depend upon sex, unless it is understood that democracy depends upon sex. This is a government of the people, by the people and for the people. It is not presumed that only males are 'people'—women 'things'.

"It is quite time that the voters and all others should begin to ask: Upon what in this civilized country does the 'right of franchise' depend? Is franchise a common privilege or a special privilege? This country is supposed to frown upon 'special privileges' of any kind whatsoever."

NEWS AND VIEWS

Conducted by THE W. C. T. U.

Three big industrial plants of Philadelphia, Pa., the Midvale Steel Works, Link Belt Company, and the George W. Blabon Company, manufacturers of oilcloth, have taken a decided stand against the sale of liquor near their works. This attitude was made known when these concerns opposed the granting of a license to a saloonkeeper who wishes to establish his business in the neighborhood. Counsel for the companies pointed out that where thousands of men are employed in occupations involving great risk, it is an absolute necessity for them to be in perfect command of their mental faculties if accidents are to be avoided. "It requires the consumption of a very small quantity of alcohol," counsel informed the court, "to deprive a workman of this perfect self-control and thereby imperils his life. For this reason these three establishments are strongly opposed to temptation being placed in the path of their men near the works."

In the case of another saloonkeeper, who sought a transfer of his business to a temperance community because his property was in line with the parkway and had been condemned by the city, the president of the Law and Order Society declared. "Philadelphia is big enough and its treasury rich enough to reimburse in dollars and cents saloonkeepers who are forced out of business, but they should not be reimbursed at the expense of the morals of another section of the community."

With tears streaming down his face, Senator Samuel A. Jones, of Chenango, broke down and left the assembly chamber of the New York Legislature as Mrs. Ella A. Boole, vice-president-at-large of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and president of the New York Woman's Christian Temperance Union, pleaded with the members of the Senate and Assembly excise committees to report the Wilson bill for Statewide prohibition.

"On behalf of the women of the State who are the ones who suffer," said Mrs. Boole, "I plead with you to report this bill which would remove the preventable cause of intemperance, insanity and crime. On behalf of the women and girls, I plead, and on behalf of the children yet unborn, who may be brought into the world with a heritage of unsound bodies, I plead with you."

Senator Jones frequently wiped tears from his eyes as Mrs. Boole spoke, and at last left the hearing room.

The bill as introduced would make Statewide prohibition mandatory, but Assemblyman Hamilton Fish, Jr., of Putnam county, announced his intention of introducing an amendment which would provide for a referendum to the people on the question.

Mrs. Boole appeared as a representative of the Allied Forces for Civic and Moral Betterment. Rev. William Milton Hess, former professor of philosophy in Yale University, spoke for the measure, urging "For God's sake and the men's sake, wipe out that which is making all much of the work of the churches and schools."

Rev. Father George T. Zurcher, of Buffalo, editor of "Catholic and Prohibition," declared that the foreign element in the State was largely in favor of the bill. He quoted the words of Pope Pius, uttered shortly before his death, "Let Catholics everywhere come to the forefront in the fight for prohibition." "America sober will be invincible forever," declared Father Zurcher, "but America half drunk will be in constant danger from within and from without."

Nathan H. Very, master of the State grange, spoke for the bill on behalf of the grange, and Gordon H. Paine, representing the Good Templars of the State, read a letter from Governor Capper of Kansas telling of the benefits of prohibition.

Mrs. Boole presented a petition signed by 11,474 voters favoring the bill, and also various resolutions, and a telegram from Buffalo saying that the bill had been endorsed at a ministers' meeting representing forty churches.

"They have said that if prohibition comes, the laboring men would object," said Mrs. Boole. "I wonder how the wives feel. There are many women starving in New York because their husbands lost their jobs through drink and can't get another. There are many children going breakfastless to school because the money that ought to go for food goes for liquor. The argument has been advanced that real estate would depreciate under prohibition. The boyhood and the girlhood of the State and its homes are worth far more than the real estate. If the 28,000 saloons in New York are kept open this year, somebody's boy is going to be ruined. There is no financial question in the State that can compare in importance with this great liquor problem."

Mrs. Van Valkenburgh presented resolutions in favor of the bill from the Women's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal church of Gloversville. Neal Dow Cranmer, of Elmira, spoke for the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association; John W. Cummings, of Brooklyn, for the Brooklyn Sundayschool Union board of managers; Dr. C. O. Sahlor, of Kingston, for the Ulster County Civic League and J. F. Burke for the Anti-Saloon League.

William H. Hirsch, representing the New York State Brewers' Association, in rebuttal declared that true temperance is not secured by law but by appeal to brains and conscience.

The assembly chamber was thronged with advocates and opponents of the bill.

FOR THE SUMMER WARDROBE.

Shadow lace loses none of its popularity and is especially appropriate for evening gowns which seem not to require quite the degree of formality of those worn in the winter season. A simple evening frock of pink crepe de chine and shadow lace is shown here. The bodice is a combination of the two, a fichu effect of the lace forming the upper portion together with the sleeves and passing beneath the lower blouse portion which is cut as a girdle at the front. Here it is held with small chiffon roses. A wide pointed tunic—the points weighted with heavy pearl tassels adds stability to the rather frivolous skirt of ruffled shadow lace.

Easter In Various Lands

IN nearly all Christian countries the recurrence of Easter has been celebrated with various ceremonies and popular sports and observances.

In the Netherlands, or Holland, a country famed for its flowers, especially tulips, blossoms play a large part in the day's celebration. For days before the holiday the Dutch canals bear on their placid surfaces many barges laden high with fragrant and showy masses of bloom.

Some of the Easter customs in the various countries are curious indeed. In the north of England you may still hear the old rime:

Tid, mid and misera,
Carling, palm and Pasch egg day.

The first line refers to Christmas, the Epiphany and Lent. Carlings are steeped peas fried in butter, with pepper and salt, and eaten on midlent or mothering Sunday, as the fourth Sunday in Lent is sometimes called. Palm Sunday immediately precedes Passion week and is so called from the branches of palm trees strewn in our Saviour's path at the time of his triumphal entry into Jerusalem.

Pasch eggs are Easter eggs boiled so hard that you can play at ball with them, dyed with various colors and often having inscriptions or landscapes traced upon them.

Easter eggs symbolize the resurrection. As one old writer says, "As the bird imprisoned within the shell comes to life and liberty at the appointed time, so did our Saviour on Easter morning burst the gates of the grave." The eggs were at first dyed scarlet, in memory of the blood of Christ shed upon the cross.

A LEGEND OF EASTER.

The story runs that when Adam felt death approach he called his son Seth to his side and bade him ask the archangel, the keeper of the garden, for a balsam that should save him from death.

"The time of pardon is not yet come," said the archangel. "Four thousand years must pass. But as a token that his future pardon is assured the wood whereon redemption shall be won shall grow from Adam's tomb."

He then gave three seeds to Seth and bade him place them in his father's mouth when he died. Adam died three days later. Seth obeyed the directions of the archangel, and the place of his father's sepulcher was Golgotha, where in course of time three trees grew from the seeds. One was a cedar, another a cypress and the third a pine. It was with a bough from one of these trees that Moses performed his miracles in Egypt, brought water out of the rock and healed those whom the serpents had bitten in the wilderness.

After a time the three trees incorporated themselves with each other and became a single tree, beneath which David sat when he bewailed his sins. In the days of Solomon the tree had become the finest of all trees, so was cut down to assist in the building of the temple. But magic seemed to have taken possession of the wood, for nothing which it was wanted to serve for would answer until at last Solomon cast the tree over Cedron so that all might trample on it as they crossed the brook.

There it was discovered by the queen of Sheba, and she, recognizing its virtue, had it raised. It was then buried, but the spot where it lay became the pool of Bethseda and healed all the sick who flocked to it. When the time of the crucifixion drew near the beam of wood rose to the surface and was brought out of the water, and when the executioners sought for a beam for the cross they discovered this and found that it fitted their purpose. So the prophecy was fulfilled.

THIS is only the Easter bunny.
Big and soft and white,
With little pink nose, so funny.
And little stub tail upright.

He's out on his annual errand.
Locating nests today,
Soon to be filled with eggs,
Brilliantly colored and gay.

Don't forget to have yours ready.
For on his nightly round
He hippety hops in a hurry.
And late ones won't be found.

EASTER'S MESSAGE.

It Teaches Us to Rise Anew From Our Selfishness and Sin.

This, to my mind, is the message of the Eastertide:

We may interpret the resurrection in a dozen different ways; we may believe or not believe that this miracle took place as reported in the gospels. But that Jesus was never slain by the soldiers of Pontius Pilate, but lives to rally his disciples after the agony and terror of Golgotha, to capture Paul and lead him over stormy seas and desert wastes for the preaching of his word, to call "the glorious company of the apostles, the goodly fellowship of the prophets, the noble army of the martyrs," in all ages and places into the service of his kingdom; to speak to us today as he has "spoken of old time unto the fathers" and to "challenge us to live and die for him and his great cause of righteousness"—all this is as certain as that his body was nailed to the cross of Calvary. After the crucifixion, as before, Jesus was alive. He has been alive in every age, even the darkest, that has succeeded upon the hour of this mortal agony, and he is alive today more truly and wonderfully than he has ever been before in human history. Of this we can be sure!

But what about ourselves? Are we also alive—alive as the eleven were alive when they reassembled in Jerusalem and gave themselves anew to the kingdom of God on earth? Have we arisen from our selfishness, cowardice and sin to meet the risen Christ and pledge our hearts to his, or are we dead, as dead as Judas when the first Easter dawned upon the world? This is the question which this latest Easter puts to us. It is not so much the resurrection of Jesus as of ourselves which need concern us.—Rev. John Haynes Holmes, New York City.

VICTOR HUGO'S EASTER HOPE.

I feel in myself the future life. I am like a forest once cut down—the new shoots are stronger and livelier than ever. I am rising, I know, toward the sky. The sunshine is on my head. The earth gives me its generous sap, but heaven lights me with reflection of unknown worlds.

You say the soul is nothing but the resultant of the bodily powers. Why, then, is my soul more luminous when my bodily powers be in to fail? Winter is on my head, but eternal spring is in my heart. There I breathe at this hour the fragrance of the lilacs, the violets and the roses as at twenty years.

When I go down to the grave I can say, like so many others, "I have finished my day's work." But I cannot say, "I have finished my life." My day's work will begin the next morning. The tomb is not a blind alley; it is a thoroughfare. It closes on the twilight; it opens with the dawn.

In the Tyrol.

In the Tyrol the Easter festival is one of great ceremony. During the Easter holidays bands of musicians visit every valley, singing beautiful hymns to the accompaniment of their instruments as they pass along, men, women and children joining in the chorus, bearing lighted torches of pine wood.
